ARMY GAME IRKS CLC

OTTAWA (CP)—The defence department said Thursday it did not intend to insult anybody when a riot-control exercise was held in the Maritimes last month involving imaginary workers.

A spokesman said militia units were conducting an exercise under the military role of being ready to provide aid to the civil power in cases of emergency.

"There was no intention to insult or upset anybody."

Joe Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, protested in a letter to Prime Minster Trudeau Wednesday that the exercise was repugnant and disgusting.

Two field squadrons from Camp Gagetown, N.B., were depicted as "striking or dissident workers from the fictitious Andrewville Aviation Company," Morris said.

He said there is no excuse for riot control exercises to select workers as their target.

Cities to Share In B.C. Gas Plan

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Premier Barrett will recommend to Ottawa a doubling of the export price of natural gas and a three-way revenue sharing scheme to give B.C. municipalities, the provincial and federal governments each an additional $60 million in yearly revenues.

B.C.'s proposal for ending the current dispute with the federal government over natural gas taxation was announced today at a news conference broadcast throughout the province.

It would see the price of gas to U.S. customers increase from $1 to $1.93 per thousand cubic feet with a total increase in revenues of $180 million.

A one-third share of those revenues would double the amount of money the provincial government grants municipalities each year.

Barrett also said those additional revenues, which are over and above the $100 million in gas revenue B.C. is expected to collect this year, would give Ottawa more cash than it would receive under the new federal budget proposal for gas taxation.

The premier will take his solution to Ottawa next week when he will meet federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald and acting prime minister C. M. Drury.

Barrett called his proposal "a simple one" which will not involve any increase in the domestic price of gas but set a fair export price for B.C.'s natural resource.

All B.C. municipalities would share in the $60 portion of new gas revenues and Barrett said the Union of B.C. Municipalities would be asked to help in working out an appropriate sharing formula.

The premier said it would be the first time municipalities received a direct share of new provincial revenues. This year municipalities received a total of $66.2 million in per capita grants from the province.

American importers have been warned of possible increases in gas prices, said Barrett, and an increase of $1.93 per thousand cubic feet would only bring B.C. gas prices in line with the price of gas produced in the U.S.

The B.C. scheme would involve an immediate increase in export prices of $1.35 and an increase by the end of 1975 to its real market value which now stands at $1.93.

But Barrett said he could not predict what Ottawa's reaction to the B.C. scheme will be.

He said he assumed Ottawa's budget proposal was not motivated "by politics" but a desire to gain more money for federal coffers, and B.C.'s plan "would produce three or four times more new revenues for the federal government" than Ottawa's own proposal.

Sources in Ottawa say, however, it remains highly doubtful the federal government will accept the B.C. proposal.

The provision to which B.C. takes such strenuous objection was first proposed in the defeated May 6, 1974 budget and then re-instated in the new budget brought down by Finance Minister John Turner on Nov. 18.

The federal finance department views the "fair market value" provision that would apply to B.C. gas as a "companion piece" to the nondeductibility provision that applies to Alberta oil.

HEROIN RAID NABS 4

VANCOUVER (CP) — A raid by the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit Thursday seized more than six pounds of heroin worth an estimated $4 million in street sales and arrested four suspects.

It was the second major raid within two months. In November, eight persons were arrested, breaking up what was believed to be Vancouver - Vancouver Island heroin ring.

Meanwhile the head of the RCMP in B.C. Edwin Willis said in Victoria the recent high-level drug arrests in the province have stemmed the flow of drugs in B.C. and offered as proof an increasing number of break-ins since the arrests.

WILL THE REAL FIRST LADY . . .

Times News Services

OTTAWA—When is a First Lady not a First Lady? When she stands in line to buy her own plane tickets, of course.

That's what Mme. Gaby Leger, wife of the governor-general—the Queen's representative in Canada and therefore titular head of state—does.

Officially Canada's First Lady, Mme. Leger confirmed Thursday that she does not possess a free-flight pass such as the one issued to Margaret Trudeau.

The pass issued Margaret was explained by one airline official as "a courtesy to Canada's first lady."

City Panic in Dud Bomb Threat

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

A Montreal man in his late 20s appeared in Victoria provincial court today charged with extortion in the wake of the city's biggest bomb scare at dusk Thursday.

Gilles Paul Proulx, a recent arrival to Victoria, is charged with inducing a local bank manager "by threat to pay the sum of $100,000" and was remanded to Tuesday for plea.

The charge was laid by police during a series of tension-filled events sparked by a report that a bomb had been delivered to the Toronto Dominion Bank branch at Douglas and Fort by an "unwitting courier."

The city's rush-hour bedlam was cloaked in icy silence around the site for two hours. Downtown traffic was redirected, pedestrians cordoned off, buildings evacuated and both major hospitals were on standby emergency alert.

McBRIDE

Police report today that they are satisfied the package did not contain a live bomb.

For bank manager Edgar McBride the experience was real. It started about 2:30 p.m. when "a man between 40 and 45 years old walked into the bank and delivered a letter and a brown briefcase to the front counter."

The man—who police said was entirely innocent and duped into his role—indicated to a bank clerk both items were to be delivered to the bank manager's office at the rear of the branch office.

"It's not usual, we don't get many requests like that," said McBride today after the tension had cleared.

"When the clerk questioned the man she was told the briefcase contained 'IBM cards for Mr. McBride'."

The items were delivered to McBride by an accounting officer.

"I opened the letter. It contained (hand-printed) instructions that told me where the key was, how to open the briefcase and that there was an explosive device inside."

McBride said the key was taped on the side of the briefcase, which was somewhat battered.

When he opened the case "I could see batteries, wires and something that looked like an electronic device. I didn't investigate further."

He said the device was contained in a General Electric cardboard box with a picture of an iron on it.

"The instructions—I followed them—told me to take the bomb out, fill the briefcase with a sum of money and deliver the money to a location six blocks away from the bank."

"There was a certain route I had to follow," said the

Arsenic Link To Disease

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department has released the long-secret report on the effects of arsenic on Yellowknife residents, and the report clearly suggests that the poisonous substance may be having a bad effect on people's health.

Despite Health Minister Marc Lalonde's assurances that the report did not find a relationship between arsenic and ill health, the report does link arsenic dusts from area gold mines to skin diseases among mine workers.

It also reports other unusual health findings that could be linked to arsenic, a substance that may cause diseases ranging from skin lesions to gastric cancer.

Meanwhile, the government was severely criticized by the Indian Brotherhood and the Metis Association of the Northwest Territories for taking a "cavalier attitude."

In a statement released today, Indian leaders demanded free water delivery to the native people in the old section of Yellowknife and an immediate health survey of all residents.

Mr. Lalonde said Thursday the report did not link arsenic with ill health in the Northwest Territories capital and that the report would not make "great bedside reading."

The study, which came to light on a CBC radio show this week, says "evidence of an association between arsenic exposure and a high prevalence of skin lesions among individuals occupationally exposed to contact with arsenical dusts was found."

However, the report, which detected higher-than-average levels of arsenic in the air and water around Yellowknife, finds other symptoms of ill health in Yellowknife residents which it can't explain.

It says abnormal brainwave changes "and other neurological findings" were detected more frequently than would have been expected and adds, "The significance of this occurrence cannot be explained at this time."

It also found a high incidence of acute respiratory disease in males as well as a high prevalence of chronic "non-specific" respiratory disease.

The study, prepared by health workers in the environmental health directorate, says the irritant action of inhaled arsenic dust may have had a minor contributing role to play in these conditions.

But this could be less important than other environmental factors, for instance, the harm to the respiratory system from smoking in a cold climate.

The report also says it is possible that environmental arsenic contributed to the prevalence of skin lesions among residents of the community other than workers exposed in the mines.

B.C. Tel Director Post for Pollen?

Premier Barrett will shortly announce the appointment of Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen to the 11-man board of directors of the B.C. Telephone Company, according to Vancouver Sun columnist Allan Fotheringham.

In his column Thursday, Fotheringham said the B.C. government's purchase of 200,000 shares of B.C. Tel common stock places the premier in a strong position to demand government representation on the board.

And that position will be filled by Pollen, "probably the most passionate, well-informed critic of B.C. Tel in this province."

Praising the choice, Fotheringham adds: "Pollen in a B.C. Tel board room will be a slashing werewolf in a coop full of fat geese."

The mayor himself could not be reached for comment today, and the article states Barrett gave a "no comment" reply when asked for confirmation of the story.

Fotheringham outlines the substance of Pollen's attacks on B.C. Tel's operation since he has been in office. These mainly concern its corporate structure in relation to profitability, which in turn is the determining factor in rate increases.

Pollen has repeatedly said that B.C. Tel's practice of buying equipment and services from three affiliated companies that are subsidiaries of B.C. Tel's parent company in the U.S. essentially makes it a captive customer.

The result is, he claims, that none of the profits are funnelled back into the company. Instead, they are "siphoned off" to its American parent.

B.C. GAS EXPORT CUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Extreme cold weather in British Columbia's natural gas fields and mechanical problems have cut gas exports to the United States Northwest in half.

Northwest Pipeline Corporation of Salt Lake City, Utah, the wholesale buyer from Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., estimated that the fuel delivered Thursday was down to 400 million cubic feet from the export contract quota of 809 million cubic feet daily.

The export figure began dropping steadily from about 650 million cubic feet at the beginning of last week.

Residential supplies are being maintained in Washington and Oregon, but the cutback is causing widespread disruption among industrial users.

E. C. Phillips, Westcoast president, said everything possible was being done to alleviate the situation and Canadian industrial customers were cutting back to help.

Big Ford Layoff

DETROIT (AP)—The Ford Motor Co. is closing 17 of its 23 U.S. car and truck assembly plants next week in layoffs that will affect 85,175 of its 175,000 workers, it was announced today.

Snowmobile Mishap Kills 3

TACHIE (CP) — Three people were killed when a convoy of snowmobiles broke through the ice of Stuart Lake, about 70 miles northwest of Prince George, Wednesday night.

A spokesman for the Stuart-Trembleur Indian band said Thursday one of the bodies was recovered and skin-divers would attempt recovery of the other two today.

Refinery Picketing Cuts Ferry Runs

Picketing which began Thursday at lower mainland oil refineries has reduced B.C. Ferry sailings and elicited a warning from an oil firm spokesman that gas stations in the Vancouver area will run dry if picketing continues.

Pickets sent by the Montreal locals of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic workers Union appeared again today at Standard Oil's Burnaby refinery and Gulf Oil's refinery in nearby Port Moody, halting deliveries from the two plants.

Similar pickets were reported at Shell and Imperial bulk delivery facilities in Burnaby.

A spokesman for Standard said many service stations normally received bulk deliveries on Fridays and will run dry within a few days if the refinery disruptions continue.

The picketing of refineries also has halted deliveries of home furnace oil supplies but most cusomers have at least 10 days' supply on hand.

Spokesmen for Gulf, Shell and Texaco in Victoria said this morning there has been no picketing of their local storage tanks.

B.C. Ferries spokesman Bob Innes said the sailing reductions came about immediately because ferries are fueled directly from trucks, rather than storage tanks, and picketing had stopped truck deliveries.

Unless picketing stops, the 6 p.m. Swartz Bay, 6:30 p.m. Departure Bay, 8 p.m. Tsawwassen and 8:45 p.m. Horseshoe Bay sailings are cancelled today, Monday and Wednesday, he said.

Saturday, Tuesday and Thursday, the 5 p.m. Swartz Bay, 5:30 p.m. Departure Bay, 7 p.m. Tsawwassen and 7:45 p.m. Horseshoe Bay Sailings will be eliminated.

Sunday runs will be unaffected.

There are two ferries at each terminal but it is the four on the mainland which are affected by the refueling problem, he said.

He predicted few problems for travellers because "we've got lots of capacity. All it does it knock off one round trip out of 16."

High Tension In City Extortion Bid

bank manager and "I walked it."

McBride refused to give other details, "because there's far too much publicity given to these kind of things," but he said he managed to tell two bank employees what was going on as he went out. The employees phoned the Victoria police before McBride left the bank.

Detective Inspector Richard Ward said today McBride placed $9,000 in two-dollar bills in the briefcase and headed to a pre-determined meeting place.

The meeting place, he said, was the Vancouver Island Coach Lines depot, and police rushed to the scene and during the transaction apprehended a man.

Meanwhile assistant branch manager Alf Lincoln evacuated the staff of 23 and several customers from the premises and notified employees of the adjacent CP Air office that they should clear out of the building because of the suspected bomb still located in the manager's office.

When McBride returned, the offices were vacant, a squad of police officers had Douglas between Fort and Broughton blocked off and a mob of onlookers were peering at a four-man explosive ordinance disposal team from the Canadian Forces Base diving unit in Colwood surrounding the office.

While police using loud speakers barked at a mob of spectators to stay away from plate glass windows and for neighboring offices to keep their doors open in case of an explosion, one member of the team, protected by a steel-slab shield, inched into the office.

The intersection took on the appearance of a movie set with reporters and camera men, protected from the snow by umbrellas, hunched behind police cars.

Some of the onlookers jeered at the police constables, yelling that television's "Police Story" wouldn't have handled it this way. Others protested because police directions had detoured shopping trips: "I have to go all the way around the block, when the bakery's just up the street?"

Most of the crowd, however, remained hushed as the disposal team closed in on the fake bomb.

Protected by the shield, one of the disposal team members used a long-hooked pole to drop a net over the cardboard box and after several unsuccessful attempts, managed to retreat, dragging-pulling the package out of the Douglas street door.

Silence descended on the crowd outside during several incidents in which the package bumped lightly against the sidewalk.

The package was attached to a pulley system, operated from a distance about several hundred feet back, and finally dropped dropped into a large steel box in the trailer of an "explosive" disposal truck unit waiting outside.

The truck, surrounded by police car escort, headed for Clover Point.

Though an explosion echoed from the point about 5:30 p.m., police report it was the disposal team using an explosive device to detonate the package.

Police report today that they are "satisfied" the package did not contain a live bomb, although there is no conclusive evidence.

Ward said the explosion was confined to the detonation device and did not trigger a similar reaction from the package.

Remnants of the package are being held by police for examination.

McBride when told that the package that sparked the episode, was not explosive, had no comment, but his wife described it as a "scare tactic."

"Even if he was 99 and nine-tenths per cent sure the package didn't contain a bomb, there's still that one-tenth per cent."

Names of the four-man explosive ordinance disposal team will never be known. An armed forces spokesman said today it is defence department policy never to identify the specialists.

The policy, he said, was put into effect to guard against reprisals on the men and their families.

Details of their equipment cannot be revealed, either. This informat could help would-be criminals, the spokesman said. He added it was defence department policy not to submit information to the media on incidents where a "criminal element is involved."

Even the reaction of the team leader, who gained the admiration of onlookers as he entered the bank and organized the suspected bomb's retrieval, will never be known.

Ford Checks Out Plan

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Ford, after deciding to seek an anti-recession tax cut of about $15 billion, is considering a novel plan to spur consumer spending in the United States that could include mailing government tax-rebate cheques to millions of U.S. taxpayers, administration officials said today.

As Ford's economic advisers met at the White House, several sources confirmed the president's approval of the tax cut — a one-time-only reduction of about 10 per cent in taxes due by individuals for 1974 — as a major element in his program to pull the U.S. out of the deepening recession.

As outlined by one source, here is how the proposed plan would work:

The amount an individual taxper, or couple, owes for 1974 federal income taxes would be reduced by about 10 per cent.

For a couple whose 1974 tax bill totals $3,000, this would mean a cut of about $300.

If the plan is not enacted until after most taxpayers pay their 1974 bills, rebates in the form of government cheques would be necessary.

But if it were quickly adopted by Congress, taxpayers presumably would simply deduct the amount of the reduction from their taxes due to be paid by April 15.

Officials cautioned that final decisions have not been made on the rebate plan, but several sources said it was in the outline of the president's program now being presented to top-level officials.

The idea was reminiscent of Senator George McGovern's pledge during the 1972 presidential campaign to replace the welfare system with a minimum income grant paid to every citizen.

McGovern proposed annual cheques of $1,000. The plan reported being studied by Ford could fit in with tentative decisions to impose a $3-a-barrel levy on imported and domestic oil and channel that revenue back into the economy in the form of lower taxes or a "rebate" device.

Some sources said such a plan would mean U.S. Treasury cheques sent to taxpayers could total anywhere from $15 billion to $30 billion. The oil levy would raise about $18 billion.

U.S. PRIME RATE DIPS

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Two of the largest commercial banks in the United States dropped their prime lending rates to 10 per cent today.

Bank of America in San Francisco, the largest in the U.S., and First National City Bank of New York, second in size, each lowered their prime rates one quarter point to 10 per cent, effective Monday.

The five main dealers on the London gold market, meanwhile, fixed the price of the metal at $177.25 an ounce this afternoon, more than $3 below the opening level.

The price edged down $1 in Zurich during the morning to $179 an ounce.

In London, gold was traded at $180.50 an ounce at the opening, up $1.50 from Thursday's close. An hour later it was fixed at $178.75 and dropped another $1.50 at the afternoon fixing.

Syncrude Plan On Last Legs

EDMONTON (CP) — A University of Alberta political science professor says he has confidential government documents showing that Syncrude Canada Ltd. threatened to abandon its massive oil sands extraction plant project in northeastern Alberta if it did not receive certain tax concessions from the Alberta government.

Larry Pratt, in an interview from Edmonton on CBC radio's As It Happens program Thursday night, said minutes of meetings between cabinet ministers and Syncrude officials in 1973 show that officials of the consortium demanded a minimum return on their investment in the form of a major tax concession.

A spokesman for Syncrude said the consortium would make no comment until it could see the documents Pratt referred to.

Premier Peter Lougheed refused to give the concessions, Pratt said, and more meetings were held. He said minutes from one meeting indicate that Syncrude presented an uitimatum that they would get "the tax concession or else they would present the Lougheed government with their own take-it-or-leave-it proposal and if they didn't get the response they wanted they would make an immediate public announcement that the thing was being abandoned, that they were going to kill the whole project."

Pratt also said the minutes show that Syncrude threatened to try and deter other companies from developing the oil sands if the government did not make the necessary concessions.

"Syncrude wanted the Lougheed government to understand that if the Syncrude project didn't go ahead, no project would go ahead," Pratt said.

Pratt said the tax concession was included in the final agreement, amounting to "something under a billion dollars for the life of the project."

"Lougheed told the people of Alberta in his television speech announcing the Syncrude project that the negotiations had almost broken down but they had been resolved on the government's terms," Pratt said.

"It seems to me this is a direct lie."

There was no immediate comment available from government spokesmen.

At the same time, however, Attorney General Marv Leitch said plans for the $2 billion syncrude plant in the Alberta oil sands project may be shelved temporarily because of rising costs.

Leitch told his Progressive Conservative Party nominating meeting the problems facing the oil sands extraction project are "immense" and said the plans may have to be shelved "at least for a short period of time" in the very near future.

He said the problems include rising costs and a shortage of capital, following the withdrawal of two major partners which controlled 30 per cent of the project, and the reluctance of American financial institutions to finance the project.

Mid-Air Crashes Claim 23 in U.S.

United Press International

In-flight collisions involving private planes on the east and west coasts of the U.S. Thursday killed a total of 23 persons, including one in Whittier, calif., that showered werckage over homes and a school.

In Newport News, Va., an air force propeller plane carrying seven persons collided with a small private plane. Nine persons died in the crash — their bodies falling into the James River.

In the California crash, a small plane sheared the wings off a commuter airliner, throwing debris into city streets, the roof of at least one house and a backyard. Most of the wreckage from the airliner landed in a playing field at the Katherine Edwards Junior High School, narrowly misising 300 children watching an outdoor basketball game.

The plane's engine and a wing went through the roof and patio of the home of Claude Aguirre, 32, a block away from the school.

In Virginia, a small private plane with a pilot and one passenger collided with a T28 propeller plane carrying seven persons.

Rescue workers said Thursday night there was no sign of any survivors.

Barrett: Compromise

provisions that applied to Alberta and, a finance official said Thursday, that it would be safe to predict that there will be no backing down from the similar proposal related to B.C. gas.

The average price now paid to the producers is 22 cents a thousand cubic feet, but the crown corporation at present retails the gas for about $1 a thousand cubic feet, thus netting an enormous profit.

The new federal budget proposes to tax the private producers not on the basis of the 22 cents they now receive, but on the basis of the "fair market value" of the gas sold to the Petroleum Corporation. It has been calculated that this would be about 57 cents a thousand cubic feet.

Barrett said today the "apparent desire of Ottawa is to force the B.C. crown company to increase the producer price to the companies, thus reducing the provincial take and increasing Ottawa's.

But the premier said gas companies are already making handsome profits, and any increase in price should be at the retail level s oincreased revenues would accrue "to the people of this country."

And, as the haggling between Victoria and Ottawa continues, the private producers have announced the cancellation of exploration and development programs.

Faced with a similar dilemma vis-a-vis its oil companies, Alberta three weeks ago announced a reduction in provincial royalties to provide needed incentive for continued exploration.

It has been estimated that an increase of only about 10 cents a thousand cubic feet in the price paid to B.C. gas producers would offset the effect of the new federal taxes and establish the needed inducement for exploration.

But, to date, both the premier and the provincal minister responsible for energy, Attorney General Alex Macdonald, have rejected the idea of paying any more to the private companies.

The Barrett scheme, involving a direct transfer to the federal government in lieu of increased payments to the companies, creates another intriguing issue according to Ottawa officials.

In effect, B.C. would be proposing to establish a precedent by conceding that Ottawa has a right to taxes or revenues from a provincial crown corporation. At present, provincial corporations are exempt from all federal tax on grounds that one crown cannot tax another.

Return Indian Lands: Buchanan

VANCOUVER (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Thursday that certain lands should be given back to British Columbia Indians.

After a closed meeting with members of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, the minister said "both the federal and provincial government have to be involved in any settlement."

The meeting discussed approximately 36,000 acres cut out of 13 B.C. Indian lands by the McKenna-McBride Royal Commission of 1912 to 1916.

Buchanan said it was not possible to return all the 36,000 acres because some of it is privately owned, but he said much of the provincially owned land could be returned.

Buchanan said the federal government would participate in a settlement, but he would not say if it would compensate the provincial government for the lands.

Joe Mathias of the UBCIC committee on cut-off land said he had not received any response from the provincial government on moves to start negotiations of the land. He said the issue is considered to be separate from general land claims by B.C. and other Indians across Canada.

The McKenna-McBride commission took land from bands throughout the province and turned it over to the provincial government.

Indians in the Port Simpson area lost more than 10,000 acres, and bands in Port Alberni, Chemainus, Bamfield and Beecher Bay lost substantial portions of their land, according to Rueben Ware of UBCIC.

Indians on the Songhees Reserve in Esquimalt lost a graveyard on a small island in the Gorge, he said.

Ware said the commission was supposed to get the consent of the bands to the loss of the land, but failed to do so. However, seizure of the lands was legalized by an act of parliament a few years later, he said.

Hull, Winnipeg Mints Closed by Walkouts

OTTAWA (CP)—Some 600 employees of the Royal Canadian Mint in Ottawa, Hull, Que. and Winnipeg walked off the job Thursday afternoon in their first legal strike.

A Public Service Alliance spokesman said the Ottawa and Hull employees walked out at about 4 p.m. E.S.T. and the Winnipeg workers followed shortly after. The alliance represents the employees.

G. W. Hunter, master of the mint, said the day shift left at 4 p.m. and the night shift did not show up and the Ottawa mint would have to close down as it could not operate without the alliance workers.

Hunter said the mint, which is a Crown corporation, was ready to continue negotiations but the union broke off talks earlier in the day.

Meanwhile a contract dispute involving the treasury board and 19,000 federal employees, including airport maintenance and postal-vehicle maintenance workers, is to be submitted to a conciliation board, it was announced Thursday.

The three-member conciliation board is to start hearings Jan. 15 in the dispute involving the general labor and trades group, represented by the Public Service Alliance, the alliance said in a news release.

OTTAWA NOT PAYING TAB

OTTAWA (FP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde reiterated yesterday that the federal government will not pick up any deficits resulting from the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

That policy had been clearly stated by the prime minister, Lalonde told newsmen. If there was to be any change in policy it would be up to the prime minister to announce it.

"I know of no change being considered," the minister added.

Flaming Space Debris Crashing This Evening

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Skkylab rocket section that started out as tall as an eight-storey building broke apart today as it sliced into the fringes of earth's atmosphere en route to meteoric destruction.

The spent 42-ton booster, largest piece of space debris to reach orbit, was expected to begin its final plunge earthward sometime during a three-hour period beginning at 6:43 p.m. Victoria time.

Its disintegration from the buffeting effects of the thin gases in the top of the atmosphere began earlier than expected and indicated to space agency engineers the derelict might break into more pieces than originally antcipated. This meant more debris might burn up in the heat of atmospheric friction.

Some pieces of the aluminum hulk were still expected to survive the tremendous heat of re-entry and fall to earth, hitting the surface at about 400 miles per hour.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration was unable to calculate where the debris would fall because there was no way to predict the rocket's precise time of re-entry. It circled earth at 17,000 m.p.h., making one revolution every hour and a half.

The space agency reported that tracking stations detected the initial breakup early today. A smaller piece trailed the main section by about three seconds.

The rocket, the top stage of the Saturn 5 that launched the Skylab space station in May, 1973, was orbiting earth in a path ranging between 50 degrees north and south latitude.

CONSTABLE ACQUITTED

Saanich constable Gary Downer was acquitted of common assault Thursday.

Downer, 34, had been charged with assaulting Murray McCallum, West Saanich Road, in the police station April 28. He pleaded not guilty June 18.

Judge Harold Alder said he was unable to find "definite" proof the alleged assault had taken place.

McCallum said Downer struck him in the chest and called him names after he had retrieved a wallet he had lost and police found.

However, Downer and fellow officer Det. David McGregor, the only other people in the room with McCallum at the time, denied the allegations.

McGregor said McCallum, as he was leaving, turned and said ". . . you guys are ripping me off . . . I never lost my wallet . . ."

Alder said he "could not quite understand" why, if that was the situation, the complainant never brought up the matter when he took the stand to explain what happened.

"There was no question the wallet was found. How could he (McCallum) see anybody was ripping him off?" Alder said.

"Why were officers abusing him? Why should he abuse the officers? The two things really don't make sense on either side."

He said the inconsistencies in the case created a doubt in his mind.

"There doesn't appear to be any motive suggested for anything,' Alder said. "And no proof either . . . not guilty."

Strike Continues, But Pickets Off

PORT ALBERNI — Striking non-teaching staff of Alberni School district will withdraw their tickets from district schools Monday, but will continue their strike.

Al Guertsen, president of Local 727 of the Canadian Union of Public employees, said the union doesn't want to disrupt the schooling of youngsters in the district.

The workers have also agreed to allow oil deliveries to the schools, and to repair any furnaces which break down, he said.

"We don't want to be responsible for damage to any building," said Guertsen.

All schools in the district were open today, except Alberni District high school, which will have classes only two hours a day for the duration of the strike.

School board and CUPE negotiators began bargaining again today at 10 a.m.

The board made its final offer to CUPE Wednesday, the first day of the strike. However, CUPE has been on strike at Nanaimo since Monday.

The board proposed a one-year contract which would increase tradesmen's salaries to $7.25 an hour from $5.92 under the previous contract which expired Dec. 31. The offer would increase clerical workers' salaries to $766 from $633 and the laborers' rate to $5.33 from $4.49.

The board's proposal also calls for an additional 25 cents an hour for tradesmen working on capital projects and an increase of 13 cents an hour in the cost-of-living allowance effective Jan. 1, 1975.

The offer was rejected by CUPE representatives Wenesday, and union spokesmen would not say what they were seeking in the new contract.

Welfare and the UIC

Officials in Human Resources Minister Norman Levi's department have charged the Unemployment Insurance Commission with all kinds of dark deeds — "robbing the provincial treasury," cruelly cutting off claimants and forcing Levi's welfare branch to shell out $24 million in social assistance as a result.

The minister hasn't rebuked the official who made the charges (Walter Muller, who helps find jobs in Vancouver for welfare recipients) or denied the outlandish claims, so presumably he believes them as well. They contain a great deal of nonsense and misinformation.

Levi's main assertion seems to be that UIC delays needlessly force claimants to go on welfare. It should take only two weeks to qualify for UIC payments, he says. Ideally, it does. If a person is fired or laid off, he should receive his first cheque soon after the UIC's initial two-week waiting period.

But a whole range of other variables can enter the picture. If he's quit his job voluntarily (something the UIC finds on the increase) there's an additional automatic three-week waiting period — which is soon to be doubled to six weeks, under changes proposed by federal Manpower Minister Robert Andras.

Another delay occurs when claimants come to the UIC without a separation certificate, a form provided by their employer stating necessary information about the number of weeks worked, rate of pay and other data. Or there may be other waiting periods because the claimant is disqualified on certain special grounds. Or he may be cut off entirely. Then he has the right to appeal to a higher level, which takes time. If he wins, then it might be weeks before his cheque covering back benefits arrives in the mail.

At the heart of the present controversy generated by Levi's department seems to be a belief — by the minister as well as all too many UIC claimants — that unemployment insurance is something like a relief agency, a modern bread line, just like welfare.

It's not — it's an insurance scheme designed to tide people over until their next job. Instead, for many it's become a substitute for working. Rightly, the UIC has moved to tighten up its regulations after some highly-publicized flagrant abuses.

Before he points too many fingers, Levi might look closely at his own policies. Not too long ago he was proud of the fact that B.C. paid the highest welfare rates in Canada. Then last summer he "discovered" a problem of too many freeloading unemployed employables.

There's some twisted reasoning here. If too many people are applying for welfare because the UIC is cracking down on misuse of the scheme, then the answer would seem to be, tighten up on welfare regulations as well. Blaming the UIC for the ease with which people can get welfare is no solution.

A footnote — it's not too hard to guess the human resources department's motives in the whole blame-shifting affair. The legislature sits again soon, and Levi is going to be under heavy fire to account for his $103.5 million budget overrun. If he can blame a quarter of it on the UIC, who knows what other scapegoats can be found?

America's Selective Detente

Reports that American parent firms have blocked, or tried to block, sales by Canadian subsidiaries to Cuba have aroused Canadian nationalists and even an odd cabinet minister or two. Despite fervent denials by the two corporations involved in the recent controversy — IBM World Trading Corp. and Litton Industries Ltd. — something funny has been going on.

In the case of Litton, which reportedly tried to stop a sale of $500,000 worth of office furniture by a Toronto company it owns, the American company said that no formal application was ever made to the U.S. state department for exemption from the U.S. Trading with the Enemy Act. But it was subsequently made clear that informal discussions took place and the U.S. government's displeasure was expressed.

Strong protests by the Canadian government, including a stiffly worded diplomatic note and Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie's denunciation of "intolerable interference" in Canadian affairs, made Litton relent. The sale is still not clear of the rocks — Litton must still apply for an exemption, and the state department could refuse.

Things are more clouded regarding the IBM affair. It says talks with Gillespie's department concerning the sale of the typewriters are still in progress, and reports that the sale was blocked by IBM in New York are erroneous. But Cuban trade officials in Montreal say the've been unsuccessful in 18 months of trying to buy typewriters and parts, and that they were turned down by IBM's office in Toronto.

It's clear, judging by all the confused and sometimes contradictory reports, that some funny business is taking place. If the U.S hasn't actually invoked the hoary old Trading with the Enemy Act, then the threat of it still hangs over any American-owned subsidiary anywhere in the world which might do business with "the enemy." It's also clear that if the act did not exist, none of the current controversy would have blown up.

It's also supreme irony for the U.S. state department to be making rumbles about trade with a third-rate power like Cuba — in office furniture and typewriters, for heaven's sakes — when last week President Gerald Ford signed into law a far-reaching trade bill which will grant all kinds of favors to Russia, a much more dangerous superpower than Cuba, or North Korea or North Vietnam, ever were.

If detente with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is worthy and desirable, is it not equally honorable to work for normal relations in trade and diplomacy with all its little semi-independent satellites too?

RICHARD GWYN

What Is the NDP's Future?

OTTAWA — The least of Ed Broadbent's problems — his responsibilities to a 15-year-old son and to a recently adopted two-year-old daughter to one side — is to decide whether or not to contest the leadership of the New Democratic Party. Almost certainly he will run. If he does, he certainly will win. Broadbent's real problem is whether or not the NDP's future already is behind it, and if so whether he can do anything about it.

The NDP always has been torn heart against head between being an ideological movement in search of converts or a political party in pursuit of voters. A year ago it seemed to have reached both — 31 seats and the balance of power at Ottawa and three provincial NDP governments. Until price and income controls came onto the scene, "corporate rip-offs" was the hottest issue around.

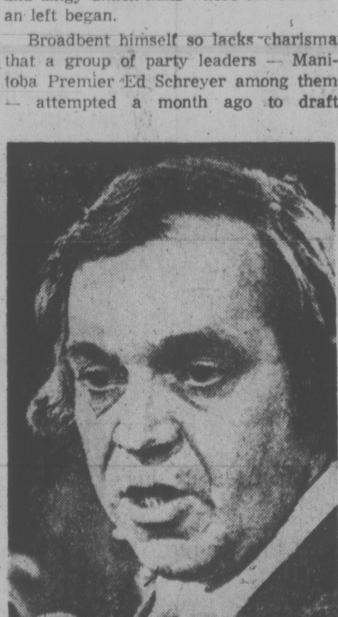
Ideas Exhausted

The NDP now is down to a rump of 16 in Ottawa and many of the best-known in the group — Tommy Douglas, Stanley Knowles, Andy Brewin — have fought their last campaigns. The NDP provincial governments survive, but without a centre the regions cannot hold.

Just as serious, the stock of ideas first put together in Regina 41 years ago has been exhausted. Conservatism has become today's radical ideology, if only because democratic socialism and its kissing cousin, left-liberalism, have for so long been the conventional political wisdom. Affiliated to international unions, the NDP finds it hard to lead the nationalist debate. In a period of popular reaction against bureaucracy and of concern about inflation, NDP policies are seen by the public to lead directly toward bureaucracy and inflation.

Traditional parties always can substitute images for ideas. In fact, until now the leaders of the NDP and of its predecessor, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation — J. S. Woodsworth, M. J. Coldwell, T. C. Douglas, David Lewis — all were larger than life. The first two were political saints in their day. The last pair were and still are masters of oratory with the unique authority of veterans whose careers stretched back to the church basements and dingy union halls where the Canadian left began.

Broadbent himself so lacks charisma that a group of party leaders — Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer among them — attempted a month ago to draft former Liberal cabinet minister Eric Kierans as an alternate. Kierans turned down the offer.



ED BROADBENT
. . . lacks charisma

Broadbent is a 38-year-old former professor, thoughtful and far-sighted but without either physical presence or, until the issue of the MPs' pay, political boldness. In a crowd he is lost, with average looks and height and except for a fondness for long, thin cigars, without the mannerisms that impress a personality upon newspaper cartoonists or TV viewers.

The alternative, Broadbent recognizes, is fresh ideas. He approaches that challenge like a professor, first clearing the intellectual ground ahead of him before pointing to the ground he wants to occupy. "Traditionally we have been seen as champions of social welfare," Broadbent told me in an interview. "That job, pensions, family allowances, guaranteed incomes and so on, has just about been done — by the Liberals, mostly under pressure from us. Improvements always will be needed but the basic structure has been put in place.

"The issue we're going to have to deal with," and here Broadbent is thinking aloud, ahead of present party policy, "is control of investment. It's no longer good enough to control investments once they are made, that is this industry or that mine. Investments themselves have to be regulated.

Vision of Past

"Without control of investments and the power to prohibit certain investments we are dealing only with the symptoms of economic decisions, not their causes. Our studies have just begun. Nationalization of the banks is one approach, a government agency to approve all investments above a minimum size is another approach."

Investment control would lead directly to a planned economy and would represent the first major new NDP policy since the corporate fip-off theme that was in fact borrowed from Kierans. A new policy, but not a new idea. The first principle of the 1933 Regina Manifesto called for "the establishment of a planned, socialized order, in order to make possible the most efficient development of the national resources."

Broadbent's vision of the NDP's future in fact comes directly out of its past.

SFU Athletics

I am responding a little late to an article that appeared Nov. 27 in your paper about Simon Fraser University written by Jim Crerar. It seems to me that knocking the Simon Fraser University athletic program has become a sport for some people. Unfortunately, most of them have very little idea as to what our program is, and most of the time seem to write articles without any discussion with people at our university.

I would like to respond to some of the points that were raised in Mr. Crerar's article. Mr. Elcock, athletic director at University of Victoria, seems not to like our attitude to sports and to our recruiting practices. He doesn't like, for instance, the fact that a Simon Fraser coach apparently was trying to recruit some athletes already enrolled at University of Victoria. I don't like that either, nor do I believe that it happened. Why doesn't Mr. Elcock also say that the C.I.A.U. should stop these practices as well. At one meeting of the Canada West Association that I attended, one athletic director complained bitterly to another about the fact that several of the student athletes registered at his university had been recruited by another university.

Mr. Elcock, in trying to explain what the Canadian universities are doing, seems to suggest that the attitude at Simon Fraser is to give preference to athletic over academic achievements. That, of course, is totally false and never has been the case. I would suggest that the academic record of any of our athletic teams can stand up very favorably to any other Canadian university. Mr. Elcock also seems to indicate that the Canadian university program is designed for Canadian athletes. How come then, as written up in Time magazine about a year ago, the 1974 Canadian university championship teams in basketball and football were composed of Americans to a considerable extent. This is not the case at Simon Fraser where we truly do try to encourage Canadian athletes.

Mr. Elcock indicates that Simon Fraser's athletic budget is concentrated in four sports to the detriment of other sports in which students might be interested. I would suggest that our program for women's athletics, for wrestling, for soccer, for hockey and for a variety of other sports, as well as for basketball, football, track and swimming is much superior to that of the University of Victoria. How come this is the case if we are supposed to, as Mr. Elcock says, be "concentrating our efforts."

Mr. Elcock says he has no objection to athletic scholarships provided they are not administered exclusively by the athletics department. The implication is that that is the way our athletic award program is administered at Simon Fraser. I would suggest that Mr. Elcock knows very well that our award program is admihistered by a senate committee and not by the athletics deparment.

In the article Mr. Crerar suggests that to the credit of the C.I.A.U. the hypocrisy of awarding third party scholarships was stopped three years ago at Canadian universities. As one of our basketball coaches put it very well in an article in Time magazine: "The American black basketball players are not coming to Canadian universities just to see the snow." I would suggest to you that it is totally false to say that Canadian universities do not offer third party awards. This practice is followed by many as of this moment and, in fact, other questionable practices such as offering student athletes non-existent jobs in lieu of athletic aid, are also prominent. I do not like knocking the Canadian athletic program and I have only done it in response to undeserved and uninformed criticism of what we are doing at Simon Fraser. I think that it is unfortunate that there most likely will be no further athletic competition between ourselves and the University of Victoria. It is probably only through competition between our schools that we can achieve better understanding and, thereby, in learning from each other, improve our respective programmes.—G. Suart, vice-president, administration, SFU.

Competition Healthy

I heartily endorse the statements made by Mr. R. E. Stanley-Jones in his letter (Dec. 23) concerning ICBC and surcharges by repair garages.

When private companies took care of our car insurance needs, a car owner had the peace of mind that insurance is supposed to provide — that of being reimbursed for financial loss due to accident, taking into account the deductible features of his contract. The cost of repairs was a matter for the adjuster and insurance company and was of no concern of the insured.

I imagine the actual cost of ICBC coverage is a staggering figure and would make the old free enterprise premiums look like a bargain.

If the government had competed with, instead of eliminating, competition, it would have been a much healthier situation. — N. F. Tanner, 3922 Elwyn Road.

Lawful Punishment

As a Canadian I am concerned with the quality of our society, as it must be the concern of all law-abiding Canadians.

From Moncton to Victoria our policemen have been assaulted or killed by fellow citizens.

The federal government has legislation providing the death penalty for those convicted of slaying policemen or prison guards. The cabinet has chosen to ignore the legislation and half of those convicted have had their sentences commuted while the rest await further appeals.

In the light of the increasing death toll of our policemen we must demand that the Canadian parliament upholds the law, as it now exists, by seeing that those who commit crimes punishable by death, should receive the lawful punishment.

If your readers are concerned about the kind of society we have in Canada; if they wish to have the best quality of law enforcement; if they would have the system of judge and jury upheld; if they would have the law enforced; then let them tell their members of parliament to support the law they were elected to uphold. Show our policemen that the general public is behind them.—Kathleen Beise, Duncan.

Salient Point

The salient point in Mel Hurtig's article on the oil company's con job, is that of the present $6.50 price per barrel at well-head, the Alberta government takes 47 per cent, the federal government 18 per cent, leaving the oil company with 35 per cent, or about $2.25 as Hurtig states.

Likewise, in B.C., the provincial government's B.C. Petroleum Corporation pays the gas producer 22 cents per thousand cubic feet at the well-head, then transports and resells it to B.C. Hydro for about 50-60 cents and for export at $1 per thousand cubic feet.

Whatever pious arguments are advanced for such an extraordinary division of the price for oil and gas, one thing is sure. Canada can only expect to produce oil and gas as long as the fields already found continue to produce. After that, import oil and gas or do without.

The sooner the public wakes up to this fact the better. There are plenty of other fields more rewarding for investors to put their money than the oil and gas industries into which the provincial and federal governments have so deeply thrust their piggish snouts.—J. P. Thornton, [illegible]8 Wilmer Street.

From the Times of January 10, 1915

LONDON — The Times asserts that 16 German aeroplanes were seen over the English Channel this morning. Evidently they contemplated a raid on England, but apparently the pilots found the conditions too bad to continue the journey for they returned in the direction of Dunkirk. A Zeppelin airship, accompanied by three German monoplanes, passed over Furnes, Dunkirk and Calais Saturday night, according to the Daily Chronicle's French frontier correspondent.

The Shah Begins Building Bridges To the Arab World

By JIM HOAGLAND

BEIRUT — Iran's Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi this week carried his quest for global influence into the Arab world, which appears increasingly prepared to bury longstanding rivalries with Iran.

Ignoring vehement calls from Iraq for a denunciation of the visit, most Arab states were welcoming or quietly accepting the Shah's trip this week to Jordan and Egypt. The Shah arrived in Amman Monday morning to a royal reception by King Hussein.

He travels to Cairo next for a visit that is likely to be the key test of how close he is willing to move to the Arabs. In Egypt, recent Iranian hints of military support for Arabs in a new war with Israel are certain to be discussed, Arab military experts reported.

Boost for Moderates

The visit could also have an impact on peace prospects. As a strong ally of the United States, the Shah could be expected to put in a good word for American peace efforts. As a leader who supports both the return of Arab territories conquered by Israel in 1967 and the right of Israel to exist, he could also provide a boost for Arab moderates.

The Arab welcome is a startling change, coming in the face of these facts: that Iran supplies Israel with at least 50 per cent of its imported petroleum; is engaged in an intermittent border war with Israel and is helping Oman's government fight Arab guerrillas.

Iraq has been unable to gather any open expressions of support from Arab governments against Iran, which is openly providing military support to Kurdish rebels in northern Iraq. Suppport for Iraq here amounts to little more than printed slogans on walls, equating "Iranian aggression" against the Arab homeland with Israeli occupation, plus the fleshing-out of Baghdad Radio broadcasts on Arab opposition to the Shah with telegrams of denunciation from workers' and farmers' groups in Iraqi provincial capitals.

Also conspicuously missing in Baghdad's propaganda broadsides is any expression of political support against Iran from the Soviet Union, the main supplier of arms to the radical Baathist regime in Baghdad. Communist sources here confirm that the Russians do not want an open dispute with the Shah.

Outflanking Iraq, which will stand even more isolated in the Arab world as the result of this trip, is only part of the Shah's aim in making a prestige journey to the Arab world now, qualified diplomatic analysts believe.

With his growing oil revenues, which will run around $20 billion this year, the Shah is intent on building Iran into a global power. He is beginning that process by extending his influence in the Middle East and South Asia, which he visited in the fall.

Religion, politics, oil and even family relationships are key factors in the conflicting bonds and rivalries between the 55-year-old emperor, and his Semitic Arab neighbors. The Persians are Aryans, not Semites; they speak an Indo-European language and sharply correct any visitors who mistake them for Arabs.

Once married to Princess Fawzia, the sister of Arab Egypt's King, Farouk, the Shah turned sharply against the Arabs when Gamal Abdel Nasser became their dominant political figure. He also divorced Fawzia.

Paved the Way

The death of Nasser in 1970 and the rise of the more moderate Sadat in Egypt, plus the Arabs' increased influence on oil and international finance and their improved military showing against Israel in 1973, have clearly paved the way for the reconciliation the Shah's visit is intended to solidify.

Egypt is the most important political partner of Saudi Arabia. Because of its vast petroleum producing potential, Saudi Arabia has the power ultimately to determine the price that Iran gets for its oil. Iran increasingly appears to be trying to end its oil rivalry with the Saudis and gain their co-operation.

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi with Empress Farah addresses his people

The Shah used his oil revenues to woo Arab countries, promising Egypt around $800 million in loans and grants, signing a long-term trade and joint venture agreement with Syria, and extending $13 million to Jordan in interest-free loans and aid last week.

Egyptian official sources report that Iran thus far has parted with little of the cash promised, and has indicated that it will not finance a petroleum pipeline Egypt wants to build from Suez City to Port Said. These economic problems will be discussed in Cairo during the Shah's visit.

But the Arabs are at least equally interested in the Shah's hints that he is abandoning his previously friendly attitude toward Israel and will give them his full political support, and perhaps more, if another Arab-Israeli war breaks out.

When a Beirut magazine quoted the Shah last month as saying that "The next war will be our war," the Iranian foreign ministry hastily informed the American government that the Shah had been misquoted. The Shah's phrase in French, "une autre guerre," "another war" had been misheard by the interviewer as "notre guerre" ("our war"), the ministry reportedly explained.

The Shah himself, in a subsequent interview with Cairo's Al Ahram newspaper, disowned the quote, but repeated: "Our sentiment certainly will be on your (Egypt's) side."

Since the Arab showing in the October 1973 war against Israel, the Shah has been more insistent in his calls for a complete Israeli withdrawal fram Arab lands occupied in 1967, telling one interviewer: "We might even go so far as to say that Israel deserved the shock of the October war to shake her out of her arrogant complacency."

Arab defence experts report that Egypt will raise the question of Iran providing some military assistance and they feel that the Shah, as head of a nation of Moslems with whom his previous good relations with Israel have not been popular, may respond with some symbolic commitment.

One possibility mentioned in Cairo is a training mission for Egyptian pilots and maintenance crews to learn the F5-type fighter plane. The United States has sold the small intercepter craft to Saudi Arabia, Morocco, Libya and Jordan as well as to Iran. Recently supplied F5's welcomed the Shah as his plane flew into Amman Monday.

The Shah, in fact, would like to dispose of his estimated 100 F5-A interceptors which are being replaced with more advanced aircraft. Arab oil producers, who are committed to building up the Arab world's air forces, represent his best potential market, Arab defence experts feel.

Need U.S. Permission

Under the contract by which Iran bought American warplanes, Iran would have to obtain American permission before reselling the F5 or any other military aircraft to another country.

But, in two key precedents that have become public knowledge, the United States has taken no action against Iran for having transferred American planes to third countries during wars. As long as the planes continued to be owned by Iran, the United States appears to feel it cannot exert any control over them.

The first instance was during the 1971 India-Pakistan war, when Iran sent jet fighters to Pakistan. In October 1973, six American-made Iranian C-130 cargo planes transported Saudi Arabian troops to Jordan. The Shah, confirming that Iranian aircraft were used during the war, said during an interview with Beirut's Al Hayat newspaper that "all we did was to place some of our aircraft at the disposal of Saudi Arabia."

Iran is also interested in encouraging Saudi Arabia to help finance a major new arms procurement program for Pakistan, Iran's Moslem neighbor to the east, according to well-placed Arab sources. They report that Pakistan has been discussing large new arms purchases with French and American companies for more than one year.

Frequent Visitor

The Shah is likely to discuss his bid for better relations with the Saudis with King Hussein in Amman, Arab political sources say. Hussein frequently visits Saudi Arabia's King Faisal.

These sources express strong doubt that Hussein will engage in serious efforts to mediate the Iran-Iraq dispute. Despite Baghdad's efforts to win favor with him, Hussein is said to continue to resent Iraqi support for Palestinian extremists who have vowed to kill him and who work closely with Iranian exiles trying to overthrow the Shah.

Links between the Iranian exiles and the Palestinian extremists, who also denounce Sadat, are thought to have been a major topic of discussion during a preliminary visit made to Egypt last month by Gen. Nematollah Nassiri, the head of Iran's widely feared secret police, Savak.

Such a visit would have produced a political uproar in the Arab world a few years ago. The fact that it has passed with hardly a mention outside of Baghdad is cited by Arab analysts here as another sign of the Shah's skilful bridge-building.

MICHAEL PITFIELD . . . he's No. 2 to Trudeau

NEW POWER STRUCTURE IN OTTAWA

'Pimples on the Backside of the Elephant'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — After much work and recognition in periodical and book journalism, Christina Newman began a newspaper career with the Toronto Globe and Mail. Aside from the merits of her piece as written, it was fascinating that she chose to write a long profile on Michael Pitfield.

The fascination has many aspects, one of which is that many in politics and government will assert that the Michael Pitfields of this world are none of the public's (or Mrs. Newman's) business. Of course, such views are sustained with fine-sounding parliamentary principles such as "ministerial responsibility" and its hand-maiden, "civil service anonymity."

In Mrs. Newman's opinion (which I share) Pitfield is the most important man in Canadian politics and government next to Trudeau. This month, Pitfield officially becomes the Clerk of the Privy Council, colloquially, the No. 1 mandarin. In this post, Pitfield's judgments, influence and power are more vital to our whole community than those of any one of John Turner, Robert Stanfield, William Davis, Robert Bourassa, Speaker Jerome, Chief Justice Laskin, Gerald Bouey, Andre Raynauld, Beryl Plumptre or even that master of such diversities as agriculture, transportation, law and order, and women, Otto Lang.

For some weeks, the Pitfield appointment and the multiple resignations of deputy ministers have been the major Ottawa story. I say "major" not merely in terms of gossip. Despite the conventions of anonymity and of the overriding responsibility of the political ministers, we are steadily being drawn into paying more attention to the ambitions and beliefs of the Michael Pitfields.

Why?

The allegedly "responsible" politicians are like a little pimple on the backside of the public service elephant. There are only 264 elected federal politicians, and only 27 of them are ministers, chosen by a 28th, the prime minister. The elephant numbered 472,000 persons at last count. Its total salary bill is running over $4.5 billion annually and its very top people are making more than any of the politicians.

Of course, the over-riding institution, the transcendent one of our times, is the bureaucracy. In every bureaucratic organization there is a desk manned by someone who knows, or should know, or is capable of knowing, all that has happened, is happening or should happen in the whole bureaucracy.

The key desk in this federal bureaucracy is now to be manned by the aforesaid Michael Pitfield. All those lesser minions (472,000 plus) focus upwards to him. Of course, Trudeau has put the Pitfield appointment into another context.

The PM says that he is taking power away from the "old kings" — i.e., the deputy-ministers of "line" departments — and giving it to "the collegium" — i.e. to the cabinet ministers assembled. While I tend to label the collegial conception as largely cosmetics, even if it has some stuff to it, the agendas, the documentation and the arrangement of priorities of the so-called collegium all flow through the hands of Michael Pitfield and staff.

As government has gotten bigger, more pervasive and complex, our prime ministers have been looking more and more presidential. This is not just in trappings of armor-plated Cadillacs and squads of secret service types but in one man's dominance of the whole political scene whether in the partisan, the parliamentary, the ministerial or the government aspects.

In the rationing of Trudeau's time and attention, there is an immense amount of delegation and arrangement which must be done for him and in his name. Clearly, there has been a change in nature, not just in scale, of the prime minister's role in Canada. In this change, the importance of key advisers, such as Pitfield and Ivan Head, has grown and grown.

What we must start considering is how much longer we can leave the Pitfields and Heads of Canada anonymous and shrouded by ministerial responsibility. Or, to put it another way: How well does the system work through which men and women advance to posts of such immense power?

If our politicians really are responsible in more than the conventions of political theory, why shouldn't every major appointment at the gift of the prime minister be confirmed formally within the open parliamentary process? That is, the Pitfields, Edgar Bensons and Yves Prattes, on appointment would be formally examined and passed by a parliamentary committee before they could assume their duties.

For most appointments, at least in the beginnings, such hearings would be largely formalities, but gradually all of us, including the mandarins, would come to recognize why we must know before about anyone who wields enormous power and influence and what the standards for it are or should be.

Is the federal public service that good? We don't know. I doubt it. I think it is overstaffed, lax and wasteful and that most of its senior personnel, including Pitfield and Head, may be rather ordinary — certainly, at least as ordinary as our elected politicians.

Anyone must acknowledge that Trudeau has won the right to have his own choice of Pitfields and Heads and to make musical chairs with the other mandarins. But you and me and the rest of the non-ministerial politicians must get to know something of the abilities and aims of these hitherto faceless men of great power and influence. There's too much money, expertise and hundreds of thousands of bodies hidden from us in the elephant and too few men and women and too little resources in the pimple on the backside.

In the Green Valleys

By JOHN CROSBY

FISHGUARD, Wales—Wales looks as old as Ireland, which usually means poverty. That is, people are too poor to pull down the lovely old buildings and uproot the hedgerows. It didn't look as I expected it would but then I wasn't quite sure what I expected. You always bear of the valleys of Wales, never of the hills, and it is truly a land of valleys, one after another, no two alike, according to a man we went riding with one day.

He wasn't a Welshman. He came from Cheshire and decided Wales had exactly the sort of pastoral beauty and simplicity he wanted and settled here permanently. Wales, in fact, is getting to be the great place for dropouts or, if you don't like that word, for people who are opting out of the rat race. Wales is increasingly full of non-Welsh who find in it a sort of timeless 19th-century tranquility that has vanished from almost everywhere else. I know one young man who opted out of England and went to live in Wales when the last steam train was phased out of England. "I don't want to live in a country that has no steam trains," he said. Wales still has steam trains.

* * *

The sound of Wales is the sound of running water and cawing rooks and wind in the trees. It exerts a powerful appeal, and people drop everything to go live in Wales and practise the simple life. In Wales you'll find former schoolteachers from London who now make pottery, or lawyers who have thrown up the practice of law to weave cloth because it fulfills them.

Craftsmanship is reappearing in Wales, but the people who practise it are not the old-style craftsmen at all. The original craftsman carved a wooden spoon because carving was the only way he knew of making a spoon, and wood was the material at hand. The new-style craftsman arrives at craftsmanship by a sort of intellectual process. He carves wooden spoons because he appreciates the properties of wood and because the process of carving gives him intense creative satisfaction.

* * *

One of the most successful crafts-Myles Pepper, who makes rings and little South Wales port which was the site of the last invasion of England, an ill-starred French fiasco in 1795. Here, in a string of wooden huts, under the most primitive conditions operate some enthusiastic craftsmen who make leather sandals, handbags, wooden bowls, silver jewelry, leather belts and pottery.

Everyone there is self-employed, doing his own thing, but the operation is the brain child of John Cleal, who comes from South Africa. Cleal does any kind of craftsmanship you can name, but his real genius is rounding up people to do this sort of work, getting them started in silversmithing or leatherwork or whatever they want to do — and then leaving them to carry on with it.

It's so difficult in this, the age of dissatisfaction, to find anyone who enjoys his work that I found it positively euphoric to talk to Cleal's craftsmen. manship ventures is at Fishguard, the bracelets of silver and semi-precious stones, says: "It's a fantastically satisfying life. I love creating things that please people. If you put feeling into your work, it persists in the design and people who buy it feel the same pleasure you put into it."

His benchmate, Tom Arndell, worked for Rolls-Royce and had a spell in the merchant navy before throwing it all up to make jewelry, studying under Myles. He says: "It's a tremendous kick when you sell something, something you dreamed up by yourself and then designed and made. It's all yours from beginning to final product." All of them spoke of the intense pleasure they got when a purchaser bought their things — and the financial reward was the least of it.

"I like working with people," says Myles. "There's a great community feeling here. If we have a problem with design, we take it up at coffee break and listen to suggestions. We all understand each other's problems, even if we are working in a different craft." Being self-employed, they make what they please when they please.

* * *

"The one thing we won't make is a Welsh love spoon," says Cleal. A love spoon is a peculiarly Welsh way of telling the girl how much you love her. The more intricately carved the spoon, presumably the greater the love, and some of the spoons are incredibly complicated. "Buying a love spoon," says Cleal, "is a little like hiring someone to write your love letters. You're supposed to do your own."

"The trouble is," said a skeptical Welshman I spoke to in Cardiff, "they came to Wales from all over the world to get out of the rat race, and pretty soon you find them building a factory to turn out wooden spoons for export, making out corporate tax returns, customs declarations — and they're right back in the rat race."

The market recorded another broad gain at Toronto today with western oils leading the strong mid-afternoon advance. Trading was active.

New York

Wall Street piled up a sharp gain in very active trading in a rally ignited by news that President Ford had decided to call for a $15 billion income tax cut.

A large part of the advance came in the opening hour, when 8.20 million shares changed hands for the fourth largest opening-hour volume on record at the NYSE.

After that the pace quieted down a bit, but the market held its gains and then gradually began adding to them in the afternoon.

In Washington, Ford administration officials confirmed that the president had decided to take a unanimous recommendation from advisers that he proposed a reduction of about 10 per cent in the taxes individuals must pay on their 1974 incomes. The step would be aimed at stimulating the recession-ridden economy.

An added spark was provided by prime rate cuts at a number of major banks across the country.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the NYSE volume leader, rose ⅝ to $47¾.

A wide range of consumer business issues posted gains on the news of the tax cut plan.

Montreal

All sectors moved higher in light trading at Montreal.

Pacific Petroleums rose $1 to $16½, Northern Electric $1 to $18½, Husky Oil ⅞ to $14¾, MacMillan Bloedel ¾ to $23¼, Moore Corp. ⅜ to $40⅞ and Mercantile Bank ⅝ to $14⅝.

Among speculative issues, Kiena Gold Mines rose 5 cents to $2.75 trading 7,200 shares.

London

Prices at London were generally higher in quiet trading.

The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed at 159.7, up 7.3 points.

Canadian issues recorded modest gains.

Canadian May Buy Aston Martin Firm

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian entrepreneur George Minden, 37, of Toronto says he heads a group of investors interested in buying Aston Martin Lagonda Ltd., the prestige British car maker that went into voluntary liquidation Dec. 30.

Minden leaves Sunday for Britain "to explore the possibility of purchasing Aston Martin."

He plans a meeting with Charles Warden, managing director of the British firm which has been seeking a buyer or some form of financial support to rescue the company.

Minden did not identify other members of his group but said any deal would be in the form of a joint venture.

"It seems unthinkable that this magnificent car should be allowed to sink into oblivion," he said in an interview. "The demand for the Aston Martin is very strong. Sales forecasts for North America alone for this year was 200 cars and that represents revenue for manufacturers of more than $5 million."

Minden is the owner and president of Grand Touring Automobile Ltd. of Toronto, sole importer of Aston Martins for Eastern Canada.

He also owns the Windsor Arms Hotel in Toronto and a string of restaurants.

Earlier this week, Warden said he was hopeful Aston Martin could find a buyer, adding that at least one United States businessman, not identified, had expressed a "firm interest" in the company.

CP in Mexican Pact

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's largest private banking group and CP Hotels have signed a $40-million agreement for a tourist company in Mexico, the Mexican bank announced Thursday night.

The agreement was signed here by the Banco de Comercio, Mexico's largest private banking system, and the Toronto-based Canadian company, the bank said.

The bank said it will finance 51 per cent of the investment while CP Hotels will finance 49 per cent, or a minority contribution.

This is in line with Mexico's foreign investment law that precludes majority foreign ownership in any joint-capital venture.

The agreement was signed for the bank by its President Manuel Espinosa Yglesias and for the Canadian company by CP Hotels president Donald Curtis.

The bank said the company will develop tourist facilities in Mexico City and the resorts of Acapulco, Cancun, Zihautanejo, Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan and Baja California.

No further details were given.

Tomeson Saunders

Tomeson Saunders Whitehead Ltd. of Toronto has made an offer to the shareholders and creditors of J. T. O'Bryan and Co. to purchase the Vancouver-based insurance brokerage firm.

John MacLean, a director of O'Bryan, said acceptance is contingent on agreement among the creditors, which include Lloyds of London and Canadian Indemnity Co. of Winnipeg. He said he had not yet seen the letter of intent from Tomeson.

He said the firm, which has a debt of about $1.5 million and an annual premium income of about $22 million, is still being run by the existing management and not by its creditors.

O'Bryan is the seventh or eighth largest insurance brokerage in the country; Tomeson is one of the largest.

Granisle

Granisle Copper Ltd. reports net income for the year ended Sept. 30, 1974, at $9.6 million or $2.89 a share compared with $4,766,569 or $1.43 a share for the previous 12-month period.

Total value of production of copper, gold and silver for the latest year at the company's mine on Babine Lake in North Central British Columbia, was $33.4 million for fiscal 1974 compared with $22.15 million for fiscal 1973. The average price of copper received in 1974 was 90.4 cents a pound compared with 72.6 cents in 1973.

Capital expenditures during the year were $3.18 million and dispositions amounted to $635,573.

The company estimates royalties under the Mineral Land Tax Act at $669,000 for the period Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1974.

The company's annual report, released Friday, also says the federal budget, announced Nov. 18 but with provisions retroactive to May 6 has caused the company to make additional provision for taxes, subsequent to the audited report for Sept. 30.

The budget provides that taxes and royalties of provincial governments are no longer deductible for federal tax purposes. Also development expenses and depletion allowances have been changed.

Granby

Granby Mining Co. Ltd. has announced net earnings of $7,670,478 or $5.31 a share for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, increased from $5,514,723 or $3.82 a share in 1973.

Increased revenue was attributed to higher prices for copper, gold and silver and increased production from the Granisle Mine.

Production value from the Granisle and Phoenix mines was $40,362,305, compared with $29,765,169 in 1973. The average price of copper increased to 89.3 cents a pound from 73.1 cents in 1973, the company reports.

Exploration and development expenditures increased to $2.2 million from $886,000 in 1973. The increase was attributed to development of coal deposits in southern Alberta and a copper project in northern British Columbia.

Woodward Stores

Woodward Stores Ltd. net earnings increased to $5,018,046 or 77 cents a share in the nine months ended Oct. 31 compared with $4,691,300 or 72 cents for the same period in 1973, company chairman C. N. Woodward announced.

He said in his report to shareholders that department store sales increased 20 per cent to $347,472,658 from $289,608,833 in the same period of 1973.

"Net earnings during the third quarter were adversely affected by the impact of escalating wages and other operating costs in spite of constant vigilance over such costs," said Woodward, adding that unseasonable weather in B.C. and Alberta during the fall has kept the sales of outer clothing down.

Zinc Concentrate Plant Planned at Alice Lake

Alice Lake Mines Ltd. has annouced it will start milling zinc in March at its mine site on northern Vancouver Island.

Company director Emil Shaw said some open pit mining is already under way at the site in preparation for milling.

Twenty men will be employed in mining and milling activities and the high grade zinc will be shipped in concentrate form to Japan.

Ore capacity of the mill is 200 tons per day. About 1,000 tons of zinc concentrate will be produced each month, Shaw said.

Marble River is five miles from Port Alice on the west side of Vancouver Island and about 30 miles across-Island from Port Hardy, which is on the northeast coast.

The mine site is on the river between Alice Lake and Victoria Lake.

About 100,000 tons of ore have been established as reserves, grading at 8.7 per cent zinc with some values of silver, gold and copper.

Zinc prices have bucked the trend of the world metal market and have remained fairly high. In addition, the company will not be affected by the curtailment of orders from Japan because the cutback applies only to copper.

Shaw said Alice Lake Mines Ltd. had been working for many months to get permission from the B.C. government to go ahead with the mine and the company was gratified production is under way.

The small mine working in high grade ore could be expected to be a profitable venture despite the current economic conditions, including high levels of taxation, he said.

The company has purchased a compact mill which is being shipped from Timmins, Ont.

Alice Lake was issued a provincial government production lease dated Dec. 20.

The 56-claim property has been leased to Zeballos Development Co. Ltd. of Vancouver, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Ponderay Explorations Ltd. of Edmonton.

Zeballos will supervise production and manage the mine.

Alice Lake received an initial payment of $15,000. Zeballos will be permitted to regain its production costs and then profits will be split 50-50 with Alice Lake until each company has received $300,000.

Then Zeballos will receive two-thirds and Alice Lake one-third of any remaining profits.

Zeballos officials said the ore shoud net the mine $15 per ton before taxes.

Tough Economics For Danes

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Premier Poul Hartling, fresh from his liberal party's strong showing in the Danish national elections, said today he would seek support from all nine other parties for his tough economic program marked by wage and price freezes.

Hartling called the victory a mandate from the people for his emergency austerity program, but Anker Joergensen, head of the powerful Social Democratic Party, called for the immediate resignation of the premier.

Joergensen also demanded the creation of a majority coalition government.

The liberal party doubled its parliamentary strength in Thursday's elections but fell short of a majority in the 179-member Folketing. The party increased its seats from 22 to 44.

The Social Democratic Party increased its seats from 46 to 53 to remain the largest party.

New star hides between two gaseous masses

Lights Mar Birth of Star

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A star is being born.

Unlike the Hollywood type, however, Victoria city lights threaten to dim its emergence.

Research scientist Dr .Dave Crampton of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain is one of a number of scientists trying to monitor the progress of the new star, which was first sighted last September.

Important data on the astronomical birth, being watched by an international team of astronomers, is being hampered by Greater Victoria's mercury lights.

Crampton, who has been asking for co-operation from the core municipalities for the past two years, aired his case to the Times this week.

"I'm not suggesting that the municipalities take drastic steps and change all their lights," he said. "All that's needed are filters that cut out the light the eye cannot see — the ultraviolet."

Crampton said as more sensitive equipment becomes available to astronomers, the interference from mercury lights becomes greater. In the past year, the Canadian subsidiaries of General Electric and Westinghouse have started manufacturing filters which, Crampton said, cost only about two or three per cent of the total price of a complete light fixture.

He said the Hawaiian city of Hilo is filtering all its public lighting in preparation for the day the giant Canada-France-Hawaii telescope goes into action.

The main mirror for the international project is being prepared at the Dominion Astrophysical Laboratory.

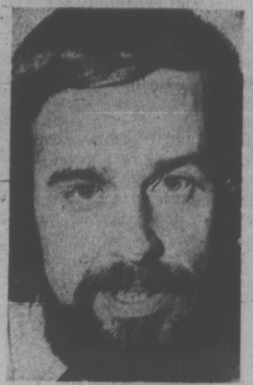
All new lights in the city of Tucson in Arizona, which is surrounded by five observatories, are now filtered.

Locally, Crampton said, politicians were quick to act on complaints from "farmers whose chickens stay awake at nights, but no observatories."

Lights from Saanich, being the closest municipality to the observatory, caused the most interference Crampton said, adding he hoped the lighting for the proposed Broadmead shopping centre in Royal Oak would be designed so as not to compound the ever-growing problem.

Crampton said lighting at the University of Victoria, which throws 50 per cent of the illumination into the sky is also a source of interference.

Crampton's latest plea for co-operation is triggered by the importance of the monitoring of the star's formation by himself and Anne Cowley, a scientist visiting here from the University of Michigan.



CRAMPTON

"As far as I know, this is the first time the birth of a new star has been observed," he said.

He describes the star as "a very young object—10,000 to 100,000 years, compared to our sun's 4½ billion years it's quite young."

Crampton said the developing star was first sighted by a telescope in a rocket and later, by one in a high-flying plane.

"The light from the star is hidden by two objects (which because of their shape have been dubbed Felix the Cat by one astronomer)," Crampton said. "This dust shell absorbs most of the radiation of the star and re-emits it at longer wavelengths in the infrared."

CIA Transport Snoop 'Invited' Firms' Aid

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The CIA last year apparently invited American companies to snoop on Russian and European transportation systems.

The object of the secret operation was to find out if Europe and Russia were developing air and land transportation that would be superior to the U.S. system by the 1980's, according to Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, (Rep.—Pa.)

Schweiker Thursday released the text of a CIA letter dated Nov. 26, 1974, formally soliciting companies to sign up for the program. Its language indicated it was drawn up to be sent to a number of firms. Schweiker got it from someone in an unnamed company to which it was sent.

He suggested the contract solicitation may be a new violation of the CIA's charter and that it took the spy agency, into a field that properly belonged to either the departments of transportation or commerce.

The development came in the midst of controversy over charges that CIA, in violation of its charter, has spied on Vietnam war dissidents and other Americans at home.

With pressure growing from Congress for a complete investigation of both domestic and foreign operations of the agency, there were indications the White House may announce the executive director of President Ford's panel to probe CIA domestic activity. Vice - President Nelson Rockefeller, who heads the panel, reportedly recommended a chief of staff for it, and the recommendation was accepted by Ford.

Schweiker pledged that when the 94th Congress convenes Tuesday he will introduce a resolution to investigate allegedly improper activities of the CIA both at home and abroad.

The CIA had no formal comment on Sen. Schweiker's disclosure.

But one harrassed official defended the project as a routine economic study.

"I hardly dare go out the door to blow my nose for fear I will be accused of an improper domestic activity," he said.

Meanwhile the CIA has told the U.S. justice department that the spy agency destroyed lists of 9,000 to 10,000 political dissidents furnished by the justice department.

The CIA also has told the department that it made no use of the lists that was supplied in 1970 by a department intelligence unit, according to the administration source. The lists were destroyed last March, the source said.

The lists had been supplied to the CIA to allow the agency to increase surveillance of U.S. political dissidents while they were on trips abroad.

It could not be determined why the CIA did not use the lists or why the agency destroyed them.

Jerris Leonard, the former justice department official, said the radicals were suspected of travelling abroad to receive training in civil disturbance techniques.

In other developments in the CIA controversy:

—Former CIA Director Richard Helms has agreed to undergo questioning by the Senate foreign relations committee on the allegations of domestic spying. Helms will appear at a closed hearing.

—The Washington Post reported in today's editions that the CIA secretly read the mail of AFL-CIO president George Meany and two of his aides during the 1950s. The newspaper said the tactic was undertaken to monitor the flow of covert U.S. funds to anti-Communist trade unions in Europe. The CIA is alleged to have subsidized some of those trade unions.

—Eugene Fodor of Fodor's Travel Guides Inc., said "a handful" of writers he hired to work in Europe in the 1950s were CIA agents.

GOV'T TO AID TOFINO PLANT?

A provincial cabinet committee has been appointed to study ways of assisting financially-troubled Tofino Fishing Ltd., a fish processing company on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk said Thursday that he is chairman of the committee which includes Agriculture Minister David Stupich and Human Resources Minister Norm Levi.

"The rationale for our study is that Tofino is a small community and closure of the plant has hurt it and the native population which makes up a large part of the work force," he said.

The plant closed down during Oct. 1974. During February the firm had received a grant of $553,380 from the Federal Regional Economic Expansion Department for plant expansion. The company experienced difficulties when a new cold storage plant cost more than expected.

Lauk said he was opposed to having the B.C. Development Corp. take over the plant.

He said the government has been conducting studies in the general area during the past four months.

A. G. Tulloch, president of the company, said Thursday that he still holds the majority of the companies shares and has not received any firm proposal from the government or its agencies.

Asbestos Plants Flee Health Laws

WASHINGTON (CP) — United States manufacturers of asbestos products are moving their facilities out of the country rather than meet new federal health standards, an environmental group said Thursday.

The Maryland Public Interest Research Group, a private organization, said that by moving production to countries with few or no health regulations, the firms can take advantage of substantially lower costs and export the finished products — much of it produced with Canadian raw material — to the U.S. at a profit.

Asbestos as an alleged health hazard is at the centre of an issue raised by Dr. Morton Shulman, NDP member of the Ontario legislature, who said recently that reports indicate that asbestos in Ontario drinking water "can cause gastro-intestinal cancer."

Shulman, who spoke of high levels of asbestos particles in drinking water in communities along the Great Lakes, said the province was taking chances with the lives of Ontario residents by not acting promptly.

U.S. imports of asbestos textiles increased by 213 per cent during the 1968-73 period.

Of this amount, one million pounds came from countries with relatively stiff health regulations.

The remaining three million pounds, however, came from seven "unregulated" countries which — six years ago — had been shipping no asbestos textiles to the U.S.

By 1973, the seven unregulated countries had captured 51 per cent of the total U.S. import market.

Mexico, which exported no asbestos textiles to the U.S. in 1968, became second only to Canada as a textiles supplier by 1973. Taiwan, which had no exports as late as 1969, grew to become the fourth-largest supplier.

The Maryland group said that large amounts of Canadian raw material — once shipped directly to U.S. producers — now are shipped to Mexico.

Mexico produces no asbestos of its own and has no exposure limits for workers, the group said. The Canadian imports are turned into manufactured goods and shipped to the U.S.

Limits on the allowable amount of worker exposure to asbestos fibres in the U.S. remained static from 1938 through 1970.

The limit was cut by one-sixth of the old level in 1971 and is scheduled to be reduced by another 60 per cent in 1976, to the level adopted by Britain in 1968.

Inflation Cut

SANTIAGO (AFP) — Chile has managed to cut its inflation rate to about 375 per cent in 1974 from 509 per cent in 1973. The most inflationary month last year was May, when the cost of living rose by 24.5 per cent.

China Nuclear Range Bared

LONDON (UPI) — Western defense experts said today the Soviet Union will soon be very vulnerable to Chinese nuclear attack but the U.S. will still be out of range.

A study released by the institute of strategic studies said China can blanket India, Southeast Asia and Japan with missiles having an estimated range of up to 3,000 miles.

The authoritative defence analysis organization said Chinese missiles can already hit some Soviet frontier installations and "will soon have the capacity to target most of the important Soviet cities."

The institute said the Soviet Union has "an overwhelming superiority" over China in nuclear weapons but might be "very vulnerable" to Chinese nuclear strikes against vital supply lines in Western Siberia.

The study, written by Harvard University fellow Geoffrey Kemp, said China's ability to strike major cities along the Trans-Siberian Railway "would be of great strategic and tactical significance."

The report said China "will not be able to threaten the continental United States" until it deploys intercontinent ballistic missiles or supersonic bombers capable of carrying nuclear bombs.

Tornado Slams School

McCOMB, Miss (UPI)—A tornado slammed through a suburban shopping centre and struck a high school killing at least three persons today.

Witnesses said most of the stores in the plaza were demolished, including a large department store, a discount store, a service station and a drug store.

"Cars were picked up and turned over like toys," one spectator said.

At least two other schools and several homes and businesses in the area also were damaged.

All available ambulances were dispatched to the scene, and national guard units have been activated.

Camosun College council will again write Education Minister Eileen Dailly asking her to ensure that the college's Lansdowne campus is bought from the University of Victoria this month.

The purchase has been in the works three years, but negotiations between UVic and the public works department drag on.

Another meeting between provincial government officials and UVic is scheduled for this month, college principal Dr. Grant Fisher told a special meeting of the college council Thursday.

The provincial government said in the fall of 1973 it was giving priority to getting the purchase completed.

"I just wonder how quickly this would have gone if they'd not given it top priority," council chairman Dr. Hal Knight said wryly.

"We'd really be in trouble then."

Until the government buys the land, the college cannot proceed with a major expansion of the Lansdowne larger than the 1974-75 capital campus being planned.

Overcrowding on the campus has led to a cutback in new programs in the past year.

Camosun Doubles Capital Budget

Camosun College council Thursday approved a $1,173,723 capital budget for 1975-76.

The budget is substantially larger than the 1974-75 capital budget of $725,893 approved by council last year, and more than double the $436,300 finally approved by the provincial government.

Part of this year's budget increase is the result of attempts to catch up on items that were chopped out of previous budgets by the provincial government, college president Dr. Grant Fisher told the council.

"We've attempted to keep up but we've not been able to because of the decisions of the department (of education)," he said.

The budget includes no money for new buildings or major repairs. New furnishings, equipment and books are the main items.

Among the budget items is $33,350 for equipment for an athletics and recreation centre: four sailboats, six kayaks, two pool tables, 10 sleeping bags, 10 sets of cross country skiis, and other things.

The council also ratified a one-year contract with 115 members of the faculty association, which provides for a 16.3 per cent pay raise between April 1 and March 31, 1976.

The contract, still to be ratified by the association, provides for binding arbitration in case of disputes.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Convict Fredrich William Gatenby's taste of freedom lasted five months.

But it has ended up costing him an extra 10 months in jail.

That was the sentence Judge William Ostler handed down in Victoria provincial court Thursday after Gatenby, 34, pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large from William Head prison.

Gatenby, serving 6½ years for breaking and entering, failed to return from a temporary pass on July 17. He had been in jail 29 months and was due for release on that very day, in 1976.

The fugitive told Ostler he went to the Okanagan, got a job, and "tried to prove I could make it on my own".

Defence lawyer Rodney Smith said Gatenby had been at William Head for nine months during which time he had received a number of temporary passes and had become involved with a church group.

On July 17, just as he was about to be issued a pass to attend a meeting at a Victoria residence, Gatenby was told his parole was going to be denied because of his lengthy criminal record.

Smith said Gatenby became upset, panicked and left.

The lawyer said passes are normally withheld for a few months if parole is denied.

"Perhaps in this case there was an indiscretion on the part of an official," he suggested.

Gatenby said his decision to flee "happened on the spur of the moment". He said he didn't realize the consequences of what he had done until the next morning but by that time, he reasoned, he was in so much trouble he might as well make a run for it.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett read Gatenby's record which dated back to 1959 and included two convictions for escape and one for a prison break.

Smith pointed out Gatenby had 48 months left to serve and asked Ostler to take that into consideration in setting sentence.

"One wonders when this young man is going to stop punishing himself," the judge said, warning any further conviction for escape would likely result in the maximum sentence (two years).

A 37-year-old man, on parole "a scant day" before he returned to crime, was returned to jail for one year after pleading guilty to fraud.

Ronald Alvine Douglas, 37, was charged with defrauding the human resources department of $370 in November.

He had been released from William Head Nov. 8 and the same day, stating he had found lodgings at 1013 Pendergast, applied for welfare at the Fairfield office. He received $160.

A week later he went to the Esquimalt office and, giving an address of 912 Selkirk, received $220.

He received another $180 from Esquimalt office on Nov. 29, a $210 cheque from Fairfield on Dec. 5, and a $10 Christmas bonus on Dec. 16 from Esquimalt.

Douglas acknowledged the facts read by Birkett but denied he had kept the Christmas bonus.

"I sent that cheque back," he said.

Birkett reviewed the accused's record which included a number of convictions for false pretence in Ottawa, Halifax and Vancouver over the past two years.

Douglas appealed for "mercy from the court" saying he had "five children in Ottawa to support".

"You ask for mercy, but what about the public, what about them asking for mercy," Ostler repied.

"Here you were on parole one scant day and you resorted to crime again . . . it is impossible to understand."

The conviction has meant revocation of Douglas's parole. The sentence Ostler set will begin at the expiration of the term Douglas is serving.

A commercial fisherman lost his catch of shrimp and was fined $50 for violating a B.C. Fisheries regulation.

Colin Vader pleaded guilty to setting shrimp traps near McPhail's Point in Saanich Inlet in an area closed to commercial fishing.

Vader explained he had just bought his fishing boat 10 days before and "had no idea I was violating the regulations."

"But it is your responsibility to find out what areas are open or closed," Ostler said. "That much can be reasonably expected by anyone who is fishing commercially."

Vader said he inquired into the regulations . . . the next day.

The crown requested forfeiture of the catch, estimated a about 65 pounds of shrimp.

The maximum penalty under the regulations is a $1,000 fine.

Mary Francine Hewton, 17, of 500 Millstream, was fined $75 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana.

Crown counsel said the girl was arrested in the Empress Hotel beer parlor for investigative purposes Wednesday and taken to the city lockup where six one-ounce baggies of marijuana were found tucked into her socks.

★ ★ ★

An 18-year-old youth who kicked and damaged a plastic garbage can in an argument with staff at MacDonald's Hamburgers, 1500 block Cedar Hill Crossroads on Dec. 16, was fined $35 and ordered to pay $75 compensation.

Michael Wayne Doughty, 4047 Magdeline, pleaded guilty to mischief.

Doughty was stopped on the street outside the restaurant and volunteered to pay for the damage he'd done but was told it was the company's policy to proceed with charges in all cases of disturbances, without exception.

★ ★ ★

John Soderman's running battle with the Income Tax office came to a head once again, and it has cost him $90 in fines.

Soderman, 49, of 790 Falkland, pleaded guilty to three counts of Income Tax infraction. The charges stem from his failure to file a report on his earnings in 1970.

He stated, through counsel, he had no earnings that year and thus would only file a "nil" report.

But the tax department has sought the report nevertheless since 1971 because he is part owner of small janitorial business for which tax reports are filed each year. He was brought to court on the same matter in Nov. 1972 and fined $50.

"Why doesn't he file it and get it over with instead of carrying on a battle with the department, which is futile?" Ostler asked.

★ ★ ★

Seventeen-year-old Holly Dyrland, 4058 Corners Place, was placed on six months probation for obtaining lodgings by fraud.

Last month she pleaded guilty to skipping from the Westwind Motor Inn, 741 Goldstream, without paying a $44.10 bill. She stayed in the hotel four days in November.

Ostler ordered her to make restitution.

Reading from a probation officer's report, which he called "very disturbing", Ostler noted the girl had become "deeply involved with criminals" and, despite her age, had indulged in marijuana, hashish, amphetamines and MDA.

★ ★ ★

Judge Fred Green sentenced Frank Norman Thomas, 50, of Sooke to three months in jail for drinking-driving infractions.

Thomas had been charged July 23 with driving while his blood alcohol exceeded .08 per cent and while his licence was suspended.

Green prohibited the accused from driving in Canada for 18 months, placed him on probation for 10 months with the conditions he abstain from alcohol and receive pyschological treatment.

★ ★ ★

Cornelius Ackermans' punishment for impaired driving was to lose his job for a month.

At least that will be the effect of a one month prohibition Green imposed on the 24-year-old truck driver.

Appreciating the consequences, the judge set a fine of only $100, well below the normal.

Ackermans, of 4769 Cordova Bay had pleaded guilty to driving on Seaton and Kamloops Dec. 21 while impaired.

JANITORS REVISE DEMANDS

Tradesmen, janitors and custodians employed by Greater Victoria school board will be asked at a membership meeting Sunday night to approve submission of a revised wage proposal to the board, union spokesman Bob Cunningham said today.

The move follows a mediation meeting Thursday between the board and Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Cunningham, vice-president of Local 382, said another mediation meeting will be held Tuesday.

Arabs Aid Yugoslavia

BELGRADE (WP)—In what is thought to be the first major Arab oil-dollar investment in Communist eastern Europe, Kuwait announced Thursday that it would help finance a petroleum pipeline from Yugoslavia's Adriatic Coast into the Soviet bloc's oil-distribution system.

The pipeline project has been planned for some time, but doubts were growing about the Eastern Europeans' ability to find the financing.

The Kuwaiti announcement shook analysts who had assumed that the conservative Arab oil producers were looking primarily at the industrial West as the outlet for their surplus petroleum revenues.

That is still the assumption, but the willingness of a conservative Arab government like Kuwait to invest in Eastern Europe may indicate that Arab financiers are thinking of a broader diversification of their foreign-investment programs than had been realized.

Kuwaiti Finance and Oil Minister Abdel Rahmal Atiqi said that Kuwait was interested in the pipeline because it will "lead to the creation of firm ties between the Arab world, and Kuwait in particular, with the lands through which this pipeline will go."

TENTH OF RAFFLE TICKETS SOLD

The Vancouver Island Housing Association for the Physically Disabled is still selling tickets for raffle of a two-acre lot on South Pender Island.

Only $5,500 has been collected through ticket sales since October, but it is hoped the target of $50,000 will be reached before the draw Feb. 15.

Raffle proceeds will go toward construction of a $700,000 housing complex for the handicapped to be built in Saanich near the Battin-Fielding residence for the handicapped and senior citizens.

The Victoria Real Estate Board and the Association of Real Estate Salesmen are joint sponsors of the draw, and tickets are available through both organizations' members.

Booths are also being set up at most shopping centres in the Victoria area on Saturdays throughout January.

The apartment complex will be partially financed by provincial and federal governments. Sketch plans for the building are being completed for presentation to the senior levels of government.

It is hoped construction will begin this year.

The two-storey building will provide apartment accommodation — 24 single rooms and five double rooms — with a common dining area. Plans are designed for those confined to wheelchairs or with crutches, walkers or canes.

Tickets are $1 each.

'Buying-In' Time for Immigrants

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The Federal Government should require new immigrants to Canada to "buy-into" the country, Progressive Conservative MP Bob Wenman said Thursday.

Ottawa should impose stringent regulations on immigrants and severely curtail plans for an estimated 200,000 newcomers this year, he said.

Those accepted should be required to assume five-year residency in areas of low density and low unemployment in an effort to reduce economic and development strain on areas such as the Lower Mainland, he added.

In addition, he suggested a federal policy requiring most applicants to obtain a resident sponsor, who would provide a form of financial insurance as well as adjustment support.

"It's a privilege and not a right for anyone to come to Canada and I think there should be a buying-in time," he said.

Wenman was particularly concerned about the impact of large-scale immigration on his own constituency, which he said he expected to bear the brunt of growth in the Lower Mainland.

The expected 1975 quota of 60,000 should be cut in half "at least" and applicants accepted from a wider range of countries, he added.

Wenman said there has been a reluctance by many members of Parliament to speak against immigration policy.

However, he recalled a recent taxi ride in Ottawa where he asked the East Indian driver if the man would be offended if he spoke against current policy in the House.

"He said to me: 'It's about time. I'm a lawyer driving a taxi and I don't want you to bring three other lawyers in from Pakistan to get my job driving a taxi'."

PETITION SEEKS NOOSE RETURN

VANCOUVER (CP) — A petition demanding enforcement of capital punishment for slayers of police officers and prison guards has been drawn up by a local group and is ready for distribution across Canada.

The petition is the work of Canadians for Law Enforcement and Application Now (CLEAN), formed about a month ago.

Marg Gregory, a former Progressive Conservative federal candidate and spokesman for the group, said Canadians will be asked to sign the petition and send it to their local member of Parliament.

She said the group was formed to discourage the federal cabinet from commuting the death sentence of murderers of law enforcement officers and prison guards if they have exhausted all possible court appeals.

"The law is there and they're (the cabinet) not obeying it," she said.

DUCKS POISONED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wildlife officials suspect insecticide poisoning caused the death of more than 70 ducks in Ladner during the past few weeks.

The federal Environmental Protection Service, the Canadian Wildlife Service, and the provincial Fish and Wildlife Branch have launched a joint study to isolate cause of the kill and prevent it from happening again.

Biologists said they believe the birds, found in flooded potato and cabbage fields, were poisoned by a group of insecticides known as carbamates.

Health Portection Branch, and biologists said it would take about four weeks to determine the specific cause of death.

Ground Rules Set For Home Grants

OTTAWA (CP) — Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. released a pamphlet Thursday outlining requirements to qualify for the $500 home-buyers grants announced by the government last year.

The grants program came into effect Nov. 1 and runs until Oct. 31, 1975.

The pamphlet lists these restrictions:

—Mobile homes qualify provided they carry Canadian Standards Association CSA certification number Z240.

—Members of a co-operative housing association who occupy units in the co-operative project are eligible for the grant.

ERAWAN NOW FACING $2.6 MILLION BILL

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British freighter Erawan could pay damage bills totalling $2.6 million for its 1973 collision in English Bay with the Japanese freighter Sun Diamond.

A federal Court of Canada ruling found the Erawan totally liable for the collision, which Sun Diamond lawyer David Smith said later will see a claim against the Erawan "somewhere around $1 million." Damage sustained by the Erawan is about another $1 million.

Additionally, the Erawan is facing action being brought against it by the federal government for the estimated $600,000 cost of cleaning up the oil spill caused by the collision.

Smith said the Sun Diamond's claim was based on $500,000 damage sustained by the vessel in the collision, plus another $500,000 for "lost time, salvage and other costs."

Fired Police Chief To Sue

NELSON (CP) — Police Chief Clifford Barager said Thursday he will sue for wrongful dismissal after being informed by mayor Tex Mowatt he has been relieved of his duties.

The mayor said internal problems on the force were the reason behind the Thursday firing.

Chief Barager said he would not talk about his dismissal until he had discussed the matter with his lawyer.

He said he had been with the RCMP for 24 years until he was appointed chief of the Nelson force two years ago.

The position became vacant when former mayor Louis Maglio called for the dismissal of police chief H. M. Tomlinson on grounds of lack of leadership and administrative capabilities.

Mayor Mowatt said deputy chief Gordon McPhail has been appointed acting chief.

Okanagan Crackdown On Phoney Phone Use

KELOWNA (CP)—The Okanagan Telephone Company is cracking down on persons in the Kelowna area who obtain telephone service by fraud.

Jim Tooley, customer service manager here, said Thursday an investigator has been assigned to work in the Kelowna office in response to an increase in the number of fraudulent telephone calls. He added that Okanagan telephone now is recovering between $50 and $100 a day through rebilling as a result of its investigations, and several charges of fraudulently obtaining phone service have been laid.

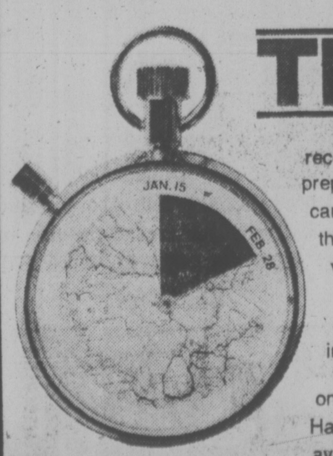
On March 1, the Modified Grid System of claim staking will take effect in British Columbia. This is a far superior method of locating and identifying mineral claims. It should lead to increased discoveries and developments, while virtually eliminating conflicting claims.

TIME OUT



Before this can happen, records must be revised and maps must be prepared, using the Modified Grid System. And care must be taken that the new system and the present system are not confused. So, there will be a moratorium beteween January 15 and February 28 on claim staking in British Columbia. Remember, no claim staking during this six-week period.

The Days of Steam Sweat and Danger

One man pitched against a forest giant with only the brawn of his arm and the sweat he was willing to keep his saw oiled to tell who would be the victor. Before the final act of this particular battle, Louis Suisdahl poses in Bella Coola in 1913.

Old-time clearing methods were one example of waste since many of the trees felled at this Cowichan Lake bee in 1894 were burned with only a few saved for timber.

It was steam and sweat, long hours and dangerous conditions, in the logging industry of yesteryear.

Nostalgia is the rage today but the "good old days" were not so good. They are, however, a part of our history.

The changes have been dramatic.

In much less than a century, huge diesel trucks have replaced oxen to bring the logs out, the two-man handsaw has been succeeded by a single faller with power saw, and union organizers are no longer kept out of camps by police manning roadblocks.

New work methods have revolutionized the industry but an equally significant revolution has changed the conditions in which loggers work.

A faller in 1907 earned between $2.75 and $3.25 a day. Today he earns $93.45.

Owen Brown, who was president of Duncan Local 1-80 of the International Woodworkers of America from 1942 to 1948, recalls conditions in the Cowichan area in the 1920s.

"The men established their own working conditions in those days. They would work under any conditions that they were told to. As is today, production was a big factor in work. It was even more so in the early 1920s.

"For example, suppose I was hired as a rigging slinger and we had a log pusher, as a hooktender would be. He would be standing three or four hundred feet from you. He would see you dive in there and estimate how long you should take to set the choker, then holler 'go ahead.'

"He would never wait to see if the man was in the clear but only wait as long as he thought it would take to hook up the choker. This is how so many men got killed in the early days of logging."

Weldon Jubenville, a former IWA president in Duncan who now works for a forest management company, remembers the 1930s when he was a faller.

"When I first started in the woods we had to supply our own tools, axes, saws, wedges, etc. We had to supply our own transportation. There was no health and welfare, no statutory holidays, no seniority, no vacation with pay. In fact you didn't have any security. In other words, management could fire you anytime they wanted to for any reason and you had absolutely no recourse."

Here is how he remembers the camp bunkhouse in Sooke:

"There were no washrooms or showers. Cold water was piped in from one of the creeks to a long wooden trough which was outside. If anything warmer was wanted, water had to be put in the wash basin and then heated on the pot-bellied stove in the bunkhouse.

"The stove was in the middle of the one-room building which held about eight men. There were no drying facilities so clothes were hung around the stove and of course everyone slept in the same room. Needless to say, it stunk like a pig sty."

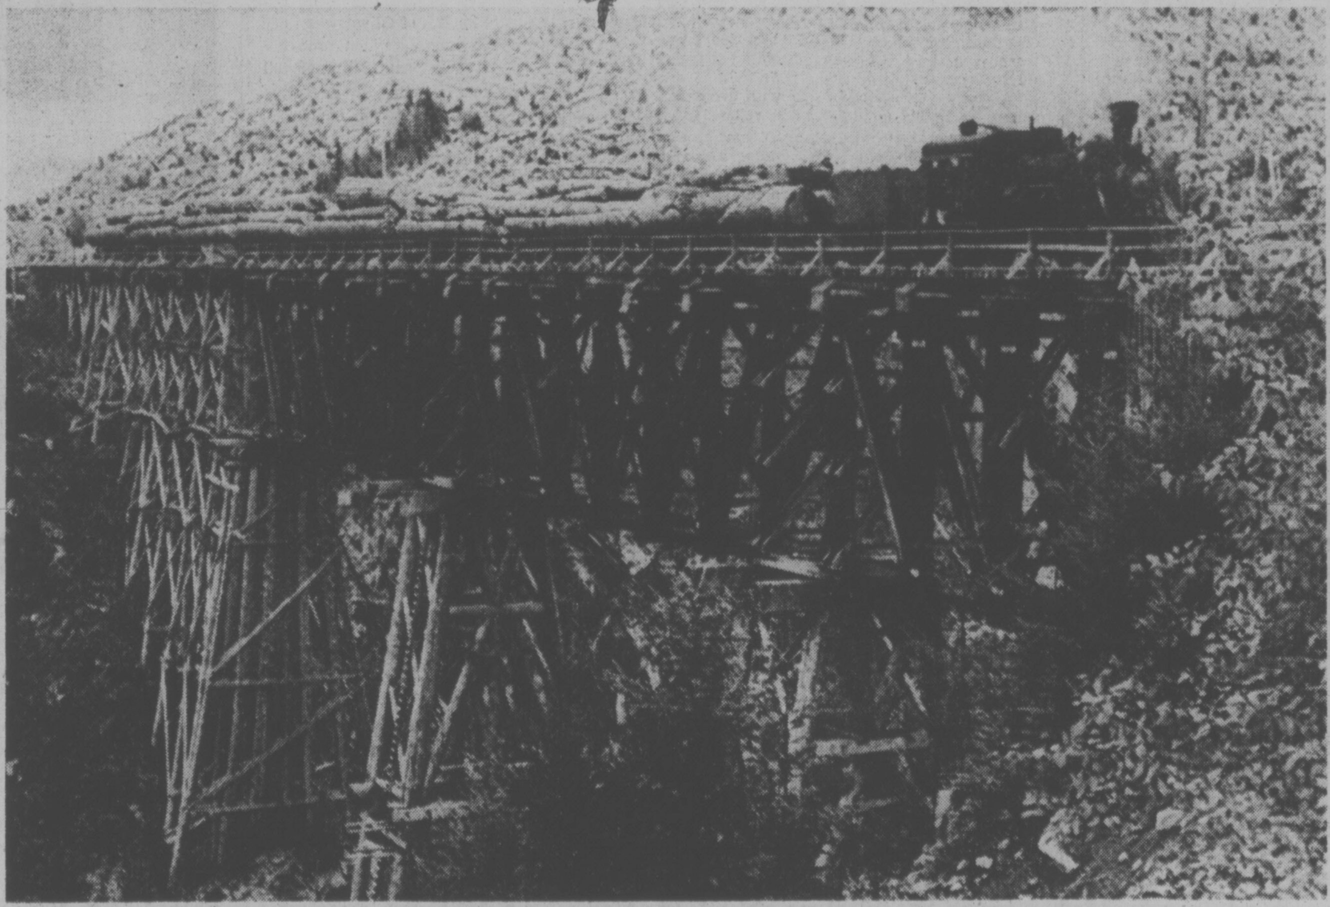
Ed Linder, who has been financial secretary of the Duncan local since 1948, recalls the late 1930s when he was working as a hooktender.

"The boss apparently had a friend who had done my type of work before somewhere else so when I reported back after the Christmas shutdown, I had been replaced by a 'friend.' So I was out of a job—very simple. The company did not have to meet a grievance committee."

Joe Morris, the president of the Canadian Labor Congress, and a former IWA president in Duncan, recalls an attempt to organize a union at the Chemainus planing mill in 1934:

"During this organizing period there were about 27 of us who joined the union, and over a period of time we were all phased out of the operation."

From oxen to diesel trucks, handsaws to powersaws, wood spar trees to mobile steel spars, skidroads to real roads, the industry has changed greatly. Nostalgia is sweet but it's no substitute for the conditions in which today's loggers work compared with years ago.



Known to train buffs as West Coast Special, BCFP's Locie No. 8 is seen lumbering across Bear Creek Bridge. It was most modern Heisler to work on Vancouver Island at that time.

Lest we forget, there was also sail. Above a ship takes on lumber at Chemainus around the turn of the century, and below the sight at Genoa Bay in 1913.

January School Start Ruled Out at UVic

A recommendation that first and second-year university students be permitted to start their academic year in January failed to win the approval of University of Victoria's senate Wednesday.

Dean of Academic Affairs John Dewey said the motion was prompted by student demand and was designed to improve the availability of services to students by permitting them to enrol in January.

A survey, conducted by a special senate committee, indicated 36 per cent of students would have started in January if permitted, he said.

The committee found it "very difficult to find valid reasons to prohibit student enrolment then . . . and senate must realize a significant portion of enrolment comes from community colleges now on the semester system."

Dewey said it has also been suggested that students graduating from high school in mid-January should be able to enrol in university following graduation.

He said some 400 students would be interested in transferring from a community college or another university to begin academic training in January.

But senate felt the move might pressure some departments to offer courses that started in January "against their better judgment" just to round out the program for the student starting in January.

Professor I. D. Pal said 17 of 21 departments in the faculty of arts and science offer no courses which start in January, and the topic was referred for more faculty discussion.

The province's three universities should sit down with high school representatives and come to some agreement to end "differential treatment" of high school graduates intent on starting higher education in January.

The suggestion, by dean of education George Pedersen, was designed to establish a province-wide policy for a growing number of high school students who graduate in January.

Pedersen said in a number of cases whether or not a student immediately goes on to high education depends on the individual high school policy.

"What you see is some high school students being treated somewhat differentially," he said. Some principals release their graduates early to allow them to attend community colleges, and others don't.

Another recommendation, by the same committee, however, received unanimous approval without discussion.

Senate decided University of Victoria would not re-organize the academic year into a tri-mester system.

Senate was asked to consider the move by the students council which, after conducting a survey last year, spoke strongly in favor of a tri-mester system.

An additional survey, conducted by the senate committee, however, found only 10 per cent of students would actually participate in a tri-mester system.

City Women Twig To Self-Defence

A new program aimed at teaching women how to protect themselves from criminals is gaining impetus in Greater Victoria.

Conducted by the RCMP in Colwood, the program describes 10 basic things a woman can do to protect herself from attack, and 10 basic ways she can get out of potentially harmful situations.

The first major class was held Wednesday night at the Westwind International Inn on Goldstream with about 90 women employees from Royal Bank branches attending.

There were lectures, a film, "Lady Beware," and discussions on all phases of self protection, such as what to do when you receive an obscene phone call, or are suddenly confronted with a flasher.

Co-ordinator of the program, Const. Don Alexander, said the course has drawn heavily upon the successful hitch-hiker program developed by Saanich police and used in the school system in Saanich.

The Colwood program hopes to attract a wider range of women.

PROVINCE PAYROLLS UP 5%

OTTAWA (CP) — Payrolls of governments for nine provinces and the territories grew by almost five per cent during the year to the end of September, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

The total at the end of September of 328,122 full-time and part-time employees does not include British Columbia government workers and employees of provincial Crown corporations. The increase during the year was 14,287.

British Columbia figures have not been available to Statistics Canada since former premier W. A. C. Bennett ordered his government officials not to provide the figures after a dispute with federal government about an unrelated matter, a Statistics Canada spokesman said.

The total for the nine provinces and territories includes workers for departments and agencies, institutions, regulatory commissions and special funds.

Institutions include hospital workers, provincial jail employees and teachers and staff of post-high-school teaching facilties. Also included are public school teachers in New Brunswick, the only province that pays teachers direct, instead of providing indiect support to school boards.

Ad Campaign for Tourism Urged

The 1975 tourist season probably will be no better than 1974 unless the provincial government mounts a "Come to B.C." advertising campaign, says D. G. Butler, a spokesman for the Vancouver Island Motels Association.

He said a vigorous advertising campaign could lure some first-time visitors who normally go overseas for their holidays.

"The recession can be an advantage as well as a disadvantage — people will want to stay closer to home," he said.

Butler was commenting on a statement by Empress Hotel manager Bill Gray that 1975 would be the year of the hard sell because of the recession in North America.

Butler said he agreed with Gray's viewpoint and felt it was up to the provincial government's tourist branch to take the lead in promoting the province with a special campaign this year.

There was an opportunity to increase the number of tourists from the Prairies as well as from the United States.

During 1974, Victoria area motels had about as many tourists as in 1973. However, the industry was concerned about the lack of growth to match the increase in motels on the Island.

While forecasters have mixed views about 1975, most seem to feel the level of tourists in 1975 would be about the same as in the past two years.

This was not a reason for pessimism but showed the need for a vigorous campaign to improve the situation.

Butler said a decision by B.C. Ferries to remove tourist brochures from its racks "hasn't done us any good either."

Cancer-Linked Virus Traced by Scientists

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two U.S. National Cancer Institute scientists say they have found for the first time a virus associated with human cancer.

If confirmed by additional research, the discovery could lead to improved methods of treating the particular form of cancer involved — a variety of leukemia — as well as ways of testing people for it.

"They consider it a significant step," said an NCI spokesman. "It has important ramifications."

The virus particles were isolated by Drs. Robert Gallo and Robert Gallangher in cells of a 61-year-old woman stricken with acute myelogenous leukemai, a relatively rare form of blood malignancy that generally strikes adults.

The finding was not considered a breakthrough in cancer studies because the researchers still must attempt to isolate similar virus particles from other patients. That work is under way at the government research centre.

"There's a lot of research that needs to be done," the spokesman said.

There have been claims in the past of the detection of cancer viruses in humans but subsequent work failed to confirm them. The NCI spokesman said Gallo and Gallagher took "extraordainary measures" to guard against possible contamination of their experiments by animal viruses, a common event in virological work.

It was pointed out that the association of a human virus with leukemia does not mean the disease is contagious.

Gallo and Gallagher initially reported their discovery at a meeting of the American Society of Hematology last month in Atlanta. They plan to publish the results of their work in the magazine "Science" this month.

Acute myelogenous leukemia afflicts about 4,000 Americans each year and few of its victims survive as long as a year after contracting it.

Super Truck Does It All

It's the biggest logging truck in the world but it looks more like a giant roller skate, according to Cliff Burrows, co-designer of the super truck for Butler Bros. Equipment Ltd. of 2046 Keating Cross Road.

"If you could see it loaded from the air it would look like a pile of logs on wheels," Burrows said.

It is long and low, designed to have the logs resting on top of the cab.

Conceived by company president Claude Butler, it was constructed in one year by six men at a cost of $200,000, including funds for testing.

The testing begins next week at the Keating Cross Road gravel pit to check turning radius and other steering features.

Burrows said the truck is definitely number one.

Largest logging truck on record is one built by an American firm, Kenworth, which carries a 100-ton load with trailer. The Butler truck carries a 200-ton load with trailer.

"More important," says Burrows, "our truck will carry 100 tons without trailer. That is important in the bush were manoeuvrability is limited. If you have ever tried to back up a trailer you will know what I mean."

Burrows says the truck has a big future both for logging and for large industrial projects like oil drilling in the desert.

CAR WASH
SNOW SHOVELS $3 EACH

WHO SAID you don't have to shovel Victoria weather? Nature's reminder that it can happen here prompted a Hillside service station to lay in a stock of snow removers in case custom goes slack in the car-washing department. (John McKay photo)

SECOND FIRE DESTROYS HOME

The Sooke fire department is investigating a fire that broke out twice Thursday and destroyed a house at 2642 Sooke River Rd.

"We're suspicious, that's all we can say," Fire Chief L. G. Jones said today.

The two-storey wood frame house, insured for $30,000, was owned by Gordon Jirsch.

Jones said the fire first broke out about 2:30 p.m. Thursday and was extinguished by firemen in about half an hour.

Around 6:30 p.m. one of his men passed the house and the fire was still out, Jones said.

At 6:50 p.m., when the fire department was again called, the house was completely ablaze and couldn't be saved, he said.

No one was in the house either time, said Jones.

Cold, Snow To Stay Weekend

Up to four inches of fresh snow on Thursday likely will remain on the ground over the weekend as temperatures drop well below freezing tonight and more snow flurries are expected.

Side streets, secondary roads and driveways presented a motoring hazard throughout Greater Victoria as the new snow turned to ice, although main streets and highways were generally safe if caution was used.

There is some uncertainty in the immediate weather outlook, but the main choice today appeared to be between a cold weekend and a sharply cold weekend, depending upon movement of air down the Gulf of Georgia and Haro Strait before a Pacific disturbance reaches the coast.

The air moving south brought a temperature of 36 below to Prince George early today and a mere 5 above in Prince Rupert. On the north coast winds were 35-45 mph.

The chance of snow flurries here tonight will be followed by increasing north winds to 15-20 mph and possibly more flurries Saturday.

Temperature tonight is expected to be 20 degrees, with a high of 35-40 Saturday.

But the Pacific front is about 1,000 miles off-shore and if it moves on to the continent it will be somewhat warmer and produce snow or rain showers by Sunday and rain by Monday, forecasters predict.

Their outlook for Thursday was almost dead on, as snow began falling on Victoria by late morning and continued until about 8 p.m. Winds were not quite what was forecast.

Up-island, conditions are still sub-Arctic with temperatures below freezing and up to a foot of snow.

PART OF 'PRESSURE TACTICS'

CUPE Eyes Overtime Ban

The city outside workers' union will consider an official ban on overtime next week, a union spokesman said today.

Jim Walker, president of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said some outside workers have already begun an unofficial, voluntary overtime ban on an individual basis.

An official ban "will be considered by the executive early next week, and all areas of pressure tactics really, because that's what they're (the city) doing," he said.

Some workers have decided it isn't worth the $6.63 hourly overtime rate when construction laborers make more than that in straight-time wages, he said. But he added that crews did salt ice-covered roads overnight.'

The city and the union met Wednesday with mediation officer Clark Gilmour but the union said no progress was made. Another meeting will be held Jan. 21 and until Labor Minister Bill King tells the union Gilmour's report has been received, the union cannot implement its strike decision.

The 280 outside workers, along with other CUPE members in Greater Victoria, have been offered and have rejected a 15.75 per cent wage hike for 1975.

Union spokesmen said the increase won't eliminate pay disparities between local government workers and employees of public and private agencies doing similar work.

Walker said percentage increases heavily favor high-paid workers.

He said Camosun College instructors are about to approve a 16.3 per cent wage increase on pay levels ranging from $11,532 to $20,848, but the low end for college instructors was about the high end for municipal workers.

"We can't talk percentages in these present negotiations . . . I don't know what we would need in a percentage figure to come to that" (the amount likely to be awarded college instructors).

Meanwhile, mediation meetings have been arranged for various dates next week involving employees at the Capital Regional District, Saanich, Esquimalt and Greater Victoria school board.

Draft Runs Out At Colwood Inn

The Colwood Inn ran out of draft beer today, a victim of the temporary closure of Carling O'Keefe brewery in Vancouver.

The Colwood pub will remain open, however.

A spokesman for the hotel said bottled beer will be available and the beer parlor would stay open on that basis as long as it could.

Also affected by the Carling O'Keefe shutdown are Westwind International Motor Inn at Langford and King John Inn at 2668 Sooke Road.

Both hotels expected to run out of draft beer on Saturday.

About 220 employees of Carling O'Keefe have stopped work to protest the layoff of 60 workers in the Christmas season.

As a result, the brewery stopped production on Dec. 27.

The three local beer parlors can buy draft beer only from Carling O'Keefe but they can purchase bottled beer from all companies.

Pollen Scolds Dowell

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen again threw the book at the Greater Victoria Library Board Thursday, with claims that the board's 1975 provisional budget contains unnecessary frills and lacks fiscal discipline.

In particular, he rebuked the board's chairman, Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell, for attempting to pass off a substantial budget increase as a modest one.

In a circular letter to municipalities which accompanied copies of the budget, Dowell noted it would require an increase in municipal contributions of less than 18 per cent over 1974.

That, said Pollen at a city finance committee meeting, was "a most misleading and preposterous assertion."

★

He said the fact that the draft budget is based on a doubling of provincial contributions — from $60,000 to $120,000 — but does not include provision for staff salary increases now under negotiation pushes the actual increase closer to 35 per cent.

Referring to Dowell's statement that the provisional budget was achieved "by dint of rigorous pruning and cost-cutting," Pollen said: "It really does bring up a little bit of nausea."

The mayor said the library budget has risen by more than 100 per cent over the last five years, and the city's share of about half a million dollars is more than Victoria spends on all aspects of recreation, including entertainment facilities and financial support to such groups as the Victoria Symphony and the Art Gallery.

He was not questioning the importance of the library's prime function, the dissemination of books and information, but he was challenging the need to extend its scope to include 8 millimetre and 16 millimetre films, picture loans, and "all kinds of records and music from rock to classical."

The committee tabled the budget pending a meeting next week with library board representatives.

Open Talks Last Only 11 Seconds

A "public" negotiating meeting between the city and the firefighters union lasted 11 seconds Thursday before two reporters were told to leave by city manager Jim Bramley.

He asked the reporters if they were present by invitation.

When told the union had publicly stated it wanted open negotiations, and after hearing local president Ross Cameron say he had no objection to the press attending, Bramley indicated it is not City Hall policy for negotiations to be open.

Mayor Peter Pollen, who had earlier welcomed public negotiations saying nothing but good could come of them, denied later there is a conflict between himself and Bramley.

"I put Mr. Bramley a little bit on the spot," Pollen told reporters.

"But as far as I am concerned, if Mr. Bramley deemed it advisable to have a closed meeting, then I would fully support him."

Pollen also said "I'm not against negotiations being open but if the parties do not wish it to be made public, then so be it."

Late last year, the Greater Victoria Library Board tried to have open negotiations but the Canadian Union of Public Employees refused to go along.

The 104-member firefighters union, whose contract expired Dec. 31, wants a one-year contract with a 10 per cent pay raise plus a cost-of-living clause stating that for every one per cent or portion of that in the consumer price index increase, a similar amount shall be added to the wage structure. First-class firefighters currently earn $1,086 a month.

But Which Way Do You Aim a Sun-Dial?

THE EVERGREENS THAT we fetched from the woodlot have gone up in fragrant smoke. The decorations are back in the attic. It was a fine holiday, one that brought Ron North from Victoria and Sue and Steve by icy roads from Edmonton, and if left us a cargo of gifts that will prove their usefulness in the months ahead.

When Win and I start another year's fishing with one of our luckless expeditions after steelhead trout, we'll be better equipped to cope with winter streams. We gave each other chest waders by mutual decision arrived at one breezy day last fall.

Hip boots are great as far as they go. But for fishers who let eagerness replace discretion, they don't go far enough. We were casting our flies when a drove of coho salmon arrived upon the scene. Try as we might, we couldn't reach out to them. The inevitable happened. We waded a step deeper, then another step and took a chilly wavelet over our hip-boot tops.

Presently the salmon cruised off to frolic elsewhere. We squished out to the beach, emptied our flooded boots, and built a warmup fire.

"What we need are waders," I said. "Why don't we get 'em for each other?"

Chest waders are useful but not decorative. They sag, they bag No woman can look her best in them, and the sporting goods salesman did not help my pitch when my dear one groped her way into a pair.

"You know," he remarked with misplaced humor, "if you pull the top over your head and tie a string around it, you'll be completely waterproof."

The waders are still to be tested, and so is the brass sundial that poses an installation problem.

We have a place picked for this handsome marker of sunny hours, and a length of chubby drift-log on which to mount it.

But how does one orient the compass points embossed on its rim? Should its 'North' be aimed at true north or magnetic, and how many degrees of leeway do Vancouver Islanders allow for compass deviation? These are matters that must be resolved if our sundial is to keep even casually accurate time, and advice from an expert will be welcome.

We have found storage space for the folding table that will replace a pile of magazines under our projector when we bring out our slides. And one of these days, we'll take time to study a couple of stocking gifts to Win that foreshadow change.

These are English-Metric conversion calculators. One is a ruler fitted with a sliding band, the other a series of tables cased in plastic. Both should help reduce chaos to mere confusion when the impending shift in measurement systems takes place.

To this tally of gifts that pleased, I can add the one-flower vase presented with a small, ceremonious bow by a holiday guest from Japan. The vase itself is a thing of beauty and the package that sheltered it only less so.

We'd heard that in Japan gift-wrapping is a skill that has acquired elements of an art.

First, the outer paper, which was midnight black patterned with white lotus.

Then, wrapped around a delicately-fashioned wooden box, a band of white paper traversed by one bright-red stripe.

"It's traditional," our guest explained. "Perhaps it's for good luck."

And in the box, packed to withstand the hazards of travel, the aquamarine vase which will one day receive the first rose from a gift-bush now leafless in this new January.

There are those who take a dark view of gift-giving. I've never agreed with them, preferring to number giving and receiving among the joys of life.

My feet, comfortably splayed in new moccasins, are grateful to the giver, and in due time we'll enjoy the present that turned up belatedly from California this morning.

A basket of candied fruit, to be admired but not touched until we've worked off the holiday calories!

Educator Dies After Stroke

Prominent educator Henry C. Gilliland, 74, died at Royal Jubilee Hospital Thursday after suffering a stroke Monday.

Gilliland, first dean of education at the University of Victoria, retired from that post nine years ago. UVic chancellor Robert Wallace said today Gilliland's career had been a major contribution to education, both through the province and in the city.

Born in Saskatchewan, he had joined the city school staff in 1918, and was vice-principal of Sir James Douglas School from 1923 to 1928, was later principal of Prince Rupert high school before returning to Victoria and heading Victoria Normal School.

He is survived by his wife, Katherine, 840 Richmond; a son, John, at Memorial University, Newfoundland and a daughter, Jane, Mrs. Douglas Patterson, in Germany.

Funeral arrangements, by Cunningham Funeral Chapel, are pending.

Ask The Times

Q. Where and when was the English colony of British Columbia proclaimed? G. L.

A. The colony was first proclaimed in 1858 in Fort Langley, but the capital was soon after moved to New Westminster. The fort was named in 1827 after Thomas Langley, Hudson's Bay Co. director and was disbanded in 1839. A new establishment (the current Fort Langley) was built several miles further up the river where land was better for agricultural purposes.

B.C. Figure Skaters Off to a Strong Start

City Hopefuls Highlight Opening Competition

LINDA CAMPBELL

DEBORAH PAUL
. . . holds second

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Thursday was a good day for British Columbia's skaters at the Western Canadian figure skating championships.

And Sharon Hallett's "homecoming", a surprisingly-strong performance by Susan Anderson, Jerry Berry and Linda Campbell gave Victorians an added reason to enjoy the opening-day action.

Two titles were decided on the ice and three without a contest. B.C.'s representatives claimed the five crowns and emerged with the lead in the other categories skated Thursday.

A former Victoria skater now training at the North Shore Winter Club in Vancouver, Miss Hallett teamed up with 19-year-old Robert Dick to win the junior pairs.

Eric Thomsen, another North Shore skater, teamed up with Leslie Casper of the Capilano Winter Club to claim the novice pairs title.

The absence of senior competition brought the men's singles to Ted Barton of Vancouver, the dance to Debbie and Randy Burke of Chilliwack, and the pairs to Christine McBeth of White Rock and Dennis Johnston of Port Perry, Ont.

The top four finishers in the junior and novice events and the top three in the senior division advance to the national finals at Quebec City.

The McBeth-Johnston pairing must go through the formality of being judged before qualifying for the Canadian. Unlike Barton or the Burkes, McBeth and Johnston haven't skated in B.C. this year.

Both are registered with the B.C. Figure Skating association but train in Ontario. As a result, they must perform before the judges before entry into the nationals is confirmed.

The victory by Hallett and Dick might be considered one of the minor surprises of the day. They defeated Janet and Mark Hominuke, a Calgary brother-and-sister combination who provided their only opposition.

The Hominukes were Canadian novice pairs champions last season.

Until this year, 13-year-old Miss Hallett skated out of the Racquet Club and Victoria Figure Skating Club with Lennie Scharbach. A mid-summer move to Vancouver resulted in a change of partners.

Anderson and Berry, both 19 and first-year students at the University of Victoria, wound up in third place after their compulsory program in the junior dance.

The 19-year-old Miss Campbell also finished third after the senior women's figures, the first of three events used to determine singles titles. She trailed a pair of 15-year-olds, Susan MacDonald of Vancouver and Deborah Lynn Paul of St. Albert, Alta.

But the spread of ordinal points — determined by the placing of the judges — indicates the senior women's division is a wide-open affair. With the short program and freeskating still to come, anyone can win.

Miss Campbell is especially strong in freeskating.

Old Henry's New Haunt: Big Pig Pond in the Sky

Speaking of snow, this is the week of the big game and the sleighing championships at Blubber Bay.

The hockey match between Vananda and Blubber Bay will take place, as usual, on the old Pig Slough, although the originator, Old Henry won't be there to see it. Matter of fact, Old Henry has missed the last 36 games. He died in 1938.

Still, the game must go on, and will, and organizers are hopeful that the cold weather holds, because the old Pig Slough at best is just what the term implies, a mud-hole; and, if the ice is rough, so what? You should see the game!

The old Pig Slough is where they lost a player one year, too. It wasn't so much that he drowned, but the manner in which the accident occurred that made the news. It was Fat Cliff who was playing goal at the time and if he kept getting harassed by one of the regular occupants of the area, a big sow, that was only one of the problems to be encountered.

At any rate, the Blubber Bay Tigers were off on a foray to the shallow end of the pool . . . er . . . rink, when Fat Cliff spotted his nemesis coming at him from behind the goal. He quickly retaliated, tried to shoo the old sow away, but no luck. Then the ice broke, and Fat Cliff and the old sow disappeared in the muck that was the south goal.

Oh, they got him out finally, but it was too late. Fat Cliff had been buried under the old sow and never did find out who won the game.

You Needed a Good Toe Hold

I had more or less forgotten about the incident until I happened to be out at Pat Bay Airport the other day and ran into Young Charlie. Young Charlie is the son of Old Charlie, a Chinese who used to tend to the company gardens at Blubber Bay, and acted as the unofficial timekeeper at the games under the direction of Old Henry, of course.

Old Henry was always the law because it was his slough, and besides he was the starter for the annual sleigh race from the top of the hill to the Mill Drop.

The Mill Drop was the climax to the race, almost vertical for about 40 yards. Well, it looked vertical then, and it had been buttressed up with planks to help trucks get more traction, especially in the winter. And when the snow came, melted, then froze, well . . . the track was lightning fast. As Young Charlie said, it was the only sleighing course in the country where you started digging your toes in before you even got started. There was a good reason, too, because at the bottom of the drop was the wharf and at the end of the wharf, what else? Water!

Oh, you could take the short route, all right, but that would only get you in trouble. You'd run into a pile of 12 by 12s, and they wouldn't give. So it was better to fall off and forget the sleigh and take a chance of not making the water. Of course you might end up in the log lift, but the guys on the booms were pretty good and rescue was usually swift, too.

Young Charlie was reminiscing, too, about the time they cancelled the Mill Drop because some of the mothers got scared.

Big Dunc Fooled 'Em All

It was all Big Dunc's fault. Dunc was the fat kid in the town, and downhill his sleigh was always the fastest. But Dunc wasn't, and once when he rolled off he didn't jump clear soon enough and rolled into the path of a wood truck. The wood truck was loaded, which was good, because that probably saved his life. Dunc rolled under the front wheel, or the front wheel rolled over him, whichever. Then he got up and went screaming home to mother.

We thought he should have been dead, but he hadn't been hurt at all. With the truck heavily laden the front wheels were barely touching the ground and just bounced off Dunc's tummy.

Nonetheless, panic followed, the race was cancelled, to be re-established a few years ago. And that was why Young Charlie was coming through town. He was on his way to defend his championship and had come all the way from Shanghai just for the occasion.

"I just couldn't let Old Henry down," he said; "He was so good to my father. Dad was with him when he died, you know."

Suddenly the past flashed before my eyes again.

Old Henry was an old prospector who had more or less existed on a diet of rum and canned milk in his latter years. And it was indeed tragic when the end came.

No, it wasn't demon rum which caused his demise. The company store ran out of canned milk.

Ground Game Playoff Key

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A consistent ground game ranks as one of the keys to success in Sunday's National Football League Super Bowl match between Minnesota Vikings and Pittsburgh Steelers.

"You have to establish a ground game first and go from there," says Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who hopes Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier will keep the Steelers going steadily enough so that he can throw because he wants to, not because he has to.

Coach Bud Grant, bringing his Vikings into their third Super Bowl and their second in a row, agrees with Bradshaw's assessment. "You can't live by the pass," he said. "You've got to be able to run the ball."

Overshadowed by Harris, who gained 1,006 yards during the regular season, Minnesota's Chuck Foreman is the mainstay of both the rushing and passing attack. The second-year pro gained 777 yards on the ground and, added another 586 yards as the Vikings' leading receiver with 53 catches. He also led the NFL in scoring among non-kickers with 90 points on 15 touchdowns.

"I feel that, for us to win, I have to touch the ball 20 times," said Foreman, who carried only seven times for 18 yards a year ago in the 24-7 Super Bowl loss to Miami. "We have to run the ball and we have to gain 150 yards on the ground. If we do, we'll win."

Foreman was offensive rookie of the year last season and it was a thrill to make it to the championship then. But he pointed out: "I'm more excited this time than I was a year ago. Last year, I didn't really know what it was all about . . . I didn't have the understanding of what it means to be the world champions. I didn't appreciate the importance of the game.

"It's an honor to be here," Foreman added, "But it's more of an honor to win."

The importance of the game is not lost on Harris, either.

"It's definitely a different feeling," he said. "This is the one we want. All the others were played to get here. Now we've got to go all the way."

For either team to do that, it comes down to which defensive line will do its job the best.

For Minnesota, it means Carl Eller, Alan Page, Jim Marshall and Doug Sutherland closing Harris' rushing lanes, forcing Bradshaw to go to the air, then storming in on him.

For Pittsburgh, it's Mean Joe Greene, L.C. Greenwood, Ernie Holmes and Dwight White (or Steve Furness if White isn't fully recovered from a viral infection) containing the wily, dangerous Fran Tarkenton, a 14-year veteran who has passed for at least 2,000 yards in all but one of those years, and has the league's highest season averages in passes, completions, yardage and touchdown passes.

CATS HELP WHEATIES

Brandon Wheat Kings left Victoria today, but not as empty-handed as intended.

Beaten 4-1 and 6-2 by the Cougars in two Western Canada Hockey League games at Memorial Arena earlier this week, the Wheat Kings managed to pry a player from the Victoria organization.

Cougars have assigned 17-year-old Pat Mallough, a defenceman to the Wheat Kings. A native of Saskatoon who started with Nanaimo Clippers in the B.C. Junior League, Mallough will be returned to the Cougars next season.

Mallough played briefly Wednesday when the Cougars recalled him from Nanaimo.

At the same time, Cougars returned winger-centre Murray Good to the Brandon team. Released to Victoria on a "make-good" basis, Good played in both games against his former mates but apparently lacks the aggressiveness coach Pat Ginnell likes.

Other changes or additions might be announced later today with a press conference called this afternoon. For one thing, the major freeze on league rosters comes at midnight tonight.

In league action Thursday, Medicine Hat Tigers struck for four goals in the final nine minutes, including a pair in the final minute, to edge Winnipeg Clubs 5-4; Kamloops tied New Westminster 5-5 and Edmonton thumped Calgary 9-1.

Skating Fans Missing Bet

Some notes and quotes from the Western Canadian figure skating championships being held at the Racquet Club and Memorial Arena:

The weather and a slight communications problem may have combined to produce a disappointing crowd turnout to Thursday evening's events at Memorial Arena.

It wasn't made plain, but exhibition performers Toller Cranston, Barbara Berezowski, David Porter, Ted Barton and Debbie and Randy Burke DO SKATE EACH NIGHT.

It appears the general public is under the impression Canada's international skaters were to perform only at Saturday's "Parade of Champions."

That's not the case.

Although a few seats remain, Saturday's "Parade of Champions" appear to be heading for a sellout.

It's unlikely there will be any seating problems for tonight's appearance for the guest skaters.

★ ★ ★

Cranston, regarded as the finest freeskater in the world, skates the same program he intends to use at the world championship.

Despite Thursday's small crowd, Cranston skated with an intensity that meant to please the fans. Beads of perspiration showed on his forehead only moments after he started his program.

★ ★ ★

And if your tickets are for tonight or Saturday, make sure Berezowski and Porter skate their encore number. Their enjoyment of skating clearly shows in the encore and reflects the sparkling personality of the team favored to win the Canadian dance title.

★ ★ ★

The finishes in the junior dance and the junior and senior women's singles is expected to provide excitement.

North Shore's Heather Anderson had the lead after the figures in the junior singles, but observers look for a strong finish from fourth-place Kim Scott of Kamloops. Kim was fifth in figures at the provincial meet but skated superbly to win the B.C. crown.

Susan MacDonald of Vancouver, Victoria's Linda Campbell and Deborah Lynn Paul of St. Albert, Alta., could provide a barn-burning finish to the senior women's singles. The spread in ordinal points after Thursday's figures might be the sign of a very close finish.

Ordinals and the slight point spread between the Alberta and B.C. champions is an indication that the junior dance event may wind up on a hectic tone. Greg Ladret and Joanne Sloman of Chilliwack surprised some by taking the lead from Dena Himbeault and Marty Fulkerth of Calgary.

The Alberta champions were eighth in the Canadian junior dance event last year.

Soccer Cash In Portland

PORTLAND (AP) — Supporters of a bid to obtain a North American Soccer League franchise for Portland say local businessmen have pledged the required $350,000 to purchase the franchise.

Portland and Hartford, Conn., are bidding to become the 19th and 20th teams in the NASL, which will open its 1975 season in April.

Should Portland join the NASL, the club will play in the league's western division with Seattle, Vancouver, San Jose and Los Angeles.

Special Nahmint Study Heralds Brighter Future

Some rambling notes along the trail:

It's been a long time coming . . . MacMillan Bloedel and the various provincial and federal resource agencies are in the process of gathering the data needed to draw up a truly integrated land-use plan for the Nahmint watershed, located about 13 miles southwest of Port Alberni . . . The plan, which will protect fish and wildlife while enhancing recreational access, will also form the basis of a management system that could be applied throughout the Vancouver forest district . . . The forest service and Mac and Blo are co-ordinating the project and the study team has invited comments from the various outdoor organizations on Vancouver Island . . . Ah, yes, the winds of change are evident.

Missed out, because my tape recorder began to run low on electricity toward the end of the meeting, was the following special resolution passed by the Vancouver Island Wildlife Association:

"Whereas survey work done by the department of the environment shows that there are approximately 120 killer whales in the waters inside Vancouver Island from Cape Scott to Cape Flattery, and,

"Whereas permits have been granted to allow eight whales to be taken from this population next year for exhibitions in aquariums.

"Therefore be it resolved that the federal government be urged to reduce drastically the numbers of these animals which can be captured until there is conclusive evidence that the population can support this amount of pressure."

Orchard damage and excessive highway kills have forced an extension on the whitetail deer hunting season in the Creston-Arrow Mountain and Lister-Canyon areas . . . The season, on either sex, is now in effect and will run until Feb. 16 . . . Competitive markets, which have resulted in plantings of dwarf trees and high density varieties of fruit trees, have made the orchards more vulnerable to deer damage . . . And, at lead 300 deer were killed by motor vehicles during the 1973-74 winter . . . Hunters, who must first have the regular hunting licence and tags, are required to pick up a special permit from the Creston fish and wildlife branch office.

Figures recently released by the Canadian Ski Patrol System show that approximately 58 per cent of all injured skiers never bothered to take lessons . . . In addition, another 13 per cent had taken less than five lessons . . . Obviously, taking lessons from a qualified instructor is a wise investment in safety.

★ ★ ★

The last hearings on the Skagit will be held in Seattle on Jan. 21 . . . This will be the final chance for environmentalists to present rebuttals to arguments favoring the raising of Ross Dam . . . And, jumping the gun a little, it looks like this fight might be won.

★ ★ ★

Here's a tip for making a device for releasing undersized salmon without the accompanying scale loss which is the greatest cause of mortality . . . Take an ordinary coat hanger and straighten it out . . . Cut off the twisted portion and form one end into a ¾-inch hook . . . At the other end, form a loop to serve as a handle . . . The entire rig should be 10 to 12 inches in length . . . To release a fish, you lift the fishhook up with the hook on the releaser while pulling down on the leader with the other hand . . . A slight shake should then free a lightly hooked fish . . . If the hook is imbedded deeply, cut it off and leave it in the fish . . . It will rust quickly.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Shero Shows One-Team Interest

PHIL ESPOSITO . . . moves up list

Times News Services

Philadelphia Flyers coach Fred Shero says he not only doesn't hear footsteps behind him, he's not even listening.

The Flyers lost 3-1 to New York Islanders on Thursday night, failing to increase their seven-point first-place margin over New York Rangers in the National Hockey League Patrick Division.

Someone asked Shero if he wasn't just a little concerned about the Rangers, who have won seven straight and have been biting into a Philadelphia lead that once reached 15 points over New York.

"I only worry about my team," snapped Shero. "I don't get paid to worry about New York."

Meanwhile, Boston Bruins centre Phil Esposito scored three goals to move into a tie with retired Jean Beliveau in fifth spot on the NHL all-time goal-scoring list. Esposito, whose three goals led the Bruins in a 5-1 win over Vancouver Canucks, now has a career total of 507.

In Thursday's other NHL game, Los Angeles Kings beat Buffalo Sabres 5-2.

Shero, unworried about the Rangers, also refuses to worry about his team's recent inability to put the puck in the net.

"You can't be unhappy because the puck is not going in," Shero began. "It will go in eventually. I'd be unhappy if we didn't get any chances."

The Flyers had their chances—31 shots on goal against Islanders' goalie Billy Smith. They had four power play opportunities, but Smith played them tough in the net. He gave up only a late third period goal by Ross Lonsberry, a shove-in of a loose puck in front of the net.

Shero was of the opinion that both teams played well. "We worked as hard as we could; but they wouldn't go in," said the Flyers' coach, shrugging his shoulders.

The Islanders' victory was their first on Flyers' ice since the Islanders joined the league in 1972.

It was only the second victory for New York in 14 games with Philadelphia over 2½ seasons.

Bob Nystrom, Clark Gillies and Jude Drouin scored the New York goals.

Esposito, who started the current season in seventh place on the league's all-time goal scoring list, could be third by the end of the season at the rate he's going.

Earlier in the season, Esposito passed Norm Ullman of Toronto Maple Leafs, who now has 486 goals. Esposito, now with 41 goals in the first 40 games of his 12th NHL season, could easily overtake Frank Mahovlich's mark of 533 and perhaps even Maurice (Rocket) Richard's 544.

Mahovlich now is in the World Hockey Association while Richard is retired.

Next on the list would be Bobby Hull's mark of 604 and, finally, the all-time leader, Gordie Howe's 786. Hull and Howe are also in the WHA.

Esposito and Greg Sheppard scored to give the Bruins a 2-1 first-period lead and Esposito completed his three-goal performance in the second period.

Timing, Slick Gym Create Problems

A refinished floor and a scheduling mixup earned more notice than the players in Greater Victoria high school basketball ranks Thursday.

The Parkland gym floor, which had been refinished during the Christmas holidays, created most havoc. It marred the performance of players in a girls' encounter and forced immediate transfer of a boys' game.

Belmont Tomahawks, rebounding from their 41-22 opening-game loss to Claremont, adapted best to Parkland's slick floor. With Judy Foley scoring eight points and Sheila Chalmers and Irene Bodman each adding six, Belmont defeated Parkland's Panthers 29-21.

In other games, Reynolds surprised Oak Bay 41-30 while a scheduled Mt. Douglas-Claremont girls 'game wasn't played because of a mixup.

Mt. Doug, with coach Earl Hockin blaming a communication problem over the starting time, arrived late. They showed up after game officials left and the league will make a ruling later to decide if the game will stand as a default or be replayed.

Rhonda Kellar scored 18 points and Linda Rogers added 17 as Reynolds stopped the Bays at Oak Bay. Karen Ross and Thea Gibson each scored six points for Oak Bay.

One boys' game was scheduled at Parklands. But after watching the girls slip and slide on the floor, the boys shifted their game to Belmont. The Braves proceeded to defeat Parkland 63-42.

Bruce Robertson hit for 18 points while brothers Bruce and Dave English each added 12 for Belmont.

Settlement Approved By Curlers

Settlement of a strike will keep the Southern Vancouver Island women's curling playoffs in Lake Cowichan but the girls' playdowns have been shifted from Mill Bay to Victoria's Racquet Club.

A 7½-hour strike by five employees of the Lake Cowichan arena cast the big question mark over the women's playdowns, scheduled to get under way today.

The arena workers are members of Local 180 of the International Woodworkers of America. Key issue in the dispute was the union's demand for back pay for the arena employees, who had been negotiating with the Cowichan Valley Region Board since summer.

The board finally agreed to pay retroactive increases.

Lack of ice at the new Mill Bay rink forced the transfer of the girls' playdowns to the Racquet Club on Jan. 17-19.

There has been no problem with the Vancouver Island senior men's playdowns, which opened in Port Alberni today.

Stockers Pad Point Totals

Stocker North Americans put their concentration into attack Thursday.

Eight players connected for goals as the second-place team overpowered last-place Ingraham Buckaroos 12-4 in a Big Six Hockey League game at Pearkes Arena.

Brent Patterson, Bill Gidden, Gerry Caldwell and Erroll Goulden each scored a pair while Gerry Blanchette, Bayden Robinson, Dave Williams and Wes Zapotichny added singles.

NEW CLOCK APPROVED FOR ARENA

City aldermen Thursday gave an assist to players, officials and fans by recommending a $22,000 budget allocation to purchase a new "sportstimer" for the Memorial Arena.

The present clock is as old as the building, and is anything but an electronic marvel.

Its replacement, similar to the timer in the Vancouver Coliseum, will be somewhat more sophisticated, with digital countdown operation and showing remaining time in penalties.

Esquimalt Pulls Away From Nixons

Esquimalt Buccaneers, whose once-commanding hold on first place had been threatened by Victoria Nixons in recent weeks, earned some breathing space atop the South Island Junior 'B" Hockey League Thursday.

Sparked by John Entzminger's three goals, the Bucs padded their lead to six points by shading Comox 7-4 in an interlocking game with the Northern team at the Sports Centre.

Gord Brooks, Murray Allen, Kevin Kennedy and Paul McDonald added Bucs' other goals while Marty Peterson, with two, Dean Collier and Alain Cyr replied for Comox.

Canuck Goalie Chosen

MONTREAL (CP) — Seven of the nine teams in the Clarence Campbell Conference are represented among the first 12 players chosen for that conference's participation in the National Hockey League's 28th annual all-star game at Montreal, Jan. 21.

Four players of the first-place Philadelphia Flyers of the Lester Patrick Division were selected in the voting among members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association in the nine conference cities.

The four players picked from the defending Stanley Cup champion Flyers were goaltender Bernie Parent, defenceman Jim Watson, centre Bobby Clarke and left winger Bill Barber.

Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers each had two players chosen—defenceman Bill White and right winger Jim Pappin of the Hawks and defenceman Brad Park and left winger Steve Vickers of the Rangers.

Goaltender Gary Smith of Vancouver Canucks, defenceman Denis Potvin of New York Islanders, centre Garry Unger of St. Louis Blues, and right winger Bill Goldsworthy of Minnesota North Stars represent the other four teams.

Fred Shero of the Flyers will coach the Campbell Conference team in the game against Bep Guidolin's Prince of Wales Conference squad.

Shero's Flyers won the West Division championship last season before defeating Guidolin's Boston Bruins for the Stanley Cup. Guidolin now coaches Kansas City Scouts. Shero will pick an additional eight players to round out his 20-man team, but likely will have to select replacements for White and Goldsworthy, both injured.

FANS UNSPOILED BY STAG RECORD

By The Canadian Press

A league takeover of Michigan Stags appears imminent, but the World Hockey Association better not move them out of town if it wants them to win.

Away from Cobo Arena, the financially-troubled team hardly knows the meaning of victory.

At home, Michigan rarely loses, although that hasn't seemed to help draw decent-sized crowds.

Even with Bobby Hull in town, only 3,125 fans turned out Thursday night, but they were treated to an exciting game, which the Stags won 5-4 on Steve West's goal at 4:40 in overtime.

In other games Thursday, Edmonton Oilers beat Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2 and New England Whalers tied 1-1 with Phoenix Roadrunners.

WINNIPEG (4) — Veli Ketola (12th and 13th), Bobby Hull (36th), Ulf Nilsson (13th). MICHIGAN (5) — Tom Serviss (6th and 7th), Reg Thomas (2nd), Bill Evo (2nd), Steve West (7th). Attendance: 3125.

MINNESOTA (2) — John Arbour (3rd), Ted Hampson (13th). EDMONTON (3) — Bruce MacGregor (8th), Rusty Patenaude (14th), Mike Rogers (14th). Attendance: 7050.

Albertans Beckon Stadium Builders

Times News Services

The councils of Alberta's two major cities are busy looking at sports stadiums these days.

With the provincial government supplying a detailed outline of improvements it will finance, Calgary is planning to add 7,500 seats and an artificial turf to McMahon Stadium, site of the 1975 Grey Cup football game.

And in Edmonton, a new one is in the works with city commissioners ready to recommend that a 30,000-seat, $20.9 million Commonwealth Games Stadium be built.

Edmonton Mayor Bill Hawrelak said the new stadium will be constructed northeast of the existing 24,000-seat Clarke Stadium, a location council had already approved.

The new stadium will have 15,000 temporary seats in addition to the 30,000 permanent ones.

Financing will be shared by city, provincial and federal governments with other fund-raising programs adding other monies.

The provincial government's decision to offer Calgary $1.25 million for the limited improvements to McMahon Stadium hasn't created great hand-clapping. City and stadium committee officials feel the province's involvment is "limited."

Grand Tour With a Cockpit View

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

World sailors Rosemary and Hugh Brimacombe

You don't have to be a millionaire to do the grand tour these days.

Prime examples of this are Hugh and Rosemary Brimacombe, who are back in town for a couple of weeks, after which they'll resume their wanderings.

Hugh, a retired bank manager, and his wife, have found all you need to see the world is a good boat, lots of time and some know-how.

Rosemary has more than her share of the latter. Before her marriage, she was a regular performer on the racing circuit at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club in her Cal 20 Skua. In fact, she introduced Hugh to the joys of sailing.

It was in July 1972 that the couple set out from England in their Rebel 41 sloop Rizpah. If you're curious, Rispah was one of King Saul's concubines. The Brimacombes take no credit for naming their boat, being her fourth owners.

Since then, apart from flying home a couple of times, Rizpah has given them a cockpit view of Spain, Portugal, Gibraltar and a hundred other places, including a leisurely seven months in the West Indies.

When they wanted a little company, RVYC friends like Judy Peetz and Rocky Rochfort flew down to join them for a while.

Hugh reports the trip has been a breeze all the way except when a con rod fell through Rizpah's engine in the West Indies, forcing them to get a new engine.

The trip across the Atlantic was eased by having Dick Gobel of the Dutch East Indies along. Dick, who lives aboard his boat in the Spanish port of Marbella, is one of those who's sailed the Atlantic single-handed.

Rizpah is now at the Mexican port of Puerto Vallarta and should arrive in Victoria some time this summer.

As Hugh puts it, "We're taking it easy and seeing all the sights. It's a great life."

They've taken lots of slides and Rosemary is keeping a diary in addition to the ship's log. They've been warned by their RVYC friends that an evening's accounting at the clubhouse will be in order when they're back in home port permanently.

For more shore-bound sailors a trip to the Seattle Boat Show, which goes from Jan. 18 to 25, could provide an enjoyable break.

As in past years, the Turkey Head Sailing Assocation will have an excursion on the last day of the show, buses leaving the Oak Bay Marina. You don't have to ba a THSA member to go along but if you're interested you should phone Chris Mobsby before Jan. 18. You can reach him in the evenings at 598-8480.

THSA has two races planned for Sunday with start times set for 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Fred Neveaux of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, has arranged a series of film showings at the Munro Head clubhouse. The first one is scheduled to start 8 p.m. on Thursday.

Three films will be shown — Learning to Sail, Sails and Australian 18-Footers. The series is open to any member of CFB Esquimalt and members of other sailing clubs in the area.

Several of Victoria's Laser enthusiasts will be in Seattle this weekend for some pretty hot international competition but RVYC plans to hold fun races Saturday at Cadboro Bay for those who can't make it across the border. Start time is 1:30 p.m.

Three races were sailed last Saturday, Andrew Burton winning one, Tim Roots another and Rick McBride pulling off the third.

Crews competing in RVYC's long-distance race Sunday decided discretion was the better part of valor when they reached the vicinity of the Victoria Golf Club and found nothing but wind-tossed white water ahead of them. They decided to call it a day but not before the sloop Encounter, owned by Hugh Bacon and Rod Andrews, broke her mast, another cople of boats hit logs and damaged their rudders and still more ripped mainsails and jibs.

Going back in under bare pole, Jan Huibers' Sea Spell hit eight knots as she surfed on the waves.

"It was a bit hairy but the ride back was great," Jan reports.

Miller Shares Lead

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Johnny Miller, exhibiting the quiet confidence and crisp shotmaking that won him player of the year honors last season, opened the 1975 pro golf tour with a four-under-par 67 and a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the $150,000 Phoenix Open.

Miller, winner of eight titles in the United States and a record $353,000 last season, shared the top spot in this scheduled opening event with Leonard Thompson and John Mahaffey.

Tenpinners Begin Title Trek

Victoria tenpin bowlers start this weekend on a long trek which could earn them berths on the Canadian team which will go to London, England, for the world championships in autumn.

First action in the Victoria regionals starts Saturday at 7 p.m. with the final action slated for 3 p.m. Sunday. All competition will take place at Mayfair Lanes.

There will be two divisions for both men and women. Contestants in the scratch event will bowl 10 games each while those in the handicap section will each roll six games.

BEMAN'S CHARGES OUT-OF-BOUNDS?

LONDON (AP) — British golf officials denied Thursday that the British Open cuts seriously into the American pro circuit.

"American stars need only be away from the United States for one week to come over and compete," said Keith McKenzie, secretary of the Royal and Ancient Club which runs the British tournament.

He was commenting on remarks by Deane Beman, director of the U.S. Professional Golfers' Association, that the American tour is disrupted by Americans playing in the British Open.

HOUSTON (AP) — A memorial service was held Thursday for Don Wilson, former pitcher for Houston Astros who died here Sunday along with his nine-year-old son Alexander when carbon monoxide filled their home.

The 29-year-old Wilson was preparing to start his 10th season with the National League baseball team.

Wilson's widow, Bernice, was released from hospital to attend the service. Mrs. Wilson and daughter Denise, 9, also suffered carbon monoxide poisoning. Denise is in a coma and in critical condition.

SOLUTION MONDAY

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J.A.H. HUNTER

"Here's a combination lock for your bike," said Tom. "Be sure to use it."

Fred grinned. "Thanks a lot, Dad," he replied. "Just what I wanted, but I'll have to remember the combination."

"Well, you can always figure it out yourself," Tom told him. "It's exactly 99 times the total of its four digits, and you won't forget 99."

What was the number?

Thanks for idea to A. G. Bradbury, North Bay, Ontario.

(Answer Monday.)

Yesterday's answer: SAINT was 19867 (prime).

Grid Cards Hike Prices

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Increases in football ticket prices for the 1975 season have been announced by St. Louis Cardinals.

Reserve seats will go from $8 to $10, bleacher seats from $4 to $5 and deluxe room seats and press level seats from $10 to $15.

Owner William Bidwill said Busch Stadium ranks 23rd among the National Football League's 26 stadiums in seating capacity and net revenue from gate receipts in 1975 still will be below the league median.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

To illustrate how much the calibre of bridge play has advanced in the past four decades, observe the deal that follows. It was played in a tournament in 1930. The narration is by the late Williard Karn, one of the nation's finest players in the 1930s.

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◊.

"I held the South hand. The opening lead was the diamond queen.

"(1) Before playing the dummy's only diamond, the king, I considered my combined North-South holding. I had contracted for 10 tricks. With the proper entries, I was sure of four clubs—possibly five—and five hearts—possibly six. The additional trick, in each instance, depended on a successful finesse for the king. I also had two diamond tricks. Hence, my contract was not in jeopardy provided West did not obtain the lead to play spades through dummy's king.

"(2) The next point that I considered was the question of re-entries; the only hope for South (myself) was trumps, since dummy, after following to the first diamond lead, would be void of diamonds.

"These considerations caused me to overtake dummy's king of diamonds with my ace. I then played the heart queen, West covered, and I won the dummy's ace. I returned to my own hand with another trump and finesses clubs. So I was able to discard three losing spades on dummy's long clubs, and use dummy's last trump to ruff my diamond five. I found that I had made 13 tricks.

"The thoughts outlined above passed through my mind within a minute, nor should they require abstruse calculations on the part of anyone at all accustomed to playing. Nevertheless, I found that practically everyone had been favored by the same lead but for no authentic reason, and merely because the players did not stop to think through the entire situation dummy's king of diamonds was allowed to win the first trick in nearly every case.

When this was done, it became impossible to exit from dummy without allowing West to obtain the lead with one of his kings. west then led a spade, and the various South declarers went down to inglorious defeat."

Barrett's Mistakes Seen As Socreds' Only Hope

Canadian Press

The publisher of the Vancouver Province said Thursday the only man who can restore the Social Credit party to power in British Columbia is Premier Dave Barrett — through his mistakes.

Paddy Sherman told the Victoria Rotary Club that his assessment of the New Democratic Government's performance to date was more that of a reporter than of an "establishment press representative."

The government's strength has been in the social field, he said.

"Mincome is good, after silly initial mistakes. So is Pharmacare. There is improved medicare, particularly for the older, the start of a government-run nursing program, and so on," Sherman said.

Other things on the plus side of the government ledger, he added, are Hansard, a question period in the legislature, the right to sue the crown, plus some aspects of car insurance, improvement of bus service in major areas and the B.C. Petroleum Corporation's involvement in the natural gas industry.

On the negative side, Sherman cited the government's rent control, the mineral royalties legislation, its forestry legislation, and Barrett's failure to keep the radical element of his cabinet under control.

He said he doesn't see an election in the near future and expressed grave doubts as to the alternative to the present government.

The Social Credit party tends to destroy its credibility by overkill and was guilty of sloppiness, lack of logic and homework in debate, he said.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett can't control his party and lacks his father's spark so far, Sherman said.

The conservatives, he said, are dead and the group of five Liberal MLAs are split "umpteen ways" and have made no great public impact.'

Bomb Cause Of Crash Off Greece

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bomb on board caused the Trans World Airlines jetliner crash which killed 88 persons off the coast of Greece last September, the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board said today.

Another TWA flight over the same area two weeks earlier also had a bomb hidden in the plane but the device malfunctioned, the safety board said. That device was found in a suitcase after a fire was discovered in the cargo hold.

The successful sabotage was the first against a United States aircraft since 1964 when a Pacific Airlines flight crashed after the pilots were shot.

Fire Lang for Abortion Bias—MD Head

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Bette Stephenson, president of the Canadian Medical Association (CMA), said Thursday that federal Justice Minister Otto Lang should be removed from office for "allowing his personal bias to interfere" with his department's stand on abortion.

"In lieu of examining the law for possible revisions, the minister of justice, Otto Lang — and I regret that his actions make it impossible for me to use the title honorable — berates the medical profession and has the unprecedented audacity to usurp the privileges of the court by providing his personal interpretation of the law, with regard to the performing of abortions in Canada," she said in an address to the Empire Club of Toronto.

She added that the federal government "consistently refuses the long-promised parliamentary review and frequently-promised debate on abortion."

The Criminal Code was revised in 1969 by Parliament to allow abortions subject to scrutiny by hospital thereapuutic abortion committees.

Dr. Stephenson said that Lang "indicates what, in his opinion, the 1969 Parliament intended and directs hospital authorities to adhere to that interpretation."

The president added:

"As a final straw, the minister threatens hospital therapeutic abortion committees and encourages provincial attorneys general to do likewise, simply for doing the best job they can with Parliament's totally inadequate legislation."

She stressed the need for family planning programs in Canada saying they are far from adequate.

"The 43,000-plus abortions carried out in Canada in 1973 provide the most damning possible evidence of public ignorance of, and apathy to, conception control. This ignorance is fostered by inadequate and inappropriate education, whether provided by home, school, church and meagre and inequitably distributed family planning counselling services.

"The responsibility for this unhappy situation must rest with the federal and provincial departments of health and the medical profession."

LOT FACELIFT

Modest improvements to the temporary parking lot on the former Ocean Cement site were recommended Thursday to city council by its finance committee.

The proposed $1,600 budget item includes prvision of five planters and four picnic tables.

Parks administrator Cliff Bate told the committee it's impossible to provide trees for the landscaped area of the waterfront property, because no suitable container for growing trees has been developed.

City officials and aldermen still refer to the property as the Ocean Cement site, despite Mayor Peter Pollen's insistence that its official name is Ship Point.

Woman Driven Away by a Hateful Town

VANCOUVER — The wife of a man accused of killing two Moncton policemen has fled to Vancouver to escape a "hate campaign" in her own community. Colleen Hutchison, aged about 25, has brought her two children here and is living with her mother in a small city apartment.

Her husband, James, 43, is in jail in New Brunswick charged with the Dec. 12 murder of two policemen and the kidnapping of 14-year-old Raymond Stein.

Hutchison's lawyer, Edward Bell, in Moncton and the Salvation Army in Vancouver said Mrs. Hutchison had arrived here and was in need of financial assistance.

They also confirmed that she left her Moncton home because of rude treatment by some people there and the publicity surrounding her husband's arrest.

"I know she's penniless and she was in a bad way when she left here," Bell said. "Her husband is not allowed any visitors anyway so she couldn't have seen him if she had stayed."

A close friend of Mrs. Hutchison's, Mrs. Bob McIsaac of Moncton, said: "That's right, there was a hate campaign going on here.

"Some people can be very cruel — Mrs. Hutchison didn't leave here in a very happy mood."

The two Hutchison children are aged two and five and the older child was very upset by television and radio publicity when their father was arrested, Bell said.

"Television and radio was having a field day," he said. "They went beyond the bounds of good taste.

BEATLE 'DIVORCE' FINAL

LONDON — Every era ends, though the Beatle era was a long time dying.

Final agreement came Thursday to dissolve the business partnership known as The Beatles and Co. and the end came, in the words of T. S. Eliot, not with a bang but a whimper.

None of the four attended the private high court hearing which formally and officially ended the Beatles. They split up long ago in bickering and mutual acrimony.

Their split was like that of a fireworks skyrocket — fading stars shooting in opposite directions.

John Winston Lennon is now 34, separated from Yoko Ono and living in New York fighting a U.S. immigration department deportation ruling.

James Paul McCartney, 32, lives on a remote farm in Scotland with his American wife, Linda.

George Harrison, 32 next month, has retreated into mysticism and Ringo Starr, 34, married to a Beatles fan from Liverpool, has two sons and a daughter, and lives the luxurious life of a multi-millionaire.

SPICY ARGUMENT IN WELFARE CUT

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. — A vegetarian, cut off welfare for eating garlic, is protesting the decision on the grounds that he has a right to eat whatever he thinks is good for his health.

Brian Inglis, 30, of Niagara Falls was taken off the city's welfare rolls when an officer ruled that he was making himself ineligible for work by eating garlic.

Inglis was fired from his job as a delivery man after fellow workers and customers complained of foul odors and applied for welfare to hold him over while his unemployment insurance claim was being processed. He was given $64 and told he was disqualified.

"A welfare officer told me, 'if you have a right to use garlic, we have a right to refuse you welfare'," Inglis said.

BITTERNESS BOILS OVER

SAN DIEGO — The admiral had already pinned the medal to the chest of the former executive officer of the spy ship Pueblo when seven years of bitterness suddenly boiled over. The officer handed back the medal.

"It's too little, too late . . . a cover-up," former Lt. Edward Murphy said Thursday. The ship's commanding officer Lloyd Bucher caused continued imprisonment and torture of his crew in 1968 by refusing a North Korean offer to return to their ship and sail to freedom, he added. The allegation was later denied by Bucher, who said he had never heard of such an offer.

Bucher's "self-centred antics . . . caused severe mental and physical torture to the crew and cancelled our repatriation for nearly three months."

Great Tenor Tucker Dies

NEW YORK — More than 3,500 people filled the Metropolitan Opera House today for the orthodox Jewish funeral of tenor Richard Tucker that emphasized his deeply-religious character.

The 40-minute service of psalms, prayers and chants was conducted by two rabbis and two cantors.

CAVEAT EMPTOR

Face-Lift Emotional Investment

By LYNNE GORDON

In the new year, we tend to think of a fresh start, a new approach to life and new projects.

Strangely enough that even includes consumers thinking of cosmetic surgery. Have you ever thought of plastic surgery as a consumer purchase? Of course it is.

First of all you bare laying out a good chunk of money for the product — but even more than that, you are investing your emotions. And certainly it's important not only to make sure your financial investment pays off but that your emotional one is rewarding also.

It's important to take a good hard look at buying a face lift before you make any commitments. What makes any woman or man decide to change his looks, straighten a nose, tighten a jawline, remove excess tissue from under the eyes, remove fatty tissue from the lids?

One of the most publicized cases was the cosmetic surgery involving comedienne Phylis Diller. When she was in Canada, I interviewed her about her operation which cost thousands of dollars. I asked why she decided to have a face lift after so many years. After all, I pointed out, she was a successful show business personality, she had made her fortune joking about her face and seemed happily married to her second husband.

Her answer was direct: "If a Rolls Royce breaks down and has a flat tire, you fix it. My face was a flat tire." She went on to explain that she had made up her mind to have surgery when she was watching herself at home one evening on a taped show — and she felt she looked terrible. "I had a growth on my neck, my nose was crooked, I had baggy pouches under my eyes."

But according to doctors, Phylis Diller was a prime candidate. She had so much that needed correction, and these "deformities" show the most dramatic results. But the problem arises when most people have unrealistic expectations about themselves.

That is the biggest problem a plastic surgeon has with a prospective patient.

One of the most common mistakes you can make is to stand in front of a mirror and push up the sides of your cheeks and neck toward your ears, so that the lines around your mouth and nose disappear and your neck looks smooth. This may look wonderful when you do it with your hands, but usually it's impossible to duplicate with surgery.

Where are you going to hang all that skin? When doctors cut too much you get that frightening, mask-like look.

It's important to know why you want surgery. Some consumers think it's worth any risk if it reduces feelings of anxiety and intense unhappiness or if it allows them to have a better relationship with the opposite sex.

This can be very disappointing, since an operation cannot dispel the inner feelings you have about yourself. It may even delay you from coming to grips with your personal problems.

Remember, magazines tend to show misleading before and after pictures. Photographs can be touched up or light can be altered to exaggerate the good side. You should never undertake surgery to please someone else ... not your friends, not your husband ... not your doctor, not even your lover. Some people find it a boon in their business ... such as people in show business, people dealing closely with the public or for those scarred in an accident.

Don't kid yourself that this operation is a minor one, it's only minor when you are talking about someone else.

Every operation carries a risk. The complications could include reaction to the drug, infection, bleeding, a superficial sensory nerve cut during surgery and a lack of feeling for a certain time.

Certainly with today's new technique, the risk factor is lower but one thing to remember is that cosmetic surgery takes a healthy, undamaged body and subjects it to the risk of being damaged and unhealthy.

Once you have thought about cosmetic surgery carefully and made the decision to go ahead, then search carefully for the right doctor, then ask a lot of questions. Check with friends, ask the advice of your family physician.

Ask to be briefed thoroughly. What actually can be accomplished? Will the entire operation be done at one time? How soon can you expect to come back for remedial surgery? Since it's a lucrative field and the price soars with the popularity of the doctor, ask him to lay the cost on the line. A basic face lift does not usually include the price of your nose or eyes. At the moment, unless to remove accidental scars, cosmetic surgery is not covered by the medicare plans since the government does not consider it a necessary operation.

Once you get all the answers and your decision is final, trust your doctor completely. After all, your face is in his hands.

But you might pause a moment and think: Now that your dream can come true with cosmetic surgery, maybe it's time to suspect your dream!

Fourth Father Fights Welfare

PENETANGUISHENE, Ont. (CP) — Harold Currie's wife died in 1972. Since then, the father of three has been struggling to keep his family together at home.

But government threats to cut off financial assistance might make the task more difficult. So Harold Currie has become the fourth man in recent weeks to fight Ontario welfare laws which they say discriminate against single fathers.

They are challenging a law which allows assistance to single mothers while denying it to single fathers unless they are blind, disabled or permanently unemployable.

In 1967, before the death of his wife Miriam, Currie scoured the Penetanguishene area looking for a spot to build a house for his family. He finally found a 5.5-acre plot overlooking Georgian Bay and bought it for $1,000. Afterwards he scrounged the area for materials to build his present one-room, $1,000 home.

Then Currie's problems began. His window-cleaning business gradually fell apart as he spent more and more time helping his wife through the terrors of cancer and shouldering the parent-housekeeping role.

In late 1970, he asked for welfare and the family since has been existing on the $87 welfare cheques which come twice a month. But each year Simcoe County has threatened to cut them off.

The county did stop payments last year but afterwards said that the cheques would continue until a welfare review board had considered the family's situation.

Welfare administrators have told Currie he should find work now that his children, aged 7, 9 and 10, all are in school.

But it's a difficult task for a man like Currie who lives in the country and has only an eighth-grade education.

Who Sez Spellinz Tuff?

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — "Eny more apels?" sed Dick.

"I alredy ate them," sed Jane.

Is the English language redy for enything like this?

Yes, say members of the Australian Teaching Federation who approved the first step Wednesday in a program of spelling reform.

The federation hopes to convince school systems throughout Australia to teach children a more pronetic way of spelling English.

The first step is to place the sound "eh," however it is spelled, with the single letter "e." Said becomes sed, any changes to eny, etc.

Day Care Liberates Soviet Moms

By HEDRICK SMITH

KIEV, Soviet Union (NYT) — Zoya Idenko is the model of the young Soviet mother liberated by a local day care centre that permits her to hold a job. With her 3-year-old son in a state nursery, she works as a guide for Intourist and sometimes also teaches English at a night school.

Under the highly subsidized Soviet day care system, Mrs. Idenko pays a modest 10.50 rubles ($13.86) per month — about one-tenth of her pay — for six days a week of child care. She drops her boy off at about 8 a.m. and picks him up at 7 p.m. He gets three meals and a snack daily.

Child-rearing never had much attraction for Mrs. Idenko.

"I went back to work three months after my son was born," she said. "I could have waited a year legally and still kept my job, but it was difficult for me to bring up the baby and I wanted to get out of the house. My mother-in-law lives with us and she took care of him."

The very idea that some North American women want to stay at home and raise their own children astonished this 30-year-old woman. For her, work was the only satisfying outlet. And despite her frequent contact with English-speaking foreign tourists, she knew nothing about the range of voluntary and community activities done by nonworking American women.

"Don't American women want to get out of the house?" she asked one recent visitor to this Ukrainian city. "Don't you want to work? Don't you want to earn money and get some independence?"

Privately, many educated Soviet mothers take a much more skeptical view of the Soviet day care system and regard the competence of most day care workers as below desirable standards.

But among the mass of working women, a more common complaint, judging by articles and letters in the Soviet press, is that there are still not enough day care centres to satisfy demand.

The Soviet network of nurseries (for ages of 6 months to 3 years) and kindergartens (4 to 6) is far more extensive than in most Western countries, including the United States. Here, they have long been an economic necessity for the state and the family.

Because of labor shortages, especially after the Second World War, women were pressed into many industrial and agricultural jobs. In 1972, for example, 48.7 million women were working in industry, or 83 per cent of the women between 20 and 55. They comprised slightly more than half of the entire work force — outnumbering men.

Not long ago, however, the armed forces newspaper, Krasnaya Zvezda reported that pre-school day care centres can handle about 10 million children — only one-third of the children in the under-7 age group.

Big cities such as Moscow tend to be favored. People in the countryside and medium-sized factory towns are left more to fend for themselves. Some women report having to quit their jobs in order to raise their children at least until they are old enough to go to kindergarten. Others resort to the traditional Russian method of having a live-in grandmother take over.

The vast majority of Soviet families require the salary of a working wife to make ends meet. Repeatedly, Soviet citizens express astonishment when they learn that an American father can support a family of two, three or four children without his wife's working. Many are also surprised that American women would willingly have more than one child.

Scientists Hedge On Sweetener

WASHINGTON (NPI) — A panel of scientists told the U.S. Food and Drug Administration Thursday it cannot be sure if saccharine, the country's most widely used artificial sweetener, causes cancer in test animals.

The scientists at the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council recommended additional tests and investigation to determine whether the sweetener is safe for human consumption.

"The results of toxicity studies thus far reported have not established conclusively whether saccharine is or is not carcinogenic when administered orally to test animals," the report said.

It said the results of studies by the FDA and by the Wisconsin alumni research foundation showed that bladder tumors resulted when animals were fed saccharin, but the tests "cannot be interpreted as showing that saccharin itself was the cause of the tumors."

JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Regular Exercise Program Tonic for Weight Anxieties

(This is the fifth in a series of 15 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of WHY GROW OLD? and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. You may want to save these menus and exercises to refer back to during the eight-week period.)

Do you want to look five to ten years younger just eight weeks from now? If so, join thousands of other women for a loss of from 15 to 20 pounds during that time. Overweight makes a woman look years older than she is. It makes her feel older, too.

It is possible for you to drop years from your appearance in eight weeks if you follow the course which is now being published in this newspaper. This is no fancy of mine! I have seen it happen over and over again in my classes and thousands of readers have written to me about it.

This is the fifth day of my eight-week Beauty Improvement Plan (BIP for short). Yesterday I told you how painless reducing can be if you will just increase your physical activity and decrease your food intake reasonably. Exercise is a very valuable asset when losing weight.

Today I want to urge all of you to make exercise a part of this eight-week program unless there is some medical reason for not doing so. Exercise not only helps burn up calories, but it tones muscles. Therefore, it prevents the flabbiness which sometimes follows a slimming course. Also, it is the only way to spot reduce.

A woman should be much lovelier to look at after losing overweight. She is sure to be if she does not lose too rapidly, eats correctly and exercises. My menus give you 1100 to 1200 calories a day. Most women lose from 2 to 2½ pounds a week on such rations.

Here are some things you should remember when beginning an exercise program. First have your heart and blood pressure checked and get your doctor's blessing. Begin very slowly and work up gradually. Start with a few exercises and gradually add more. Begin doing each exercise 6 to 8 times and increase the number of times until you are doing each one 20 to 25 times. If you feel exhausted instead of refreshed 20 minutes after exercising, you are doing too much.

Unless you have been exercising regularly, you are sure to feel some soreness in your muscles. This will soon disappear if you continue to exercise. Soaking in a hot bath will help. This is one reason for beginning slowly. If you are too ambitious, your muscles will become so sore that you might be discouraged and tempted to desert your exercise program.

MENUS FOR SATURDAY

Breakfast: blender breakfast, mix in a blender ¾ cup plain skim milk yogurt, ½ cup tangerine juice, and ½ banana.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

With the classical perversity characteristic of rollicking humorists, the late Dorothy Parker used to insist, with wistful self-mockery, that she wanted to commit suicide every Sunday afternoon. Horrible holidays was her term for days of rest and celebration, and she included not only Sundays but Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's Day, all birthdays and anniversaries in her catalogue of days whose holiday atmosphere made her want to do away with herself.

The causes of inner psychological slumps provoked by the celebration of Sunday, of the feast days of the changing seasons, anniversaries of births and marriages are many.

Some of us are so conditioned to the stereotyped preoccupations and rituals of our jobs that a free, tunes because no one is pushing our buttons. We do not feel ourselves again until we are back at work.

Some find that the the disappointments of the past well up or the bleakness of the present seems especially unbearable on days that are designated as days of rest, rehabilitations, sociability and recollection.

Every physician is prepared for the widow whose asthma flares on Christmas Eve or New Year's Day, or for the bachelor whose ulcer can be predicted to prevent him from dining at his sister-in-law's on Thanksgiving.

Specific dates, such as birthdays and anniversaries, often acquire strong emotional significance as time passes, and will be "celebrated" with the appearance of chest pain, a skin rash or wheezing.

In a study at the University of Michigan recently, it was observed that among 5000 young men and women, more colds commenced on Monday — blue Monday — than any other day of the week. And it is a matter of record that emergency rooms know well that holidays and Sundays are peak days for the "special-day" syndrome.

Such symptoms are particularly apt to appear at the Christmas season. Members of Alcoholics Anonymous, if they are going to fall off the wagon, will do it on special days, when they are most susceptible to nostalgia and loneliness and regret.

Perceptive mothers know well the Monday morning bellyache of the malingering schoolboy or girl, who will abruptly recover when threatened with castor oil, or if indulged will show signs of recovery when the school bell has rung and it is too late.

But if depression — which we all feel from time to time — gets out of hand and is inappropriate, then by all means counsel should be taken with your doctor.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: I switched jobs and will be flying all over the country. Me, I like the idea. Fatima, my cat, hates it, I know because she hates travel with a passion anyway. Still, she's got to go with me. Tranquilizers are what everybody uses, I guess. Will she be able to take tranquilizers that often? — E. M.

DEAR E. M.: Tranquilizers aren't to be taken lightly. (But on the other hand, it's even more dangerous to take them "heavily.") Follow Fatima's veterinarian's dosage recommendations carefully. The faster Fatima favors flights, the less total tranquilization she'll require and the better off she'll be. If she has particularly unpleasant associations with her present carrier, a new one might be indicated. Be sure it's of adequate size, comfortable, secure and adequately ventilated. Get her used to it by leaving it about continuously. Encourage her to sleep in it if you can. Feed and fuss with Fatima near her carrier so she'll associate it with good things.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I've heard a rattlesnake loses its fangs. How does this happen, and is it defenseless afterward? Wouldn't such a rattlesnake be a safer pet? — W. W.

DEAR W. W.: The rattlesnake's fangs are hollow, freely movable hypodermic needles which normally lie folded back in a protective membrane against the roof of the mouth. When ready for action they swing down and out to project slightly from the open mouth, usually simultaneously, though they are capable of independent motion (if not threatened, a snake may project first one fang and then another). These fangs are lost periodically, usually left in the body of a victim. A snake is not at this point defenseless, however, as there are two fang sockets on each side of the upper jaw instead of one. This provides a constant replacement, the new fang becoming firmly connected to the venom gland before the old fang is lost. This continual replacement process means there is NEVER a period — even a brief one — when a rattlesnake makes a good, and-or safe, pet.

DEAR DR. MILLER. My cousin just bought from a dealer a falcon which he's going to train. Is this legal? I don't mean training it, I mean can you legally buy these birds? — D. D.

DEAR D. D.: Currently, under some circumstances you can legally purchase imported birds of prey, including falcons.

DEAR DR. MILLER: How do you know when kittens are crying because they're hungry or crying because there's something wrong? S. A.

DEAR S. A.: If kittens are crying because they're hungry, there definitely is something wrong, as far as they're concerned. Actually, there is a difference between hunger cries and cries from other types of distress, though it takes considerable experience to differentiate them. Often they are not completely separated. The very young kitten who is ill from infection or hereditary problems is often hungry, too. He'll be the one least likely to make out while at the milk bar. Malnutrition and other hunger-related problems to the infant feline usually have a way of solving themselves once the kitten finds food and consumes it .The kitten who cries after eating not surprisingly has other problems. Then these distress calls should signal prompt expert attention if the infant's to have a chance of making it.

DEAR DR. MILLER: You are always warning against feeding bones to dogs. But isn't it true that dogs fed a lot of bone have teeth and gums in better shape than dogs who are not fed bones? V. S.

DEAR V. S.: Canines who consistently crunch on bones usually will have cleaner teeth, molars in particular. Their gums, if not lacerated by the bones, are also usually tougher and in better shape. This doesn't mean the teeth of bone chewers last longer than properly cared for teeth of non-bone chewers. Actually, they wear down faster. What's more important is the teeth often don't last longer because the dog doesn't. A certain percentage of pet canine bone chewers are going to die because of this practice, from gastrointestinal perforation, obstruction or related complications.

DEAR DR. MILLER: How long can I leave my tropical fish without food? During the summer, we'll be taking several short trips and I want to avoid fish-sitters if possible. — T. J.

DEAR T. J.: Tropical fish in good condition can handle a few days' fast without trouble. If there is a considerable size discrepancy between the largest and smaller fish in the tank, however, along fasting period becomes quite trying. (The larger fish often eat the smaller ones.)

This hazard can be greatly minimized by providing an automatic fish feeder. It doles out daily rations at the flick of a switch. With a properly balanced tank so equipped, a two-week vacation, for example, should cause no hardship whatsoever.

dear abby

Privacy Threatened

DEAR ABBY: I am a grandmother who met a young couple at the home of a mutual friend. I liked the young man, but his wife is simply awful! She talks incessantly and never says anything. She is also a phoney She claims to "love" ballet, art, opera, literature—you name it, and she's an "expert"—but after listening to her for a few minutes, it's apparent she doesn't know much. She is also pushy and her never-ending chatter is punctuated with obscenities, which I detest.

This couple dropped in on me without phoning first. I was shocked, but I didn't want to be rude. I should have been, because they dropped in on me again, and stayed and stayed and stayed. Then they told me they had bought property very near me because they loved the area!

Abby, how do I tell them to please leave me alone? I could tolerate an occasional visit, but when they become neighbors I will be robbed of my cherished privacy. Should I tell him? Or her? And how do I phrase it? I can't say, "Please forget that you know me. I cannot stand you!"—Orange

DEAR ORANGE: Tell them that you are not the "dropping in" kind of neighbor and do not appreciate folks who drop in without calling first. Admit to being a bit of a "nut" on the subject to the point of being thought anti-social—but do let them know you are not kidding.

DEAR ABBY: My husband loves to hunt, and he gets positively rabid when anyone mentions any kind of gun control.

I've always hated guns, and think that handguns should not be manufactured except for use by law enforcers.

The other day my husband came home with bumper stickers on our new car. They said: "Guns don't kill people. People kill people."

I finally had to agree that those bumper stickers made a lot of sense. No?—Soothed

DEAR SOOTHED: Prepare to become unsoothed. That bumper sticker should read, "Guns don't kill people, but people with guns kill people." Run that through your old rifle barrel a couple of times.

DEAR ABBY: Like so many others, I never expected to be writing a "Dear Abby" letter because I thought I had the perfect marriage.

I would like to tell every wife whose husband works away from home to go with him because if she doesn't, another woman is waiting to step into her shoes.

My husband worked away from home for the last three years, but he drove 100 miles extra every day so he could spend every night at home with me.

Well, six months ago he started to call me around 5 p.m. saying he was too tired to make the drive home. Finally, he confessed that he met another woman and he thinks he's in love with her. He says he can't make up his mind between us, so we are sharing him.

I can't tell you what I have been going through, Abby. I don't know whether to tell him to stay with her and not come back, or what. My best friend says I should kick him out. My sister says to share him until he gets tired of her.

If I ever get my husband back I will be like Ruth in the Bible. What should I do?—J.

DEAR J: Don't make any decisions now that you might later regret. You don't say how long you've been married, or if there are children. (That could make a difference.) Get some counselling. This is too heavy to handle alone, and friends tend to tell you what they think you want to hear.

DEAR ABBY: A while ago you had a "confidential to Virgo" to the effect that to correct a person who has mispronounced a word is cruel when done in the presence of others. I agree.

What about the mispronunciation of names? I have an uncommon name, and when someone mispronounces it—and this happens frequently—I always correct that person politely but immediately, even if it must be done in the presence of others (which, unfortunately, is usually the situation.)—Uncommon Name

DEAR UNCOMMON: That's the exception.

Marriage Trauma High

BOMBAY —Copal Dutt Sharma, a retired Indian government official living in a New Delhi suburb, saw the following ad in the matrimonial column of a local English-language newspaper:

"Young Indian engineer earning $1,500 a month in Canada invites matrimonial proposals from educated Punjabi girls. No dowry. Girl must be prepared to settle down in Canada of the United States."

"Seems to be the right boy for our Vimla," Sharma told his wife. The same afternoon he posted a special delivery letter to the box number mentioned in the ad.

The marriage took place within a month. The engineer, who had come to India to see his parents, said his employers in Canada wanted him badly as a new project was being launched.

That was four years ago. Vimla, a 26-year-old University of Delhi graduate, is back in India. The marriage was a failure.

"I just could not adjust myself to my husband's fast living," Vimla said. "He was all the time saying that I must get Canadianized — whatever that means. He wanted me to drink liquor and dance with strange men. In short, I had to forget I am an Indian."

Though a number of Indian girls are marrying what social columnists refer to as "foreign-returned" or "foreign-settled" husbands, many of these marriages break up.

In the last year, at least six Indian wives who had gone to Canada and the United States with their Western-educated husbands have come back to India disillusioned and heartbroken.

One Bombay - born bride who went to Los Angeles with her husband said she was shocked to learn that he had already been married twice and divorced.

"As a Hindu I just could not reconcile myself to the idea of marrying a divorced man and a man who had kept me in the dark about his previous marriages," she said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Saturday, Jan. 11, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business and other obligations are likely to be featured. Your basic procedured could be challenged. Key is to be responsible, to learn by doing, to gain from experience. What was to be a solid agreement will now be subject to revision, rebuilding and reviewing.

TAURUS (April 20- May 20): Finish rather than initiate projects. Accent is on restrictions, desire to expand, basic health and work requirements. Find ways to get message across. One who sings blues merely wants you to assume obligations, debts. Know it and stand tall for your own rights.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Hold off on speculative ventures. Protect your financial, personal security. Channel creative resources. Leo, Aquarius could figure prominently. A deal is in offing. Take cash and let credit go. Then you win!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may not feel as light as a feather. Key is to be thorough rather than flashy. Accent is on legal maneuvers, agreements, commitments. Property arrangement is not the best —work toward revising it,

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Comedy relief proves welcome. There has been tension. Now you can realize foibles—of others and yourself. Strive to diversify, to be versatile, to reach beyond what was an imposed limitation. Gemini and Sagittarius figure in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Impulse could lead to actions which are costly. One who makes claims to your affection may be reluctant to put up or shut up. Know it and protect yourself in clinches. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio may be featured.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be prepared for change, travel, variety. Play detective. Investigate and analyze. Give full play to intellectual curiousity. Ask questions—discern motives. Money situation will be resolved—by circumstances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be cautious where travel, change enter picture. Conservative course now would be appropriate. Taurus, Libra are likely to be involved. Family member offers advice —it probably is sincere but likely to be erroneous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Money, investments, policies, taxes and inventory—these areas are highlighted. Avoid tendency to put on rose-colored glasses. Key is to see as is, not merely as you wish situations, individuals might be. Piscean may show the way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are tested, given chance to prove theories and yourself. Older individual back words with actions. You could be major beneficiary. Another Capricorn—and a Cancer—are likely to be spotlighted.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tread lightly—refuses to chide, push or cajole. You get chance to improve your image, to make amends to those who feel you slighted them. Key now is to get to bottom line. Don't attempt to fool others—or yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Creative resources surge forward. Have courage of convictions. You do know what is right, despite asides from those of little faith—or talent. One who presses you on money matters should be tolerated, not taken seriously.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intuitive, a good teacher and you have instinct for what people want and when they want it. January and October are key months for you in 1975. Aquarius, Leo and Cancer persons play important roles in your life. You are loyal and many take advantage of you. They don't get away with it too often, however!

A Book to Warm the Chilly Days

The dedicated grower of house plants is likely to find a lot of new information about this exacting hobby in the Simon and Schuster publication of Jerry Baker's long-winded-titled book I Never Met a House Plant I Didn't Like. I cannot think of an abbreviation for that one.

If the title intrigues you, the presentation of horticultural facts in the same vein will probably not annoy you.

If you have heard of Jerry Baker, or read his other books on gardening, his dependence on Grandma Putt for a theme to hold the book together may seem natural — you may already have made her acquaintance as it were.

But Jerry Baker is new to me, so I looked more closely at the content in his latest book than for renewal of friendships.

The 300 pages cover an enormous number of plants all to be grown as house plants, or at least under cover; these include ferns, bulbs, cacti and succulents, orchids, water plants, carnivores, AND herbs, fruits and vegetables.

One chapter is on greenhouse gardening, but gives no hint of winter anxieties facing the hobbyist when temperatures and general weather conditions change abruptly during the night. The author assumes that everything will be automatically equipped to take care of emergencies without human effort. Utopia, indeed.

Today's apartment dwellers will like the chapters on gardening in a dish, terrarium planting, fishbowl use for aquatics, and even a mention of the art of Bonsai.

Since natural light becomes increasingly rare in apartments as a city grows, Baker has included chapters on growing house plants with artificial light. Indeed, any house plant grower here will benefit from adding fluorescent lighting for at least winter use.

It has been known for 50 years or so that plants respond dramatically not only to length of daylight but even more to light intensity. This makes it possible to grow and flower plants out of their natural season.

Carefully controlled lighting would do away with lanky weak growth on our house plants in winter. Poinsettias and Christmas cacti could be easy to have at perfection and potted bulbs would bloom on time.

This fluorescent lighting should be called horticultural lighting I feel, for it is a science to be studied and experimented with in the home before constant success can be expected under specific conditions.

Jerry Baker links the use of lighting with the growing of food plants indoors, and also how to adapt to balcony gardening. Lightweight plastic containers, plastic baskets lined with plastic sheeting, and lightweight soil substitutes — terralite (the horticultural form of vermiculite), leafmould and soil from composted material — these ideas fit into all of today's off-the-ground gardening activities.

Baker knows no limits when it comes to food plants in pots — everything from chives and parsley to watermelons and corn are possible; and citrus, peach, banana and pineapple may be indulged in.

Every reviewer feels justified in noticing whatever errors creep into a final printing of a book, though the horrendous job of putting a book together boggles the mind of a simple column writer.

One error noted in Baker's book is found on page 127, where the capital A. is used for a genus with no previous name spelled out. The listing A. woodii with the note "sometimes called rosary vine" obviously does refer to a little trailing plant Ceropegia woodii.

An illustration on page 64 is misleading for a beginner, for it is labelled Asparagus plumosus but is anything other than this plant. It occurs in a chapter on ferns, but neither A. plumosus nor A. sprengeri are ferns, since they lack spores; instead they have conventional flowers.

At the indicated price of $11.50 for this book, this reviewer feels that Simon and Schuster could have done better with the illustrations in general. Jerry Baker however is young and enthusiastic, marvellous attributes when writing books of popular interest.

Retail Stores 'Inflexible' For Consumers

WASHINGTON (CP) — A call for Canada and other major trading partners to "balance its self-interest with the common interest" is made in a top-level survey of the importation into the United States of critical raw material.

"Although we cannot expect any country to tie its hands in matters vital to its national interest, we consider arbitrary use of export controls basically inconsistent with the goal of an open world economy in which market factors play an effective role," the report states.

"We cannot continue to remain an open economy if other countries are to control their exports without adequate recognition of the interests and needs of their trading partners."

The report suggests it is desirable to seek "improved international rules and procedures to ensure adequate access to foreign supplies and to minimize frictions among nations over export-control actions."

The special report on critical imported materials was produced by the Council on International Economic Policy.

It was prepared under the state department and included representation from the office of management and budget, the domestic council, Central Intelligence Agency, general services administration and departments of treasury, defence, interior, commerce and agriculture.

Its recommendations go to President Ford.

The study concludes that the U.S. will have a sufficient supply of imported industrial raw materials to last through this century and that the U.S. will not face a crisis in other resources similar to that which occurred in oil.

However, it states that "today's unsettling conditions are creating a potential for mistrust and conflict among nations" as each country recognizes that "other nations' actions can have an adverse impact on them."

"Canada, Australia, South Africa and other developed nations" supply more than two-thirds of the industrial raw material the U.S. imports; "Canada alone supplies half," the report states.

These countries "would be unlikely to participate in any embargo of exports to the U.S., Western Europe or Japan," it says.

"Since these three countries are the most important sources of raw materials for the U.S. . . . any embargo threat for commodities they produce is greatly diminished."

The report, however, says there is "growing government regulation or actual control of production facilities in exporting countries."

"The ownership of mines and production facilities in developing countries has shifted to the host countries to such an extent that foreign majority ownership is an exception rather than the rule.

The report lists iron ore, nickel, zinc, mercury, tungsten and lead as minerals of which Canada is a major supplier, and contains a specific section on each:

Iron ore — To be effective, any cartel in this commodity would have to include Canada, Australia and Brazil and 'although these countries are currently more favorably disposed toward international producer organizations, their wider interests compel policies of moderation in questions of pricing of, and access to, their mineral resources."

Nickel — The U.S. imports 60 to 65 per cent of its needs. Canada supplies more than two-thirds of that. "It appears that prices have already reached cartel profit maximizing levels. A formal cartel . . . probably would not revise the present pricing strategy to any considerable extent." New producers in the next few years makes "the probability of price declines substantial."

Zinc — U.S. imports 65 per cent of consumption. Canada supplies 62 per cent of that. "A producers' group including virtually all West European, Canadian and Australian privately-owned producers, is apparently trying to establish prices and operating rates to maintain price stability at a level satisfactory to the members." The report concludes that while countries may tailor their exports to keep prices up, "most foreign producers realize the value of the U.S. market and thus are likely to avoid moves which could lead to greater U.S. production."

Mercury — Canada supplies nearly a third of the U.S. consumption. "The producers will try, as some have done in the past, to restrict supplies in order to bring prices above the $350-per-flask level. They have not been successful in the past and are unlikely to have much success in the future."

Tungsten — U.S. imports 44 per cent; Canada supplies 60 per cent of that amount. "Because of what appears to be a dwindling reserve situation and given the lack of available substitutes, tungsten is a possible candidate for short-term price manipulation although Canada and Australia would have to be involved to make a cartel effective . . . It does not appear that the U.S. can be threatened by either embargo or price actions on the part of foreign tungsten producers for many years."

Lead — "The U.S., Canada and Australia are the three major producers outside the Communist world . . . Price gouging would have to involve Canada and Australia and this is unlikely given the current policies of these countries."

CHEK Licence Renewed

Victoria's CHEK television station has had its licence renewed untl Dec. 31.

The renewal was announced in Ottawa today by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission. CHEK-TV Ltd. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of British Columbia Broadcasting.

The commission said it will hold hearings into renewal of the current licences for B.C. television stations, beginning April 22 in Vancouver.

Prior to that time, the commission expects to receive plans from British Columbia Broadcasting for extension of service to the northern part of Vancouver Island, as well as to the east and west Kootenays.

CHEK-TV Ltd. is expected to submit applications to establish outlets to serve Sooke and the Jordan River areas at the April hearings.

Other licence renewals announced today were for CHAN-TV of Vancouver, CHAN-TV-I of Chilliwack, CHKL-TV of Kelowna, CHKL-TV-I of Penticton, CHKL-TV2 of Vernon, CHKM-TV of Kamloops, CHKM-TV-I of Pritchard, CITM-TV of Mt. Timothy, CITM-TV-I of Williams Lake, CITM-TV-2 of Quesnel and CIFGTV of Fort George.

Sidney Air Cadet Squadron Judged Best of Nation's 380

The No. 676 air cadet squadron of Sidney has been judged the best of 380 squadrons across Canada.

The local squadron will receive the Air Cadet League of Canada award for the most proficient squadron in 1974.

Capt. J. H. McLeod, a former officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force, commands the squadron and chairman of the squadron's sponsoring committee is Kinsman Gary Pearson.

Runner-up in the annual competition is the No. 170 City of St. James squadron in Manitoba.

The award is based on assessments made during the year by visiting armed forces officers and members of the Air Cadet League. Final judging was carried out by a national awards committee which met in Ottawa.

Defence department headquarters in Ottawa has announced that funds have been allocated to send 2,700 sea, air and army cadets to summer camp this year.

The funding is part of a $5,530,000 defence department program to provide summer employment for students.

The federal government has allocated $67,097,000 for summer programs for students in 1975.

About 3,400 students will be given eight weeks training with the armed forces' reserve units, receiving more than $100 a week and being provided with uniforms (parts of which they will be able to keep), as well as rations and housing when on field exercises.

A third DND student program, called Community Assistance, will involve about 300 students in selected localities. They will receive more than $100 a week to work on projects that improve the ecology.

The projects will include building and repairing park facilities, constructing nature trails, setting up or conducting activities to attract tourists.

Student in the reserve or Community Assistance programs must be between 17 and 34.

Those interested in reserve training should apply to local reserve units or Canada Manpower centres now.

Applicants for the Community Assistance employment should contact Canada Manpower.

Only cadets who joined their corps or squadron before Jan. 31 of this year will be eligible to go to camp.

Rhodesia Halts Prisoner Release

SALISBURY (UPI) — The Rhodesian government halted the release of black political prisoners today and accused guerrilla leaders of failing to end two years of jungle warfare.

Justice Minister Desmond Lardner-Burke said the guerrillas have not honored a month-old cease-fire agreement with Rhodesia's white supremacist government.

Under that agreement, the guerrillas agreed to call off their two-year war in exchange for the freedom of black detainees.

"Terrorism has not stopped," Lardner-Burke told the Rhodesian Herald. "Far from it. That is why I have taken the decision not to release anybody else."

He said 320 black detainees remained in jail. Sixty were freed.

The white minority government of Premier Ian Smith has agreed to meet representatives of Rhodesia's 5 million blacks at a constitutional conference.

Nationalist spokesmen declined to speculate if the latest government action would delay the meeting. No date has been set for the talks.

City to Quit Mayors' Body

Victoria's finance committee recommended Thursday that the city cancel its $1,600 annual subscription to the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

Victoria's dues assessment for UBCM this year is $3,788 — up from $2,659 in 1974.

Mayor Peter Pollen, a former director of the federation, told aldermen he had grave doubts about the organization's usefulness as a instrument in solving municpal problems.

He said it spends a lot of time, money and effort organizing tri-level conferences which "amount to absolutely nothing," and has a strange fixation on research.

"Without question, we have more people in this country involved in research than any other country in the world," the mayor claimed.

"The University of Victoria is doing research, UBCM is doing research, everyone is doing research. But where does it get us?"

The mayor warned his colleagues, however, that they stand to lose in one way if Victoria pulls out of CFMM: "If you're not a member you can't go to their annual bash."

Hunger Threat

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatchewan Agriculture Minister Jack Messer today said Canadians must face the prospect that their future security may be in jeopardy because of starvation in the world.

While the threat exists that a starving nation with nuclear forces could become suicidal and threaten the world, there may be a more realistic threat in guerrilla activities beyond national boundaries, Messer said.

"Much precedent already has been set as nationalists have hijacked airlines for their causes. How much more fanatical might we imagine people to be in their demands for a fair share of the world's food production?"

He said that for practical reasons and "our own well-being," Canadians must grapple with the need for a co-ordinated world food program and the real test for Canadians would be in the pocketbook.

New Facilities Sought To Aid Young Offenders

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Thursday B.C. needs additional facilities to deal with juvenile delinquents.

The minister did not describe what kind of facilities are needed but said they must be established in conjunction with a general overhaul of the Delinquency Act.

The federal act, which deals with juvenile offenders, is being studied by Ottawa, said Macdonald, and B.C. has made some general recommendations for revamping the legislation.

Macdonald would not reveal any specific recommendations made to the federal authorities but said the act is old and must be changed to meet modern conditions.

The minister also said he could not comment on the announcement that a 13-year-old boy in Vancouver, accused of murdering a department store clerk, has been released into the custody of a relative.

The release was the decision of the judge involved, based on the Delinquency Act, said Macdonald and he could not comment on that decision.

Tour Firm Bankruptcy Petitioned

Travellers International Tours Ltd. has been petitioned into bankruptcy by the consumer services department.

Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young said Thursday a group of consumers affected by the tour company's recent collapse has been banded together to petition the company into formal bankruptcy.

This step will force a complete investigation of the company, said Young, even if the 300 Victorians represented do not recover the money they have lost.

T. I. Tours closed its doors in Victoria in mid-December and cancelled all its bus tours planned for the Christmas vacation, leaving many customers without a holiday and without the money they had already paid for the tours.

At the time of closure, the consumer affairs department took all the available company funds, about $6,000, into safe keeping.

Young said the move by the department of consumer services to organize up consumers and file for formal bankruptcy is "very unusual." The same method may be used against other tour companies which collapse.

Picket Injunctions Ruled Still Legal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Court injunctions to restrict trade union picketing still have a place in B.C. labor disputes, the B.C. Labor Relations Board has ruled.

In a decision released Wednesday, the board decided it has no jurisdiction over behavior on union picket lines and only the courts can legally issue orders restricting a union's method of picketing.

One of the main features written into the new provincial Labor Code was that the board was given exclusive jurisdiction over "picketing, striking or locking out."

However, the board has now ruled its jurisdiction is limited to actual industrial relations aspects of picketing — the object, timing and location — and does not involve the manner of picketing.

When pickets are found to be guilty of such offences as assault, battery, defamation, nuisance, threats of violence and so on, then it is a matter for the courts to settle, said the board.

The judgment arises out of a strike late last year by members of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers at the Endako molybdenum mine, 110 miles west of Prince George.

The company applied to the board for a cease-and-desist order after mass union picketing completely sealed off access to the mine and there were isolated threats of violence.

The labor relations board decision said the picketing "was sufficient to stop company buses, trucks and other vehicles, but there were also some isolated threats of violence and the brandishing of axes or guns . . ."

The board noted that these items were available for legitimate reasons, such as cutting firewood and hunting.

Although not convinced it had the power to do so, the board restricted the union to three pickets at the mine entrance, prohibited any obstruction of traffic into the mine, and ordered a halt to any threats or harassment of non-striking empoyees.

Both parties agreed to this "because of the exigencies of the situation," with the understanding the board would later unravel the extent of its jurisdiction.

Wednesday's ruling cancels the board's order, even though the strike was settled last month.

Peter Cameron, CAIMAW regional vice-president, who argued the union's position before the board's three-member panel, said the decision means it's "back to the courts again" for labor disputes.

"This means whenever there's any question about conduct on a legal picket line, the company affected can get relief from the courts," he said.

"This was a major plank in the NDP's labor platform — to get rid of court injunctions — and it now appears they haven't done it."

Barrett 'Stifling Debate'

The decision to open the spring session on Feb. 18 is the work of a premier who has "conspired ruthlessly to strifle and close debate," the Social Credit opposition charged Thursday.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett said the unusually late date for the session "is not unlike a subtle but dangerous form of closure" because the legislature, will have little more than a month before the end of the fiscal year to debate departmental spending estimates.

Bennett said funds have to be approved before March 31 or there will be no money to finance the operations of government. (In years when the budget has not been approved by March 31, a provisional supply bill is passed to allow government spending to continue.)

Bennett also called the opening date a break with tradition is a slap in the face at the principles of parliamentary government, is arrogant, and is part of the premier's continuing effort to stifle open debate in the B.C. legislature."

Usually the house opens on a Thursday to give the opposition a weekend to review the contents of the speech before making its reply, said Bennett.

Barrett announced the date Thursday, saying the late date was justified because much of the legislative program was completed in the fall session.

He said the new limits on debate, which set out only 45 sittings or 135 hours of debate on estimates, also justify a later starting date.

The house will actually be called together Feb. 17 to prorogue the old session and the throne speech will be given Feb. 18.

'Party Basis' Selection Of Women Rapped

Appointment of women to the legislature's all-male sergeant-at-arms staff has started a political squabble between Speaker Gordon Dowding and Opposition Leader Bill Bennett.

Dowding promised last year he would end sex discrimination in the legislative corridors and about two weeks ago Alan Hutchinson, the Sergeant-at-arms, asked each party caucus to submit names "of several women whom they consider suitable" for the job.

In a letter Thursday, Bennett informed Dowding he was not prepared to make nominations "on a party basis."

"We find the implication that attendants who serve the legislature are to be appointed on the basis of recommendations received from a political party not to be an acceptable one," said Bennett.

"It is our view that attendants serve the legislature and as such no suggestion that their positions come as the result of political interference should be permitted to exist."

The "worthwhile idea" of having women attendants for the first time will be compromised by political interference, said Bennett.

Dowding said he found it "curious" Bennett would make a political issue out of the appointments and said his only intention in asking for suggested appointees was to be "courteous."

"I thought it was being thoughtful to have them have some say in who would be servicing their rooms," said Dowding, adding that attendants must be in a position of confidence with each caucus.

The sergeant-at-arms staff, who work only during legislative sessions, are responsible for standing guard in the legislative corridors, taking messages, delivering mail, distributing bills and orders and running other errands.

Each caucus hires its own secretarial staff, said Dowding, and, while the attendants are usually hired by Hutchinson, he thought the different parties might want to suggest possible attendants.

Future topics include the development of architecture, chemistry, mathematics and astronomy. (60 mins.)

Movies

The Great Lover (xxx), on 4 at 1. A smooth comic performance by Bob Hope highlights this 1949 comedy film, filled with gorgeous women (including Rhonda Fleming) and enough plot twists to make you dizzy.

The Coconuts (xxxx), on 11 at 2. An early (1929) sound comedy classic starring the mad Marx Brothers — Groucho, Chico, Harpo and Zeppo — their first film. They are still funny but the dated sound and technique is bothersome.

Jason and the Argonauts (xx), on 7 at 6. The kids will enjoy this 1963 English-made blend of animated monsters, mythology and special effects, about the search for the elusive "golden fleece."

The Magician (xxx), on 12 at 7:30. Bill Bixby has the title role in this 1973 drama which served as the pilot for the now-cancelled series about a magician who uses his art to help people in trouble. A strong supporting cast includes Kim Hunter, Barry Sullivan and Elizabeth Ashley.

Hellfighters (xx), on 6 at 8:30. Some spectacular special effects highlight this otherwise predictable 1969 drama about Texans who battle oil fires for a living. Cast includes John Wayne, Vera Miles, Jim Hutton and Katherine Ross.

Stranger on the Run (xxx), on 2 at 9. An expert cast (Henry Fonda, Anne Baxter, Michael Parks and Dan Duryea) and a good script brings the characters alive in this better-than-average 1967 made-for-TV western about the relentless hounding of a murder suspect in the 1885 Southwest. Michael Parks is especially good as the head lawman.

The Cowboys (xx), on 4 at 9. John Wayne stars in this 1972 western about a rancher forced to drive a large herd of cattle across the 1870s Southwest, with raw teenage recruits as his only help. This film launches a series of Saturday night movies to be carried on ABC in this time slot over the next few months.

Chisum, on 5 at 9. No rating available on this 1970 western drama set against the backdrop of New Mexico's violent Lincoln County cattle war of the 1870s. A competent cast includes John Wayne, Forrest Tucker, Christopher George and Richard Jaeckel.

CLARK GABLE
. . . on 12 at 11:30 p.m.

CLAIRE BLOOM
. . . on 5 at 11:30 p.m.

Climb an Angry Mountain, on 8 at 9. No rating on this 1973 modern-day western starring Fess Parker as a rancher-sheriff on the trail of a fugitive Indian (played by ex-football star Joe Kapp) in Northern California. Others in the cast include Stella Stevens and Barry Nelson.

Weekend at Dunkirk, on 7 at 11. No rating available on this 1964 European-made Second World War drama about a group of French soldiers trying to elude the advancing Germans in 1940, starring Jean-Paul Belmondo and Catherine Spaak.

If I Had a Million (xxxx), on 11 at 11. An entertaining, multi-storied 1932 comedy about a dying millionaire who chooses his heirs at random from the telephone book, and the film is about them. A great cast includes W. C. Fields, Gary Cooper, George Raft and Charles Laughton, with the scenes between Fields and Laughton especially funny.

Climb An Angry Mountain, on 6 at 11:20. (See earlier for details of this movie.)

The Chapman Report (xx), on 5 at 11:30. The best-selling novel inspired by the much-publicized Kinsey Report on the sexual mores of suburban married women, served as the basis for this glossy 1962 soap opera, starring Efrem Zimbalist Jr., Jane Fonda, Claire Bloom, Shelley Winters, Glynis Johns and Cloris Leachman.

The Misfits (xxxx), on 12 at 11:30. More a curiosity piece than fine drama, this 1961 film written by playwright Arthur Miller and directed by John Houston, was the last made by Clark Gable and Marilyn Monroe, and deserves a good rating if only to honor those two. It's a story about a group of modern day cowboys and a frightened divorcee who team for romance and the adventure of a wild horse round-up, and of the supporting cast Montgomery Clift is a standout.

Support Your Local Sheriff (xxx), on 8 at midnight. A veteran cast of supporting actors (Walter Brennan, Jack Elam, Harry Morgan, Henry Jones and Bruce Dern) highlight this 1968 western spoof about a loconic gunslinger who becomes the sheriff of a wild western town. James Garner stars in the title role.

Anchors Aweigh (xxx), on 4 at 12:15. A tuneful, gay, lively 1944 musical about two sailors on leave in Hollywood with a great cast that includes Frank Sinatra, Gene Kelly, Kathryn Grayson, Jose Iturbi and Dean Stockwell.

Secret of Santa Vittoria, on 6 at 1:20. Anthony Quinn and Anna Magnani star in the 1969 comedy-drama based on a true story about the inhabitants of a small Italian village who outwit the invading German army.

Song Without End (xx), on 8 at 1:55. If you can ignore the melodramatic aspects of this 1960 Hollywood version of Franz Liszt's life, you might be able to enjoy the beautiful musical selections. Dirk Bogarde makes a dashing Liszt, but he's bogged down by a heavy-handed script and an inept performance from his co-star Capucine.

Kung Fu Moves To Saturday

Moving to a new day and time slot, Saturday at 8 p.m. on Channel 4, is the popular series Kung Fu, starring David Carradine (centre). In tonight's episode, Caine stands resolutely with townspeople of a small Mexican village as they prepare to confront a band of brigands who have demanded tribute in, A Lamb to Slaughter. Others in the cast are (left to right) Barbara Luna, Alejandro Rey, Julio Medina (the priest) and Joe Santos.

Tennis Star Signs Exclusive Contract With ABC Television

Billie Jean King, one of the world's best-known athletes and a pioneer in the fight for greater opportunity for women in sports, has signed an exclusive agreement with ABC Sports to serve as a regular commentator on a wide range of programs on the ABC Television Network, it was announced by Roone Arledge, President of ABC Sports.

"Billie Jean King is the single best-known woman athlete in the world," Mr. Arledge said, "and her accomplishments as a tennis champion are unequalled.

"More importantly, she also possesses personal and professional qualities which trancend her athletic ability — which make her an important person in the world — a person with something to say. We believe she will be able to translate these qualities into new successes as a television sports commentator for ABC."

Commenting on her exclusive agreement with ABC Sports, Mrs. King said, "Throughout my tennis career, I have always tried my best to be number one, so it is natural that I should choose ABC Sports, the world leader in sports programming, for my entry into television.

"ABC Sports has a proven record of excellence and innovation, and I am looking forward to a long and personally rewarding relationship with the people who have made ABC the industry's standard of quality in sports television."

In 1974, Billie Jean King became the women's U.S. Open champion for the fourth time with her singles victory at Forest Hills. At Wimbledon, she has won 18 titles, including five singles championships, and is the only women's tennis player to have won championships on all four surfaces — grass, clay, hard court and indoor — and she has garnered virtually every honor tennis can bestow.

In her new position as an ABC Sportscaster, Mrs. King will report on a variety of sports for television's most popular year-round sports program, ABC's Wide World of Sports, and will also participate in sports specials and cover other sports assignments for the ABC Television Network.

She will serve as host for an ABC Sports "Women's Sports Special" in September, 1975.

According to Mr. Arledge, other projects envisioned for Mrs. King include a magazine format program dealing with important and topical issues in sports.

New Series For Bunker Neighbors

The Jeffersons, the new half-hour comedy series inspired by the black next-door neighbors of the Archie Bunkers on the top-rated All in the Family program, will have its premier presentation on Saturday, Jan. 18 (8:30-9:00 PM.) on the CBS Television Network, it was announced by Robert D. Wood, President of the Network.

The new series will star Mike Evans, Isabel Sanford and Sherman Hemsley, respectively portraying Lionel, Louise and George Jefferson, the roles they popularized as regulars on All in the Family.

The Jefferson family is moving up in the world and that means goodbye "Bunkerville," to quote George Jefferson, and hello Manhattan high-rise. With George's cleaning business booming, he insists his wife and son relocate in mid-town, leaving the "plain folks" and moving up to the east side with the "fancy folks," George hopes he's left his troubles behind when he moves away from his old neighborhood and the tongue-lashing debates he has with Archie Bunker (Carroll O'Connor). But what he doesn't know is that he faces in his new environment a whole set of new neighbors, living even closer—one family on top of another instead of next door.

Movies

Exodus (xxx), on 4 at noon. Otto Preminger's 4-hour 1960 movie version of Leon Uris's best-selling novel about the birth of modern Israel, starring Paul Newman, Eva Marie Saint, Lee J. Cobb and Sal Mineo. It's exciting, well-acted and of considerable historic interest about a fascinating period in post-war Europe.

Decision Before Dawn (xxx), on 7 at noon. An excellent performance by Oskar Werner highlights this well-made 1951 espionage thriller about a German who spies for the Allies. Good on-location photography and a capable supporting cast that includes Richard Basehart and Gary Merrill, add to the film's interest.

Gypsy Girl (xxx), on 12 at 12:30. John Mills directed his daughter Hayley in this poignant 1966 English-made drama about a shy young girl who is looked upon by her village as a trouble-maker. Miss Mills gives a very sensitive performance as does a very attractive young actor Ian McShane as a gypsy lad who saves Hayley from being sent to a home.

The Boys from Brooklyn, on 11 at 2. No rating available on this 1952 comedy complete with jungle cliches and a corny "mad doctor" performance by Bela Lugosi.

The Dead Don't Die, on 6 and 8 at 2:30. A recent, unpreviewed made-for-television mystery set during the Thirties, about a seaman who is determined to clear his executive brother's name, starring George Hamilton, Ray Milland, Linda Cristal and Joan Blondell.

Lure of the Wilderness (xx), on 7 at 2:30. Jean Peters, Jeffrey Hunter and Walter Brennan star in this 1952 remake of the 1941 drama, Swamp Water, about a young man who finds an escaped convict and his daughter out in the wilderness and helps prove the man's innocence.

Commandos Strike at Dawn (xxx), on 12 at 2:30. A well-produced 1943 drama about partisan resistance in Nazi-occupied Norway, starring Paul Muni and Anna Lee.

Congratulations, It's a Boy (xx), on 5 at 3:30. Bill Bixby and Diane Baker star in this 1971 made-for-television comedy-drama about a bachelor playboy who suddenly finds he has a son — aged 17.

The Collector (xxxx), on 12 at 9. An excellent 1965 movie version of John Fowles interesting psychological best-selling novel about a maniacal plan executed by a psychotic young Englishman. The young man, well-played by Terence Stamp, kidnaps a beautiful young art student (Samantha Eggar) and keeps her captive in the cellar of his country home. The film builds considerable tension and the two stars are well handled by director William Wyler.

SAMANTHA EGGER
. . . on 12 at 9 p.m.

Hostile Guns (xx), on 5 at 11. Predictable western drama about a U.S. marshal who has to transport a wagonful of prisoners to the state pen, filmed in 1967 with George Montgomery and Yvonne DeCarlo.

Top Hat (xxxx), on 4 at 11:30. This 1935 musical classic is the best of the Fred Astair-Ginger Rogers films — and that's saying plenty. Fred plays a dancer who pursues the girl of his dreams from London to the Riviera in a story set to the music of Irving Berlin. Recommended.

Machine Gun McCain (xx), on 7 at 11:30. Peter Falk and John Cassavetes star in this violent, 1968 Italian-made crime-drama about syndicate activities in Las Vegas.

Jailhouse Rock (xx), on 12 at 11:30. For Elvis Presley fans, a 1957 musical about a young man who learns to play the guitar while serving a prison term for manslaughter, and becomes a top pop singer when he is released.

Horse Feathers (xxx), on 2 at 11:45. This 1932 movie is one of the Marx Brothers best, with the shenanigans set at a small-town college with Groucho as the Dean, Zeppo as his son and Chico and the silent Harpo as his aides.

Support Your Local Sheriff (xxx), on 6 at 11:50. A veteran cast of supporting actors (Walter Brennan, Jack Elam, Harry Morgan and Henry Jones) highlights this 1968 western spoof about a laconic gunslinger who becomes the sheriff of a wild western town. James Garner has the title role.

The Secret of Santa Vittoria, on 8 at midnight. Anthony Quinn and Anna Magnani star in this 1969 comedy-drama based on a true story about the inhabitants of a small Italian village who outwits the invading German army.

Song Without End (xx), on 6 at 1:45. If you can ignore the melodramatic aspects of this 1960 Hollywood version of Franz Liszt's life, you might be able to enjoy the beautiful musical selections. Dirk Bogarde makes a dashing Liszt, but he's bogged down by a heavy-handed script and an inept performance from his co-star Capucine.

FARM SHOW

—A New Kind Of Theatre

The Farm Show was first performed in a barn in the Clinton area of Western Ontario.

The Farm Show is something new in Canadian theatre, collective drama that grows out of the actors' experience of real-life contact with real people, in this case farm people who live in that region ot rural Ontario.

The Farm Show, created and performed by members of the Theatre Passe Muraille under the leadership of artistic director Paul Thompson, comes to CBC television on Sunday, January 12, at 9 p.m., as a presentation in the Performance series.

Produced for TV by Robert Allen, and directed by Ron Meraska, The Farm Show stars a six-member cast from Toronto's Theatre Passe Muraille: Anne Anglin, Janet Amos, Miles Potter, Ted Johns, Carol Galloway and David Fox. All play many parts — people, animals, and moving machinery. And they occasionally sing and dance.

The show is a series of uninterrupted vignettes, part character study, part story — a kaleidoscope of people and events that affords the viewer revealing glimpses of farm life as it is lived today. Its materials by turns moving, funny, and informative. A monologue by David Fox at the end of the show does more to explain the farmer's side of "food prices" controversy than anything ever written by an eonomist — and it's both moving and informative.

The Farm Show tells it like it is, about life on the farm. It was born in the summer of 1972, when the Theatre Passe Muraille migrated from Toronto to the Clinton area, lived and worked with the farmers and their families, and created a theatre piece out of what they had experienced and observed.

THE FARM SHOW—First staged in a barn in Western Ontario by Toronto's Theatre Passe Muraille, The Farm Show comes to CBC-TV in the Performance series, Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6. Created out of the theatre company's own experience, living and working on farms in the Clinton area two summers ago, The Farm Show reflects life in an Ontario farming community today, and the actors portray real people, as well as farm machinery and livestock.

Theatre Passe Muraille translates as "theatre without walls", and The Farm Show is literally that: It requires its audience to transcend the confines of a stage, and to let imaginations roam free in farm country. Its setting suggests a barn, but its scenes take place in fields and farm houses, in community halls and the streets of the county town, Goderich. Its actors portray the farm people of the area, as well as their livestock and farm machinery.

The Farm Show was a hit in its first performance in a barn near Clinton, and it continued to be a hit on tour. When it came to Toronto, it was still a hit. Perhaps because of its warmly human portraits of real people. Perhaps because of its mixture of humor and human drama. Perhaps because it conveys, even to city people, an understanding of farm life today.

The Farm Show was nominated the Chalmers Award for playwrighting in 1972. It was the first in a succession of collective creations for the theatre by the company, and as artistic director Paul Thompson explained, "We began collectives because the scripts weren't there for the material we wanted to do."

After The Farm Show came one on mining in the Cobalt area, in 1973, and last summer a show called Oil, done in Petrolia, Ont., home of the first North American oil well. It played in the town's recently-restored Victoria Playhouse, built in 1889, and one Petrolia lady, watching a poignant portrayal of herself in the production, was so moved that she cried. Later she said, "It was all so beautiful." That's the way Theatre Passe Muraille's "taken-from-life" productions affect some people.

The company's recent work includes 1837: The Farmers' Revolt, a recreation of the Mackenzie Rebellion in Upper Canada; and a drama about the historic "black Donnellys", both staged this fall. It recently sponsored a Newfoundland revue, Sickness, Death and Beyond the Grave, at the Bathurst Street Church in Toronto.

Paul Thompson, Theatre Passe Muraille's 34-year-old artistic director, is a native of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, who came to Ontario (Listowel) at the age of two. He later moved to Guelph where he lived with his scottish grandfather — a man who recited Robbie Burns poetry to his grandson. Thompson studied English and French at the University of Western Ontario, London, and spent some time as a student in Paris, where his interest in theatre intensified. After a period at Canada's Stratford Festival, where he was an assistant to director Jean Gascon, he founded a directors' co-op at Rochdale College in Toronto, and it was from this that the Theatre Passe Muraille came into being.

Theatre Passe Muraille's The Farm Show will be telecast on CBC-TV's anthology drama series, Performance, on Sunday, January 12, at 9 p.m.

DIARY BRINGS SPAIN TO LIFE

"Spain is distinct, virtually a land of poetry and romance." So wrote Washington Irving while travelling through Spain in the 1820's, and his words still hold true. Sunday, January 12, 9:00-10:00 p.m.; CTV retelecasts the National Geographic Society Special episode of Spain.

While travelling Irving kept notes and wrote letters, enough to fill a trunk and even today they serve as a guide to armchair travellers.

This journey begins by crossing the rugged Pyrenees where the Basques have lived, little unchanged since the time of Irving. Here, as elsewhere in Spain, the religious festivals have always been occasions of pageantry. During Holy Week, in one village, members bear crosses in a grand parade that slowly winds through the streets.

In Toledo, the Moors taught their magical arts. But today, a different kind of art and magic flourishes in Toledo. Ceramics, silversmithing, tool crafting, art is a part of daily life in this, El Greco's home.

Cervantes wrote his inspired comic tale of Don Quixote in La Mancha, yet the Queen of cities is undoubtedly Cordoba where the most magnificant mosque in Spain stands. Everywhere in Spain there is magnificence. Every summit spreads before the traveller, a mass of history filled with places renowned for some wild and heroic achievement.

Actor Immersed In Calley Role

TONY MUSANTE
. . . as Lt. William Calley

It's a performance that achieves complete believability and exciting dimensions when Tony Musante, physical disparities notwithstanding, portrays Lt. William Calley Jr. in Judgment: The Court-Martial of Lt. William Calley, an ABC Theatre presentation on the ABC Television Network, Sunday, Jan. 12 (8:30-10:30 p.m.).

"I've immersed myself in the trial and in Calley's background so that I can think as I imagined he did," says Musante. "I wasn't interested in just doing a surface portrayal."

Musante accepted the part immediately when producer-director Stanley Kramer called his agent, Don Wolfe, and asked if he would be interested in it.

"I didn't want to do a physical impression," says the actor. "I wanted to show the inner man. I've read almost everything available about him and I feel I know why he acted as he did. Not that I'm condoning his actions, of course," he added.

Movies

Some Kind of a Nut (x), on 8 at 12:45. An inventive, talented, writer called Garson Kanin (Spencer and Tracy, etc.) wrote and directed this hackneyed, unfunny 1969 movie about a bank teller who becomes an anti-establishment hero. Dick Van Dyke and Angie Dickinson star.

The Mysterious Doctor, on 11 at 1. No rating available on this 1943 thriller about a headless ghost rumored to inhabit the pit of an abandoned mine. Cast includes John Loder and Eleanor Parker.

Bus Stop (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. Marilyn Monroe gives a memorable performance in this 1956 film version of the William Inge Broadway play about a sexy but naive saloon singer pursued by a lovesick cowboy (well-played by Don Murray). Tender, dramatic with excellent supporting cast that includes Eileen Heckart and Arthur O'Connell.

The Sterile Cuckoo (xxx), on 4 at 9. Liza Minnelli received an Academy Award nomination for her role in this 1969 comedy drama. She plays a funny-sad campus freshman whose collegiate romance with a square entomology student runs a rocky and bittersweet course. (ABC plans to make an announcement before the film, that it may not be suitable for all members of the family).

Ulzana's Raid (xxx), on 5 9. A well-scripted, well-acted 1972 western drama starring Burt Lancaster. The plot, about the cavalry vs. Apaches is not a new one but director Robert Aldrich handles a large cast well, and the sceenplay is perfectly paced and suspensefully structured. If you like top-notch westerns, then you will enjoy this one.

Night Train to Milan (xx), on 11 at 9. A 1965 European-made thriller about a train passenger recognized as a wanted Nazi who commits murder and holds a woman hostage in order to make his escape. Cast includes Jack Palance and Yvonne Furneaux.

The Black Box Murders, on 4 at 11:30. A recent made-for-television mystery set against a stormy night in the country, about a desperate search for stolen campaign funds. Cast includes Julie Newmar and Marshall Efron.

LIZA MINELLI
. . . on 4 at 9 p.m.

Westward the Women (xx), on 12 at 11:30 p.m. Robert Taylor and Denise Darcel star in this 1952 salute to pioneer women, about a rancher and a trail-boss who lead a wagon train full of prospective frontier brides on a 1,500-mile trek from Chicago to California.

Jailhouse Rock (xx), on 7 at 11:45. For Elvis Presley fans, a 1957 musical-drama about an ex-con who becomes a pop music star.

The Young One (xx), on 2 at midnight. An unpleasant mixture of racial prejudice and violence, about a black musician fleeing the law, who is drawn into a web of danger when he lands on an island inhabited by a young girl and a lecherous older man. Made in Mexico in 1960 and starring Zachary Scott, Bernie Hamilton and Kay Meersman.

The Intruders (xxx), on 8 at midnight. A moderately absorbing 1967 made-for-TV western with a couple of good performances to recommend it — Don Murray as an ex-gunslinger turned marshall, and John Saxon as a half-breed trying to cope with prejudice. The action is centred around a small town's preparation for the reported arrival of the notorious Younger Brothers and Jesse James.

The Hatfields and the McCoys, on 8 at midnight. A recently made unpreviewed made-for-television drama about the petty thievery and ill-fated love affair that spawned the violence between two families in the legendary feud of the 1880s. Cast includes Jack Palance and Steve Forrest.

Satan's Triangle, on 8 at 1:30. This is the second time Kim Novak has been coaxed out of her self-imposed retirement for a television movie, and from the general description, it doesn't appear to have been worth her while. The plot is steeped in the supernatural, and features Miss Novak as the only survivor of a bizarre storm that resulted in the deaths of all other passengers on a small fishing boat. Supporting cast includes Doug McClure and Alejandro Rey, and if the plot doesn't sound too exciting, perhaps the opportunity to see Miss Novak will make up for it.

Smothers Brothers: For Rent—Not For Sale

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

Tommy Smothers is ready to return to television. He asks only that the Smothers Brothers Hour not be judged solely by the first show on Monday (8 p.m. EDT, NBC) The brothers have been brought back to replace a minor disaster called Born Free and they may think they've been thrown to the lions, since they must compete for an audience with Gunsmoke and The Rookies.

But has Tommy really changed since his feud with the "censors" at CBC-TV? It is a question he welcomes:

"Some people think we got this show by making concessions and copping out. Nothing could be closer to the truth.

"We will be making concessions and copping out on a regular basis. Our beliefs and convictions are not for sale. But they are for rent.

"There's a guard at the gate of NBC's Burbank Studios. Every morning, on the way to work, we check our beliefs and convictions with him. He gives them back every evening when we leave for home."

I interrupted to ask Tommy if the good gag lines were part of a comedy routine he had worked up for a studio audience? There was a pause. A laugh. And the answer: "Well . . . yeah."

No matter. The routine contains at least as much truth as it does humor.

The television audience last saw the Smothers Brothers in a series the summer of 1970. It was not a happy experience; the series got low rating, mainly because the young audience that best likes Tommy and Dick Smothers rarely stays home to look at TV during the hot weather.

The team went into semi-retirement and sued CBC-TV for breach of contract and for infringement of copyright. Tommy says the settlement came to "about $916,000" and even if much of the money went for legal costs and taxes, "it was worth it. It made our stand valid."

Still, the brothers went separate ways during much of the past five years. Tim, the fire-eating rebel of the protesting 1960s, bought a ranch in Northern California where he learned to watch the sun go down and relax. Dick, who had let Tom make the decisions, honed his skills as the driver of racing cars and spent months on ski slopes.

Just last year they decided the time was right for a reentry into show business. They worked up a new act, accepted bookings in several of the nation's best night spots and collected fabulous reviews.

"I didn't really want this show. I wanted a news show. But I was promised that if I took a show for 13 weeks and said nothing relevant, I'd then get my own weekend news show."

"My biggest problem is my mouth."

Perhaps so. But Tommy's mouth is also one of his biggest assets. He and Dick are the sons of a West Point garduate who survived the Bataan Death March in 1942 but who died on a World War II prison ship.

The two were students at San Jose State University—Tommy with his guitar and Dick with his bass fiddle—when young people fell in love with folk music. The brothers sang folk music, but with a twist.

When they told the story of "John Henry, the steel driving man," it was a tale about a high school dropout named Jack Hank. He died in a contest with a machine. "And," said Tommy Smothers, "a railroad man looked down at his inert form and said: 'Look at that big dumb Jack Hank—thought he could beat a machine'."

When they sang about the New England beginnings of this republic, the words went like this:

"The founding of the colonies: The original 13 colonies were founded by our forefathers who were fleeing from religious prosecution and the Common Market. The Puritans were very religious people who worked hard to carve a home from the wilderness. But on Saturday night everyone let down his hair and relaxed around a fireside with a fun-packed frolicsome witch burning."

They progressed out of night spots to the concert tour to television. From TV they progressed to controversy and that took them to obscurity. But Tommy has few regrets.

"The last time," he said, "we were reflecting what was happening in the streets.

"Now we have a reputation and an image that is not in keeping with our reality. We are better performers now.

"Our show will poke fun at the establishment, but our humor won't be as bitter as it once was—for the simple reason that we're not as bitter."

Courageous Lady Inspires Many

She can't walk, she has never been able to dress herself, toilet herself or write a letter. When she was born her parents were told there was little or no hope of her achieving a meaningful existence . . . she would always be a "Human vegetable." Today Sondra Diamond is a practising psychologist, she is also working on her PhD.

She will be the subject of a Man Alive program on CBC-TV on Monday, Jan. 13 at 10:30 p.m. titled I Am Not What You See.

Sondra was born 36 years ago with cerebral palsy and is confined to a wheelchair. The fight to be accepted as a full human being has been a tough one, but with the support of loving parents and sheer determination, Sondra has overcome her physical disabilities.

Last season the Man Alive program To Be Truly Human contained a short interview with Sondra Diamond. She was a great inspiration to many viewers who wrote wanting to find out more about this courageous woman.

The response inspired Man Alive to do a full program with Sondra, a resident of Philadelphia, Pa. In a sensitive, moving interview she talks about her joy of being alive and her moments of despair. She says: "It happens about every six months, my family has come to know that I go into my room and lock the door and I sit for a couple of hours and wonder why am I fighting and why am I shouting and why am I pushing? Inside of me, I am not a disabled person. I am not what you see visually. I am a woman inside of me, a woman with professional drives, with sexual drives, with all kinds of drives."

Roy Bonisteel conducts the interview on the program produced and directed by Sig Gerber, executive producer Leo Rampen.

Computer Aids Archaeologist

With the help of modern technology and six years of painstaking work by scholars, the fabulous Egyptian temple of Nefertiti, at Karnak, has been recreated. The techniques and results of this enormous project are the focus of the PBS Special The Mystery of Nefertiti, Monday, January 13 at 8:00 p.m. on KCTS/9.

Starting with more than 35,000 sandstone blocks stacked in warehouses and strewn haphazardly about Karnak, a team of scholars, researchers, photographers and artists, under the direction of Dr. Ray Winfield Smith, reconstructed on paper a temple built in honor of Egyptian Queen Nefertiti and destroyed more than 30 centuries ago.

The Mystery of Nefertiti explores the technique Dr. Smith developed of using a computer to match the sandstone pieces of this gigantic jig-saw puzzle, as well as the artistic renderings of the temple by Leslie Greener.

UBC Geneticist Hosts New CBC-TV Science Series

Advances in the world of science and technology and how they can affect our lives are the subjects on a new series on CBC-TV beginning Monday, Jan. 13 at 10 p.m.

Called Science Magazine, it is hosted by Dr. David Suzuki, internationally known for his work in genetics, which has ranged from chromosone reproduction to his controversial and outspoken opinions related to human destiny.

A University of British Columbia professor, known to CBC viewers as the host of Suzuki On Science, he is a born teacher and natural performer who communicates his passion for science. His popular series was shown on the network in 1970 and again in 1971.

Executive producer of the series, Science Magazine, is James Murray who has produced such notable successes as The Living Arctic, The Nature of Things, The National Dream.

As Murray says, the world of science is relatively little written or spoken of in the popular press or on TV. At the same time what is happening in the field of science affects people in all aspects of everyday life.

Science Magazine visits research centres all across Canada, and in some other countries, to bring viewers interesting developments from the laboratories.

The first program is typical with three new major breakthroughs explored. The first is recent ways in which the lives of premature babies are extended from techniques developed at Toronto's Sick Children's Hospital. The knowledge has led to more successful care of normal babies. A second item is on survival of persons in cold water and the development of a new life jacket that protects up to four times longer from the cold — a major cause of water deaths in Canada. This research is being carried out by the University of Victoria in B.C. The other item is a technique developed by the chemical engineering department of University of Toronto which identifies toxic lead in humans. There has been an increased awareness of lead poisoning in some urban centres but previously it had not been possible to ascertain the source of the lead — whether it was from car exhuast, soil or from smelters.

Other programs on Mondays at 10 p.m. will report on muscular dystrophy research at McMaster University, the affects on fetuses of drugs ingested by pregnant women and latest finds on the affects of marijuana on the health of users.

From a National Aeronautic Space Agency contract to do space medicine research at McGill University has come knowledge of how the balance of organs of the middle ear affects pilots in free flying, that is in spins etc., and how they can cause disorientation and dizziness.

Many other research developments that produce important new information will be explored in forthcoming programs.

Those who will be producing items for the Mondays-at-10 p.m. Science Magazine include Milo Chvostek, Diedrik D'Ailly and Heather Cook.

The Dead Don't Die, on 5 at 8:30. A recently-made, unpreviewed mystery drama set during the 1930s about a seaman who is determined to clear his executed brother's name, starring George Hamilton, Ray Milland, Linda Cristal and Joan Blondell.

The Black Hand (xx), on 11 at 9. Gene Kelly (cast in a non-dancing serious role) and J. Carrol Naish star in this moderately interesting 1950 account of organized crime in turn-of-the-century New York. Kelly plays a young man bent on revenge for his father's death.

Bye Bye Birdie (xxx), on 6 at midnight. An entertaining 1963 film rendering of the Broadway hit musical about the pandemonium caused by the drafting of a rock 'n roll star. The story is satirical in nature; highlighted by a good score and excellent performances by the cast that includes Dick Van Dyke, Janet Leigh, Ann-Margret, Paul Lynde and Maureen Stapleton.

They Call It Murder (xx), on 8 at midnight. A 1969 made-for-TV mystery based on Erle Stanley Gardner's The D.A. Draws a Circle, about the investigation of a swimming pool murder. Cast includes Jim Hutton, Leslie Nielsen and Jessica Walter.

Take a Giant Step (xxxx), on 8 at 2:05. An excellent 1960 drama in which Hollywood makes a serious attempt to show what it feels like to be black in a white-dominated Northern town. Singer Johnny Nash portrays a young man just entering adolescence, who discovers race prejudice in the world around him. A fine supporting cast includes Ruby Dee, Beah Richards and Estelle Hemsley, and there is a particularly moving scene between Miss Richards and her son (Nash). A box-office failure in the theatres at the time, this beautifully acted drama is a winner on the home screen.

Good Day For a Hanging (xx), on 6 at 2:20. Fred MacMurray and Robert Vaughn star in this offbeat 1959 western about an ex-lawman who captures a charming killer, but the townspeople refuse to believe him guilty.

M-A-S-H to Lose McLean Stevenson

By DON SHIRLEY

Trapper John (drunk, packing toilet paper into his duffel bag): If I don't like a movie, I walk out in the middle. If I don't like a war, I leave.

Hawkeye: (not so drunk): Don't you want to see how it ends?

Trapper: Oh, but it doesn't end. It continues — when it finishes here, they take it on the road.

— From one of last year's M-A-S-H episodes.

LOS ANGELES — Not many people walked out in the middle of M-A-S-H, the movie, when it was released in 1970. Critics cheered, and a public who wanted to walk out on the Vietnam War swarmed to the box office. But who would have thought that M-A-S-H could be taken on the half-hour television comedy road — and survive?

People die in M-A-S-H — possibly including, at the end of this TV season, one of the principal characters. Army doctors in the Korean War commit the seven deadly sins and general insubordination in the middle of a war zone. They, and the audience, laugh at some of the institutions America holds nearest and dearest. This is TV "sitcom" material?

Robert Altman, who directed the movie, doesn't think so. "I abhor it," he says of the CBS series. "I don't care how well it's done. It's like saying we're going to be in an Asian war every Saturday night."

Actually, M-A-S-H is aired on Tuesdays this season. Altman admits he has only seen "parts" of "five or six" episodes of the series.

Most Hollywood professionals disagree with Altman. Last year M-A-S-H won the best comedy series Emmy against the toughest competition ever mounted for that award. And public and professional taste have coincided. Almost two years after the Vietnam cease-fire, the Nielsen-ratings' Top 10 list consistently reveals that M-A-S-H, the TV show, is a smash.

AUTHENTIC

M-A-S-H is shot in two locations — one on the 20th Century Fox range out in the hills, for the big exterior scenes, and another on Stage 9 on the Fox lot next to Century City.

The first thing you notice on Stage 9 is the mud on the floor. Except it's not really mud, you discover when you step on it. It's a rubber compound carpet.

Everything else seems about as authentic as someone who has never been in the Army in Korea can imagine. And someone who was in the Army in Korea, Maj. William Pfiefer, assures you that it's "a remarkably accurate job."

Maj. Pfeifer is only passing through town; the show uses no official Army adviser, since such a title might also mean official Army interference. Maj. Pfeifer was recently a surgeon in the only Mobile Army Surgical Hospital left in Korea. Only now, he says it's called Surgical Hospital, Mobile Army. S-H-M-A. (However, a Pentagon spokesman in Washington reports that he still uses M-A-S-H.)

Gene Reynolds and Larry Gelbart, the creators of the TV show, met Pfeifer last spring, when they traveled to Korea for five days of research. While there, recalls Pfeifer, the Hollywood big shots joined in the fun at the unit's St. Patrick's party — something involving a casket, a nurse and Reynolds dressed up as a priest. Just like on the show, says Pfeifer, "when you work hard, and when you party, you let it all hang out."

Reynolds and Gelbart work hard at letting their show hang out. In no other TV series have more words, scenes and ideas that were taboo on commercial TV a few years ago bounded more naturally across the screen.

"The first year, there was a lot of stuff CBS objected to," recalls Gelbart. In the show's second season, "they wouldn't let us use 'circumcision.' " But this season, the third, "we've done a show about circumcision. I think they have the feeling we can handle most everything."

CAST CARES

Of course some words still are not uttered, and "we do a lot of little boy style dirty jokes," acknowledges Gelbart. Only one script — involving a multiple pregnancy — was ever flatly rejected by the network.

Gelbart himself rejects "countless" unsolicited scripts from "extremely young and naive people," he says. Among the most popular, inevitably rejected ideas are scripts involving transsexual doctors or visiting women from USO troupes or the press who fall in love with Hawkeye.

Shooting a series, especially without a live audience, can be tedious, as scenes must be rehearsed and shot from many different angles in order to get closeups of each actor. The "M-A-S-H" actors usually stick around to say their off-camera lines during all of the individual shots — which is "very unusual in my experience," says McLean Stevenson.

"We're very supportive of each other," says Stevenson, who plays Lt. Col. Henry Blake. "There's some real loving and caring on this show."

Stevenson, however, is no longer part of that loving and caring. He has signed a contract with NBC, where he wants to become a variety show host, and in the last episode of this season's M-A-S-H, Blake will finally get his discharge, probably to be killed in an airplane crash on the way home.

A less traumatic ending has also been shot, and 20th Century Fox, which owns the show, will make the final decision on Blake's death, which would be a first for a continuing character in a comedy series. Gelbart is hesitant to discuss the issue, since he doesn't want advance publicity of the possible death scene to frighten away viewers.

LIGHT MOMENT—Trapper John (Wayne Rogers, left) and Hawkeye (Alan Alda, right) find something amusing, but if Lt.-Col. Henry Blake (McLean Stevenson, centre) looks a little glum, it may be that he's regretting his decision to leave the hit series, M-A-S-H at the end of this season.

"I know most people don't like the idea, but most people don't like death itself," notes Gelbart, "CBS wasn't for it, but they said, 'We're not going to tell you what to do.' "

The show's makers are for it, "It would be a good demonstration of how wasteful war is," says Gelbart, to kill "someone the audience knows," as opposed to the anonymous soldiers who file through the operating room.

Harry Morgan, of Dragnet and December Bride fame, will replace Stevenson as the commanding officer. Though Morgan already appeared as a loony, bigoted general in one "M-A-S-H" episode, his new, continuing character will, like Blake "have to tolerate a lot of unorthodox behavior," says Gelbart. "But beyond that, I want to make him as different as possible from Blake."

Stevenson talks as if he will miss M-A-S-H. "I'm sure as I'm sitting here this is the best thing I've been in," he declares, "and I doubt if I'll ever be in anything as good as this again. This is the best thing in terms of half-hour comedy-drama that's ever been on television."

VALIDITY

M-A-S-H has its special luxuries, he points out: "You can let your belly hang out. You don't have to shave. There aren't many shows where you can look dirty and spit and make money and get laughs."

So why leave? "I think eveverybody else, I've carried tunity to have their own show," says Stevenson. "Like everybodyelse , I've carried the spears. The star of this show is the writing."

Radar O'Reilly, the virginal young corporal who anticipates all of Blake's words, is played by Gary Burghoff, 31, who is the only person who appeared in both the movie and TV versions of M-A-S-H. Don't ask him to compare the experiences, though. He'll tell you it's like trying to compare "painting and sculpture" or "opera and blues."

He will defend the television version against some of Althan's criticisms. Not enough visible blood? "You don't have to see the man's guts," maintains Burghoff, "to know from Hawkeye's face that the man is bleeding. The audience is allowed to imagine what's happening."

Perhaps no one is as convinced about the validity of the show's political statement as Alan Alda, who won last year's "super-Emmy" as the best actor in a television series for his portrayal of Hawkeye.

When he accepted the role, says Alda, "I didn't want the show to be a commercial for war. I didn't want it to take a neutral position toward war. I wanted to make sure it didn't portray war as a fun thing."

PRO-HUMAN

He is satisfied. Yet he is not willing to let the show be pigeonholed as "antiwar," either. "It's pro-human rather than anti-anything," he says. "The bias is for the people, whether they're victimized by war, bureaucracy, hypocrisy, whatever. It's about the variety of ways people get lost to systems, to non-human concerns, to over-organization."

Alda says he doesn't remember much about Altman's movie, "so I guess we're even." But he found the original novel, by Richard Hooker, "entertaining, with extraordinary characters in a place where they don't want to be, trying to save lives. This combination of resistance and caring and the ironic point of view is unusual."

This all sounds rather heavy. Has the show's popularity surprised Alda?

"The audience is not stupid," he replies. "They appreciate class."

"It's taken three years for people to understand and fall in love with this show," says McLean Stevenson. But though the show has been aired on a different day of the week each season—and this distresses its makers somewhat—the audience has followed.

"As of now, we're running longer than the war itself," says Gelbart. "But we're only on one day a week. The war was on day after day."

Movies

The Last Escape (xx), on 8 at 12:45. Predictable Second World War drama about the rescue of a German rocket scientist held by the Nazis, filmed in 1970 with Stuart Whitman and a European supporting cast.

She Done Him Wrong (xxxx), on 11 at 1. Said to be her favorite film, Mae West stars in this 1933 comedy classic, set during the Gay Nineties and co-starring Cary Grant.

Strangers on a Trail (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. A taut and suspenseful 1951 Alfred Hitchcock drama about a young man trapped in a strange murder pact with a demented playboy. Superbly directed, well-scripted and edited with fine performances by Farley Granger, Robert Walker and Ruth Roman.

The Hatfields and the McCoys, on 4 at 8:30. A recently-made unpreviewed drama about the events leading up to the famous 1880s feud between the Hatfield and McCoy families, starring Jack Palance, Steve Forrest and Virginia Baker. (Jack's daughter Brooke has a supporting role in this film.)

The Comedians (xx), on 8 at 8:30. A 1967 film rendering of Graham Greene's novel of unrest in Haiti that comes to the screen as a vehicle for the then Mr. and Mrs. Burton (Liz and Richard). The basic material is interesting but the splendid supporting cast (Peter Ustinov, Alec Guinness, Lillian Gish and Paul Ford) is hampered by sluggish direction and scenes that dwell too long on the love affair between Taylor and Burton.

Above and Beyond (xxx), on 11 at 9. An absorbing subject, well-handled in this 1953 drama about Colonel Tibbetts, the officer who piloted the plane which dropped the atom bomb on Hiroshima. Robert Taylor is excellent as the conscience-stricken Tibbetts, and Eleanor Parker is equally fine as his wife.

Vengeance Valley (xxx), on 7 at 11:30. A well-made 1951 western drama with Burt Lancaster tall in the saddle as a ranch foreman, and Robert Walker as his young brother with an eye for the ladies and a penchant for trouble. Joanne Dru plays the leading lady who causes a rift between the brothers.

CP

ELIZABETH TAYLOR
. . . on 8 at 8:30 p.m.

That Funny Feeling (xx), on 2 at midnight. Sandra Dee, Bobby Darin and Donald O'Connor star in this fairly amusing 1965 comedy mixture of romantic misunderstanding, mistaken identity and apartment-hopping in New York City.

The Harness (xxx) on 6 at midnight. An outstanding performance by Lorne Greene highlights this 1971 made-for-television adapted from a John Steinbeck story. He portrays an aging farmer at a disturbing crossroads in his life, and a good supporting cast includes Julie Sommars and Louise Latham.

Daughter of the Mind (xxx), on 8 at midnight. An interesting 1960 made-for-TV feature based on Paul Gallico's book, The Hand of Mary Constable. Ray Milland is cast as a professor of cybernetics who claims he is visited by his recently killed young daughter's spirit. The plot thickens when government officials become involved and a professor of parapsychology also enters the picture. Gene Tierney and Don Murray co-star.

Red River (xxxx), on 8 at 1:55. Top notch acting (Montgomery Clift, John Wayne, Walter Brennan, Joanne Dru), superb direction and a fine script make this 1952 movie a western classic. It's the story of a cattle baron and the empire he builds, a story told against the sweeping background of Texas.

The Shop on Main Street (xxxx), on 6 at 2:05. A memorable, tragic and beautifully acted story of a warm friendship that develops between a simple carpenter and an old Jewish shopkeeper during the Nazi occupation of Czechoslovakia. Filmed in Czechoslovakia in 1965 this award-winning drama is highlighted by perceptive characterizations and restrained pathos.

Today's Highlights

Opening Night, on 2 and 6 at 8:30. The Freedom of the City, Irish playwright Brian Friel's emotional drama about the conflict in Northern Ireland. Set in Londonderry in 1970 and drawing on the "Bloody Sunday" tragedy in Belfast on January 30, 1972, the play focuses on three Catholic demonstrators who take refuge in the guildhall. The three are subsequently shot to death and their story unfolds in flashbacks, within the framework of a court of inquiry into the incident. Cast includes Florence Paterson, Neil Munro, Mel Tuck and Edward Atienza. (90 mins.)

CP

GENE KELLY
. . . on 4 at 11:30 p.m.

Theatre in America, on 9 at 9. The Year of the Dragon, a domestic drama centering around a dying patriarch of a Chinese-American family, and focusing on the old man's estranged oldest son, a Chinatown tour guide who is angry at his father's stubborn adherence to tradition and frustrated with ghetto life. Cast includes George Takei who portrayed Mr. Sulu in the long-running Star Trek series. (90 mins.)

All in the Family, on 12 at 10. Tonight's episode serves as the pilot for The Jeffersons, a spin-off comedy series (premiering January 18) that follows the adventures of George and Louise Jefferson, the Bunker's black next-door neighbours. Tonight the Jefferson family contemplates their planned move to a new apartment on Manhattan's East Side. (30 mins.)

First Person Singular, on 2 and 6 at 10:30. In the final episode in the film memoirs of Lester B. Pearson, the late statesman talks about the complex relationship of political power to the individual, to Parliament, to democracy, to the news media and to the general public. (30 mins.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 11:30. Gene Kelly is the host of this program naming the first 10 members to the Entertainment Hall of Fame. The honorees, all of whom must have lived in this century include Dame Judith Anderson, Lillian Gish, Rosalind Russell, James Stewart, Fred Astaire, Carol Burnett and Carl Reiner. (90 mins.)

Star Trek's Mr. Sulu Plays In PBS Drama Year of the Dragon

The words were portentous, and the speaker's voice tingled with the promise of exotic adventure:

"Space — the final frontier . . ."

And, with cameras infiltrating unnamed galaxies, so began each week television's most successful science-fiction program, the cult-inspiring "Star-Trek."

As any fan knows, the international crew of the Starship Enterprise, entrusted with its mandate "to boldly go where no man has gone before," included a rather boyish-looking but usually somber-faced Asian helmsman named Mr. Sulu.

George Takei, no longer boyish-looking at 34, remembers the role fondly. But he can't help noting that his forthcoming TV role in Frank Chin's "The Year of the Dragon" is a powerful reminder that Mr. Sulu's world — where yellow, black and white (and even Vulcan) could live and work together with dignity and a common sense of purpose — is still far from being a reality.

Takei, a Japanese-American who spent part of his childhood in American concentration camps, plays the central figure in Chin's drama of a Chinese-American family struggling for identity in San Francisco's Chinatown. Premiered last spring at the American Place Theatre in New York, "The Year of the Dragon" will be telecast on January 15 at 9 p.m. over Channel 9's Theatre in America series.

George Takei

Born near Los Angeles in 1940, Takei was scarcely two years old when his family, including a brother and sister, were forcibly moved to a remote section of Arkansas and, in effect, imprisoned there. His mother, who was born in this country, was particularly bitter, he explained.

"She was ready to renounce her citizenship and move the family to Japan after the war. My father, well, he was able to look at it more philosophically. He said the American form of government was only as good as the people who were running it. Democracy failed then because those people failed, he told us. But he wanted to stay and we did."

Takei, who, incidentally, served as a pro-McGovern delegate to the 1972 Democratic Convention, was a reluctant architecture student at Berkeley when he decided to take a chance on what he wanted most to do — acting.

Takei stayed in school in California, but he switched to UCLA and obtained a B.A. and an M.A. in theatre arts. Later he studied additionally at Sophia University in Tokyo and the Shakespeare Institute at Stratford-on-Avon.

His first professional role was a small part in the film Ice Palace, which was followed by a Warner Bros. TV contract and some appearances in the series Hawaiian Eye.

Takei eventually returned to California and nothing much happened until Star-Trek came along in 1966. Not surprisingly, he looks back on his three years with that program with a touch of ambivalence.

"The show was put together with integrity and imagination, and it was a wonderful experience in many ways," he said. "But I was fourth or fifth banana on the show and as an actor, of course, I couldn't help feeling frustrated at times."

Currently Takei is the host of a weekly talk show entitled Expression East-West that is seen in the Southern California area. He is still active politically, and he's a member of the board of directors of the Southern California Rapid Transit District.

Population Experts Explore Solutions

Earthwatch: World Population Crisis, a special hour-long documentary on the 1974 World Population Conference in Bucharest, will be presented Sunday, January 12, at 4:03 p.m. EST on the CBC Radio Network.

Immediately following Earthwatch (from 5:10 — 7:00 p.m. EST) CBC Radio's Cross-Country Checkup, will respond to the Earthwatch documentary and examine the population crisis in general.

Both programs, totalling three hours, will also be broadcast by the New Zealand Broadcasting Corporation, several BBC stations in the U.K., and National Public Radio in the United States.

In August 1974, 170 nations convened in Bucharest to either ratify, modify or discard the World Population Plan of Action that has been created by working committees over a 10-year period. The package was designed to slow population growth, discuss an equitable sharing of resources within the new limits, foster a respect for family planning and, at the same time observe the sovereign rights of nations and the needs of developing countries.

CBC producer David Humphreys attended the Conference and returned with a series of a 10 hour-long programs which were broadcast on Ideas. His series was created out of numerous interviews and panels recorded in Bucharest and was aimed at the listening audience for its discussion and ratification.

Geraldine Sherman, executive producer if Ideas, has taken the series and condensed it into the one-hour special Earthwatch. Narrator for the documentary is Dr. Donald Chant, chairman of the Department of Zoology, University of Toronto, and president of Pollution Probe.

Those heard in the documentary include: Dr. John M. Stycos and Julia Henderson of the International Planned Parrenthood Federation; John D. Rockefeller III; anthropologist Margaret Mead; Lester Brown, agronomist and author of In The Human Interest and By Bread Alone; Brian Johnson, director of the Institute for the Study of International Organizations, University of Sussex; demographers John Caldwell and S. Chandraseskhar; Wendy Dobson, Canadian delegate to the World Population Conference; and Mahmood Mamdani, professor of sociology, Tanzania, and FAO member Peter-Wilhelm Schulte.

At 5:10 p.m. Cross-Country Checkup, in a live, four-continent phone hook-up, will respond to Earthwatch and ask listeners in Cansda, the U.S., New Zealand and the U.K. to give their opinions, Assisting host-moderator Harry Elton in the studio to discuss and answer questions from listeners will be Lord Ritchie-Calder, a Senior Fellow at the centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions, Santa Barbara, California.

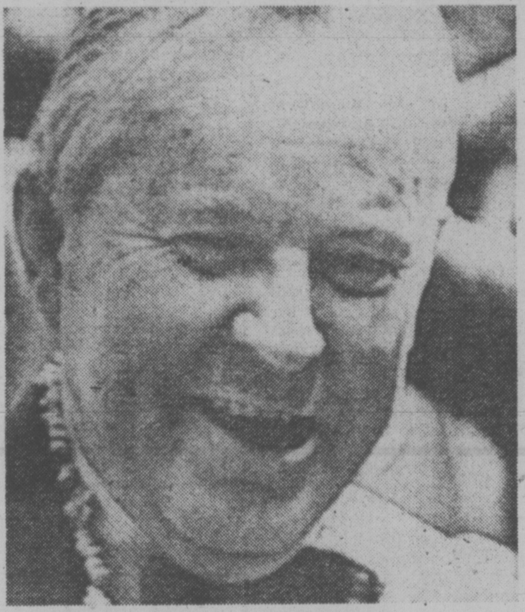
Pearson Memoirs Conclude



THE LATE LESTER B. PEARSON focuses his concern on the complex relationship of political power to the individual in the final chapter of First Person Singular to be seen on Wednesday at 10:30 on Channels 2 and 6.

The late Lester B. Pearson, distinguished world statesman, former prime minister, history professor and raconteur, focuses his concern on fundamental national and international problems in Retrospect on Power, the 13th episode in CBC's First Person Singular series.

This concluding program in the repeat showing of the acclaimed Memoirs of a Prime Minister series will be seen Wednesday, Jan. 15 at 10:30 p.m. on the CBC-TV network.

"I have learned not to confuse power with greatness," says Mr. Pearson at the outset of his frank commentary on the uses and abuses of political power. "Power doesn't only at times corrupt; it diminishes a person."

In commenting on the inadequacy of human leadership in approaching matters of critical concern to society, Mr. Pearson expresses deep concern about the intense pressures brought to bear on today's leaders — pressures of a kind not experienced in past generations.

"I've never been unduly impressed with pomp and circumstance," he continues. "I've seen more common sense expressed around the table in a farm house . . . than I have around the . . . table in the United Nations committee room. If you could only get this kind of popular wisdom and common sense channeled into the agencies of political decision."

During the course of the 30-minute program, Mr. Pearson speaks from the emotional depths of personal experience as he looks back on power, and its relationship to the individual, to Parliament, democracy, the news media, and the general public. He also looks ahead, sometimes with deep foreboding, but tempered with optimism.

He comments candidly on the "inability of our ordinary parliamentary and executive process to deal quickly with problems facing this country that are far removed from anything we've ever had in the past . . ."

First Person Singular was produced at CBC Ottawa by Cameron Graham and written and directed by Munroe Scott.

Movies

The Night They Raided Minsky's (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. Forget the silly story line about a pert, innocent Amish girl from the sticks of Pennsylvania who storms Broadway and ends up stripping in burlesque. Just sit back and enjoy the many engaging things in this 1968 comedy, including some nostalgic scenes which capture the attractive, sleazy quality of old-time burlesque, and the comedians whose "racy" material filled out the stage waits between the strippers. Cast includes Jason Robards, Britt Ekland and Norman Wisdom.

The Creeping Unknown (xx), on 11 at 1. A 1955 sci-fi thriller about a man turned into a horrible monster that terrorizes London, starring Brian Donlevy and Jack Warner.

Soldier of Fortune (xx), on 5 at 3:30. Clark Gable and Susan Hayward star in this 1955 movie adaptation of Ernest Gann's romantic adventure about a woman who hires a soldier of fortune to locate her missing husband. It wasn't a great book and it isn't a great movie.

The Deadly Affair (xxx), on 7 at 9. An engrossing, intelligent 1967 detective drama, based on John Le Carre's Call for the Dead. James Mason is excellent as a British agent who sets out to uncover the hidden facts behind a British government employee's apparent suicide. In addition to Mason, a top notch supporting cast includes Simone Signoret, Maximilian Schell, Harry Andrews and Lynn Redgrave.

Ugetsu, on 9 at 8. Another in the series of Japanese films, this one made in 1953 by director Kenji Mizoguchi. The plot blends fantasy with realism to tell the story of two greedy brothers-in-law in 16th-century Japan whose lives are drastically altered by lustful soldiers and a castle of ghosts. Winner of the grand prize at the Venice Film Festival.

The Last of the Powerseekers on 12 at 9:30. No rating available on this 1969 compilation of episodes from Harold Robbins' Survivors TV series, starring Lana Turner and George Hamilton as a pair of international jet setters.

Massacre at Fort Perdition, on 11 at 10. A 1954 Mexican-made western about an ex-soldier and his bride, sole survivors of an attack by Geronimo, who explain how it all happened.

How to Murder Your Wife (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. A frantic, often funny 1965 comedy-farce tailored to the talents of Jack Lemmon, who is in top form as a playboy bachelor who wakes up one morning to find gorgeous Virna Lisi in his bed with a wedding ring on her left hand. The rest of the action is devoted to Lemmon's frantic efforts to get rid of his Italian spouse and the excellent supporting cast (including Terry-Thomas) matches Lemmon's energy and offer bright performances.

JAMES MASON
. . . on 7 at 9 p.m.

Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (xx), on 2 at midnight. An well-produced 1943 mystery with Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson. In this one, a chessboard is a clue to solving a series of unusual murders as the Musgrave estate.

Accused of Murder (xx), on 6 at midnight. An ordinary little mystery about a homocide detective who falls for a nightclub singer suspected of killing a gangland lawyer, filmed in 1957 with David Brian and Vera Ralston.

Guns of the Magnificent Seven (xx), on 8 at midnight. Routine 1969 western set in 19th century Mexico, filmed in Europe and starring Monte Markham, George Kennedy and James Whitmore.

The Whole Turth (xx), on 6 at :30. A 1958 who-dun-it with very little suspense, starring Stewart Granger, Donna Reed and George Saunders. The plot concerns an actress' murder which is pinned on an American producer whose wife refuses to believe he did it.

A Shot in the Dark (xxxx), on 8 at 2:15. A free-wheeling, often hysterically funny 1964 farce with a flawless performance by Peter Sellers as the bumbling French inspector he created in the film, The Pink Panther. Elke Sommer is decorative icing on the cake as it's really Sellers film, and he has a field day investigating a pair of murders.

Chico Handles Quick Success—and Controversy

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES — It was barely a year ago that Freddie Prinze first appeared on The Tonight Show.

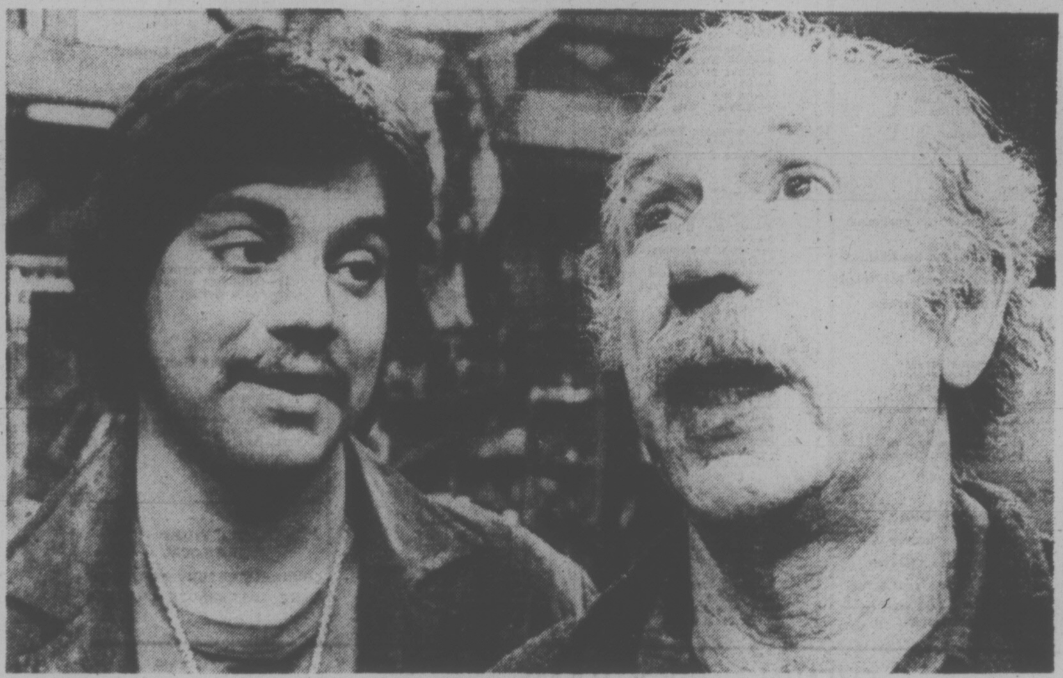
Today he's the co-star of the television hit Chico and the Man, in which he plays Chico, who charms his way into a stormy relationship with a worn-out WASP garage owner, Jack Albertson.

Freddie, at 20, believes he can handle overnight stardom and weather the controversy that has arisen over the casting of a New York Puerto Rican as a California Chicano.

"I'm fed up with all that," he said in reference to protests by militant Mexican-American groups.

"Hey, black people made it cause they stuck together. The '70s is the time for the Latins to make it but we don't know how to stick together. The only way is for a Puerto Rican to play a Chicano and be applauded. The sound doesn't matter. The feelings are the same. Spick means the same thing in New York as it does in Los Angeles. The pain is the same."

All the protests haven't come from outside radicals. Ray Andrade, the Mexican-American associate producer of Chico and the Man, said he was "about 75 per cent happy with the image."



Freddie Prinze, Jack Albertson — Chico and the Man

Prinze, 6-foot-2 and unmarried, said he's doing a Chicano as best he can.

"I have the language, the mannerisms. The message we're saying to 40 million people college lecturers couldn't get across in 10 years. There are people out there who don't know what a Chicano is."

Freddie first performed on television in the dying days of Jack Paar's ABC comeback. A tape from that landed him on the Johnny Carson show, where he was seen by James Komack, producer and creator of Chico and the Man.

Freddie's mother is Puerto Rican and his father Hungarian. He calls himself a Hungarican. Freddie joined a gang and developed his humor as a protective device to disarm rival gang members.

He spent his high school years performing as a standup comic in amateur nights at coffee houses and nightclubs in New York.

After winding up at 3 a.m., he'd fall asleep in closs the next day. Eventually he graduated from the New York High School of Performing Arts.

Freddie said he landed the part because he worked best with Jack Albertson, who already had been signed.

He said he went into the role of Chico wide open. "Chico became me, not the other way round. He's street-smart. He has gutter sense. He's using his street-fighting instincts in a peaceful way. He's a very sensitive person."

Freddie believes he can handle the quick success which, he said, he expected.

"When I was in high school they told me I was gonna be a bum. That gave me the incentive. I worked hard. I was lucky but I knew it was coming. I know one thing, I'm funny. They can't take that away from me.

"I make good money but I'm not living in Beverly Hills and I don't have a fancy car. I stash my money in the bank. I see that my family is taken care of. I've got a few toys. I go out with the chicks.

"Sure, a lot of people tell me I'm a star. That's what keeps me the same. I want to hold on to what I am; what my family made me."

CTV Sports Special Profiles Canadian Skating Champion

Canadian Toller Cranston is the world's number one free figure skater and is regarded by some as the free figure skating champion of the century. His style defies comparison. The different, difficult and graceful flair he adds to arm, leg and body movement has encouraged his critics to refer to him as an earthbound Nureyev! In Munich, the German press hailed him as 'toller Toller,' meaning the magnificent Toller and magnificent he is. Thursday, January 16, 7:00-7:30 p.m. EST, CTV takes great pride in presenting Toller, Toller! a half hour sports special honoring Canada's skating genius.

Someone recently suggested to CTV's Vice-President of Sports, Johnny Esaw, that they could watch Cranston skate for hours. As a result, CTV Producer Ralph Abraham has taken some of the most entertaining and excitin performances in Cranston's career, ranging across Canada and Europe where his performances such as Pagliacci have earned him encore after encore.

Toller will be competing in the Canadian Figure Skating Championships airing January 31, 9:00-11:00 p.m. and February 1, 2:00-5:00 p.m. EST on CTV. Here, he will have stiff competition from Ron Shaber who is the world's number two free skater.

Toller Cranston

Later in March, Toller hopes to win the World's Figure Skating Championship to be covered by CTV from Colorado Springs.

Figure skating is an athletic endeavour that has brought more World and Olympic gold medals to Canada, 12 in all, than any other sport. Figure skating is a combination of ballet, gymnastics and music and is always packed with superb physical effort and emotion. Toller Cranston continues to reach for perfection at all times with his own futuristic style.

Toller began skating at the age of eight and he competed in his first national event in 1964. In that same year, he won the Canadian Junior Championship. In 1967, he was first at the Quebec Winter Games and in 1968 and 1969, he placed third in the Canadian Seniors. It wasn't until 1971 that he took first place in the Canadian Senior competitions. That year, he also placed second in the North American Championships and 11th in World Championship competition. He has come from his 11th place standing to third overall in the World's.

Pop Philosophy Comes to CBC-TV

There are a lot of Canadian comedians and pop philosophers who've never been on television before. That situation is rectified on a new 10-week CBC-TV network series from Montreal, called Quelque Show, which made its debut on Sunday, January 5 at 3:30 p.m.

Co-hosts of Qcelque Show are Les Nirenberg and Nick Auf der Maur, who conduce on-the-street interviews with people from all walks of life, who let their real feelings all hang out.

On the second program, Jan. 19 (Note: one-week preemption) Cabot Square in Montreal is where Les and Nick point a microphone and camera at those few knowledgable masters of the fine art of pan-handling, for which Montreal is so famous (along with Toronto, of course). Included is an interesting conversation between a teenager and a middle-aged woman about a matter which still remains insoluble . . . the generation gap.

The Jan. 26 show takes Les and Nick to Montreal's Dominion Square, where they meet a well-known character, Kid Oblay, who recalls the day he fell off an army truck, was declared a cripple, and so avoided the Second World War. Other stories and experiences, equally charming, are spun by Kid's cronies.

Show four (Feb. 2) takes Les and Nick to Ottawa where they run into a big demonstration, sponsored by "the Free Baltic of Balkan States o rsomething." They get involved with the demonstrators. They later encounter oldtimers whose memories go back to the days of the Great Depression . . . in Ottawa naturally.

ARMY GAME IRKS CLC

OTTAWA (CP)—The defence department said Thursday it did not intend to insult anybody when a riot-control exercise was held in the Maritimes last month involving imaginary workers.

A spokesman said militia units were conducting an exercise under the military role of being ready to provide aid to the civil power in cases of emergency.

"There was no intention to insult or upset anybody."

Joe Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, protested in a letter to Prime Minster Trudeau Wednesday that the exercise was repugnant and disgusting.

Two field squadrons from Camp Gagetown, N.B., were depicted as "striking or dissident workers from the fictitious Andrewville Aviation Company," Morris said.

He said there is no excuse for riot control exercises to select workers as their target.

Cities to Share In B.C. Gas Plan

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Premier Barrett will recommend to Ottawa a doubling of the export price of natural gas and a three-way revenue sharing scheme to give B.C. municipalities, the provincial and federal governments each an additional $60 million in yearly revenues.

B.C.'s proposal for ending the current dispute with the federal government over natural gas taxation was announced today at a news conference broadcast throughout the province.

It would see the price of gas to U.S. customers increase from $1 to $1.93 per thousand cubic feet with a total increase in revenues of $180 million.

A one-third share of those revenues would double the amount of money the provincial government grants municipalities each year.

Barrett also said those additional revenues, which are over and above the $100 million in gas revenue B.C. is expected to collect this year, would give Ottawa more cash than it would receive under the new federal budget proposal for gas taxation.

The premier will take his solution to Ottawa next week when he will meet federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald and acting prime minister C. M. Drury.

Barrett called his proposal "a simple one" which will not involve any increase in the domestic price of gas but set a fair export price for B.C.'s natural resource.

All B.C. municipalities would share in the $60 portion of new gas revenues and Barrett said the Union of B.C. Municipalities would be asked to help in working out an appropriate sharing formula.

The premier said it would be the first time municipalities received a direct share of new provincial revenues. This year municipalities received a total of $66.2 million in per capita grants from the province.

American importers have been warned of possible increases in gas prices, said Barrett, and an increase of $1.93 per thousand cubic feet would only bring B.C. gas prices in line with the price of gas produced in the U.S.

The B.C. scheme would involve an immediate increase in export prices of $1.35 and an increase by the end of 1975 to its real market value which now stands at $1.93.

But Barrett said he could not predict what Ottawa's reaction to the B.C. scheme will be.

He said he assumed Ottawa's budget proposal was not motivated "by politics" but a desire to gain more money for federal coffers, and B.C.'s plan "would produce three or four times more new revenues for the federal government" than Ottawa's own proposal.

Sources in Ottawa say, however, it remains highly doubtful the federal government will accept the B.C. proposal.

The provision to which B.C. takes such strenuous objection was first proposed in the defeated May 6, 1974 budget and then re-instated in the new budget brought down by Finance Minister John Turner on Nov. 18.

The federal finance department views the "fair market value" provision that would apply to B.C. gas as a "companion piece" to the nondeductibility provision that applies to Alberta oil.

Ottawa stood firm on the

HEROIN RAID NABS 4

VANCOUVER (CP) — A raid by the co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit Thursday seized more than six pounds of heroin worth an estimated $4 million in street sales and arrested four suspects.

It was the second major raid within two months. In November, eight persons were arrested, breaking up what was believed to be Vancouver - Vancouver Island heroin ring.

Meanwhile the head of the RCMP in B.C. Edwin Willis said in Victoria the recent high-level drug arrests in the province have stemmed the flow of drugs in B.C. and offered as proof an increasing number of break-ins since the arrests.

Moving in behind protective screen, explosive expert walks warily

City Panic in Dud Bomb Threat

A Montreal man in his late 20s appeared in Victoria provincial court today charged with extortion in the wake of the city's biggest bomb scare at dusk Thursday.

Gilles Paul Proulx, a recent arrival to Victoria, is charged with inducing a local bank manager "by threat to pay the sum of $100,000" and was remanded to Tuesday for plea.

The charge was laid by police during a series of tension-filled events sparked by a report that a bomb had been delivered to the Toronto Dominion Bank branch at Douglas and Fort by an "unwitting courier."

The city's rush-hour bedlam was cloaked in icy silence around the site for two hours. Downtown traffic redirected, pedestrians cordoned off, buildings evacuated and both major hospitals were on standby emergency alert.

Police report today that they are satisfied the package did not contain a live bomb.

For bank manager Edgar McBride the experience was real. It started about 2:30 p.m. when "a man between 40 and 45 years old walked into the bank and delivered a letter and a brown briefcase to the front counter."

The man—who police said was entirely innocent and duped into his role—indicated to a bank clerk both items were to be delivered to the bank manager's office at the rear of the branch office.

"It's not usual, we don't get many requests like that," said McBride today after the tension had cleared.

"When the clerk questioned the man she was told the briefcase contained 'IBM cards for Mr. McBride!"

The items were delivered to McBride by an accounting officer.

"I opened the letter. It contained (hand-printed) instructions that told me where the key was, how to open the briefcase and that there was an explosive device inside."

McBride said the key was taped on the side of the briefcase, which was somewhat battered.

When he opened the case "I could see batteries, wires and something that looked like an electronic device. I didn't investigate further."

He said the device was contained in a General Electric cardboard box with a picture of an iron on it.

"The instructions—I followed them—told me to take the bomb out, fill the briefcase with a sum of money and deliver the money to a location six blocks away from the bank."

"There was a certain route I had to follow," said the

WILL THE REAL FIRST LADY . . .

Times News Services

OTTAWA—When is a First Lady not a First Lady? When she stands in line to buy her own plane tickets, of course.

That's what Mme. Gaby Leger, wife of the governor-general—the Queen's representative in Canada and therefore titular head of state—does.

Officially Canada's First Lady, Mme. Leger confirmed Thursday that she does not possess a free-flight pass such as the one issued to Margaret Trudeau.

The pass issued Margaret was explained by one airline official as "a courtesy to Canada's first lady."

Arsenic Link To Disease

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department has released the long-secret report on the effects of arsenic on Yellowknife residents, and the report clearly suggests that the poisonous substance may be having a bad effect on people's health.

Despite Health Minister Marc Lalonde's assurances that the report did not find a relationship between arsenic and ill health, the report does link arsenic dusts from area gold mines to skin diseases among mine workers.

It also reports other unusual health findings that could be linked to arsenic, a substance that may cause diseases ranging from skin lesions to gastric cancer.

Meanwhile, the government was severely criticized by the Indian Brotherhood and the Metis Association of the Northwest Territories for taking a "cavalier attitude."

In a sbatement released today, Indian leaders demanded free water delivery to the native people in the old section of Yellowknife and an immediate health survey of all residents.

Mr. Lalonde said Thursday the report did not link arsenic with ill health in the Northwest Territories capital and that the report would not make "great bedside reading."

The study, which came to light on a CBC radio show this week, says "evidence of an association between arsenic exposure and a high prevalence of skin lesions among individuals occupationally exposed to contact with arsenical dusts was found."

However, the report, which detected higher-than-average levels of arsenic in the air and water around Yellowknife, finds other symptoms of ill health in Yellowknife residents which it can't explain.

It says abnormal brainwave changes "and other neurological findings" were detected more frequently than would have been expected and adds, "The significance of this occurrence cannot be explained at this time."

It also found a high incidence of acute respiratory disease in males as well as a high prevalence of chronic "non-specific" respiratory disease.

The study, prepared by health workers in the environmental health directorate, says the irritant action of inhaled arsenic dust may have had a minor contributing role to play in these conditions.

But this could be less important than other environmental factors, for instance, the harm to the respiratory system from smoking in a cold climate.

The report also says it is possible that environmental arsenic contributed to the prevalence of skin lesions among residents of the community other than workers exposed in the mines.

Snowmobile Mishap Kills 3

TACHIE (CP) — Three people were killed when a convoy of snowmobiles broke through the ice of Stuart Lake, about 70 miles northwest of Prince George, Wednesday night.

A spokesman for the Stuart-Trembleur Indian band said Thursday one of the bodies was recovered and skin-divers would attempt recovery of the other two today.

B.C. Tel Director Post for Pollen?

Premier Barrett will shortly announce the appointment of Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen to the 11-man board of directors of the B.C. Telephone Company, according to Vancouver Sun columnist Allan Fotheringham.

In his column Thursday, Fotheringham said the B.C. government's purchase of 200,000 shares of B.C. Tel common stock places the premier in a strong position to demand government representation on the board.

And that position will be filled by Pollen, "probably the most passionate, well-informed critic of B.C. Tel in this province."

Praising the choice, Fotheringham adds: "Pollen in a B.C. Tel board room will be a slashing werewolf in a coop full of fat geese."

The mayor himself could not be reached for comment today, and the article states Barrett gave a "no comment" reply when asked for confirmation of the story.

Fotheringham outlines the substance of Pollen's attacks on B.C. Tel's operation since he has been in office. These mainly concern its corporate structure in relation to profitability, which in turn is the determining factor in rate increases.

Pollen has repeatedly said that B.C. Tel's practice of buying equipment and services from three affiliated companies that are subsidiaries of B.C. Tel's parent company in the U.S. essentially makes it a captive customer.

The result is, he claims, that none of the profits are funnelled back into the company. Instead, they are "siphoned off" to its American parent.

B.C. GAS EXPORT CUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Extreme cold weather in British Columbia's natural gas fields and mechanical problems have cut gas exports to the United States Northwest in half.

Northwest Pipeline Corporation of Salt Lake City, Utah, the wholesale buyer from Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., estimated that the fuel delivered Thursday was down to 400 million cubic feet from the export contract quota of 809 million cubic feet daily.

The export figure began dropping steadily from about 650 million cubic feet at the beginning of last week.

Residential supplies are being maintained in Washington and Oregon, but the cutback is causing widespread disruption among industrial users.

E. C. Phillips, Westcoast president, said everything possible was being done to alleviate the situation and Canadian industrial customers were cutting back to help.

Big Ford Layoff

DETROIT (AP)—The Ford Motor Co. is closing 17 of its 23 U.S. car and truck assembly plants next week in layoffs that will affect 85,175 of its 175,000 workers, it was announced today.

Refinery Picketing Cuts Ferry Runs

Picketing which began Thursday at lower mainland oil refineries has reduced B.C. Ferry sailings and elicited a warning from an oil firm spokesman that gas stations in the Vancouver area will run dry if picketing continues.

Pickets sent by the Montreal locals of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic workers Union appeared again today at Standard Oil's Burnaby refinery and Gulf Oil's refinery in nearby Port Moody, halting deliveries from the two plants.

Similar pickets were reported at Shell and Imperial bulk delivery facilities in Burnaby.

A spokesman for Standard said many service stations normally received bulk deliveries on Fridays and will run dry within a few days if the refinery disruptions continue.

The picketing of refineries also has halted deliveries of home furnace oil supplies but most cusomers have at least 10 days' supply on hand.

Spokesmen for Gulf, Shell and Texaco in Victoria said this morning there has been no picketing of their local storage tanks.

B.C. Ferries spokesman Bob Innes said the sailing reductions came about immediately because ferries are fueled directly from trucks, rather than storage tanks, and picketing had stopped truck deliveries.

Unless picketing stops, the 6 p.m. Swartz Bay, 6:30 p.m. Departure Bay, 8 p.m. Tsawwassen and 8:45 p.m. Horseshoe Bay sailings are cancelled today, Monday and Wednesday, he said.

Saturday, Tuesday and Thursday, the 5 p.m. Swartz Bay, 5:30 p.m. Departure Bay, 7 p.m. Tsawwassen and 7:45 p.m. Horseshoe Bay Sailings will be eliminated.

Sunday runs will be unaffected.

There are two ferries at each terminal but it is the four on the mainland which are affected by the refueling problem, he said.

He predicted few problems for travellers because "we've got lots of capacity. All it does it knock off one round trip out of 16."

New York

Wall Street piled up a sharp gain in very active trading in a rally ignited by news that President Ford had decided to call for a $15 billion income tax cut.

A large part of the advance came in the opening hour, when 8.20 million shares changed hands for the fourth largest opening-hour volume on record at the NYSE.

After that the pace quieted down a bit, but the market held its gains and then gradually began adding to them in the afternoon.

In Washington, Ford administration officials confirmed that the president had decided to take a unanimous recommendation from advisers that he proposed a reduction of about 10 per cent in the taxes individuals must pay on their 1974 incomes. The step would be aimed at stimulating the recession-ridden economy.

An added spark was provided by prime rate cuts at a number of major banks across the country.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the NYSE volume leader, rose ⅝ to $47¾.

A wide range of consumer business issues posted gains on the news of the tax cut plan.

Montreal

All sectors moved higher in light trading at Montreal.

Pacific Petroleums rose $1 to $16½, Northern Electric $1 to $18½, Husky Oil ⅞ to $14¾, MacMillan Bloedel ¾ to $23¼, Moore Corp. ⅜ to $40⅞ and Mercantile Bank ⅝ to $14⅝.

Among speculative issues, Kiena Gold Mines rose 5 cents to $2.75 trading 7,200 shares.

London

Prices at London were generally higher in quiet trading.

The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed at 159.7, up 7.3 points.

Canadian issues recorded modest gains.

Sukunka Plans 'Soon'

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The executive assistant to Provincial Northern Affairs co-ordinator Alf Nunweiler says he expects a consortium of private firms soon will announce plans to develop the Sukunka coal fields in the Peace River region.

Steve Wood told a meeting of the Northern Development Council in Prince George an announcement will be made "fairly soon" on the long-delayed project.

At the same meeting, Prince George-Peace River Conservative MP Frank Oberle said a report prepared by a Parliamentary research team shows fuel could be developed more cheaply from Sukunka coal than from the Athabasca oil sands of Alberta. He also accused the British Columbia government of dragging its feet on the Sukunka project.

Canadian May Buy Aston Martin Firm

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian entrepreneur George Minden, 37, of Toronto says he heads a group of investors interested in buying Aston Martin Lagonda Ltd., the prestige British car maker that went into voluntary liquidation Dec. 30.

Minden leaves Sunday for Britain "to explore the possibility of purchasing Aston Martin."

He plans a meeting with Charles Warden, managing director of the British firm which has been seeking a buyer or some form of financial support to rescue the company.

Minden did not identify other members of his group but said any deal would be in the form of a joint venture.

"It seems unthinkable that this magnificent car should be allowed to sink into oblivion," he said in an interview. "The demand for the Aston Martin is very strong. Sales forecasts for North America alone for this year was 200 cars and that represents revenue for manufacturers of more than $5 million."

Minden is the owner and president of Grand Touring Automobile Ltd. of Toronto, sole importer of Aston Martins for Eastern Canada.

He also owns the Windsor Arms Hotel in Toronto and a string of restaurants.

Earlier this week, Warden said he was hopeful Aston Martin could find a buyer, adding that at least one United States businessman, not identified, had expressed a "firm interest" in the company.

CP in Mexican Pact

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's largest private banking group and CP Hotels have signed a $40-million agreement for a tourist company in Mexico, the Mexican bank announced Thursday night.

The agreement was signed here by the Banco de Comercio, Mexico's largest private banking system, and the Toronto-based Canadian company, the bank said.

The bank said it will finance 51 per cent of the investment while CP Hotels will finance 49 per cent, or a minority contribution.

This is in line with Mexico's foreign investment law that precludes majority foreign ownership in any joint-capital venture.

The agreement was signed ffor the bank by its President Manuel Espinosa Yglesias and for the Canadian company by CP Hotels president Donald Curtis.

The bank said the company will develop tourist facilities in Mexico City and the resorts of Acapulco, Cancun, Zihuatanejo, Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan and Baja California.

No further details were given.

AUTOPLAN CLAIMS TOTAL 373,500

VANCOUVER (CP) — Norman Bortnick, general manager of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, said Wednesday more than 84,000 autoplan claims were received by ICBC in November and December, bringing the total opened since the plan's March 1, 1974, start to 373,500.

He said this does not mean there have been 373,000 motor accidents since March 1 since one accident may produce a number of claims, and many claims do not stem from an accident at all.

Bortnick said the onset of winter caused the number of claims for October, November and December to surpass those of July and August.

Tomeson Saunders

Tomeson Saunders Whitehead Ltd. of Toronto has made an offer to the shareholders and creditors of J. T. O'Bryan and Co. to purchase the Vancouver-based insurance brokerage firm.

John MacLean, a director of O'Bryan, said acceptance is contingent on agreement among the creditors, which include Lloyds of London and Canadian Indemnity Co. of Winnipeg. He said he had not yet seen the letter of intent from Tomeson.

He said the firm, which has a debt of about $1.5 million and an annual premium income of about $22 million, is still being run by the existing management and not by its creditors.

O'Bryan is the seventh or eighth largest insurance brokerage in the country; Tomeson is one of the largest.

Granisle

Granisle Copper Ltd. reports net income for the year ended Sept. 30, 1974, at $9.6 million or $2.89 a share compared with $4,766,569 or $1.43 a share for the previous 12-month period.

Total value of production of copper, gold and silver for the latest year at the company's mine on Babine Lake in North Central British Columbia, was $33.4 million for fiscal 1974 compared with $22.15 million for fiscal 1973. The average price of copper received in 1974 was 90.4 cents a pound compared with 72.6 cents in 1973.

Capital expenditures during the year were $3.18 million and dispositions amounted to $635,573.

The company estimates royalties under the Mineral Land Tax Act at $669,000 for the period Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1974.

The company's annual report, released Friday, also says the federal budget, announced Nov. 18 but with provisions retroactive to May 6 has caused the company to make additional provision for taxes, subsequent to the audited report for Sept. 30.

The budget provides that taxes and royalties of provincial governments are no longer deductible for federal tax purposes. Also development expenses and depletion allowances have been changed.

Granby

Granby Mining Co. Ltd. has announced net earnings of $7,670,478 or $5.31 a share for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, increased from $5,514,723 or $3.82 a share in 1973.

Increased revenue was attributed to higher prices for copper, gold and silver and increased production from the Granisle Mine.

Production value from the Granisle and Phoenix mines was $40,362,305, compared with $29,765,169 in 1973. The average price of copper increased to 89.3 cents a pound from 73.1 cents in 1973, the company reports.

Exploration and development expenditures increased to $2.2 million from $886,000 in 1973. The increase was attributed to development of coal deposits in southern Alberta and a copper project in northern British Columbia.

Woodward Stores

Woodward Stores Ltd. net earnings increased to $5,018,046 or 77 cents a share in the nine months ended Oct. 31 compared with $4,691,300 or 72 cents for the same period in 1973, company chairman C. N. Woodward announced.

He said in his report to shareholders that department store sales increased 20 per cent to $347,472,658 from $289,608,833 in the same period of 1973.

"Net earnings during the third quarter were adversely affected by the impact of escalating wages and other operating costs in spite of constant vigilance over such costs," said Woodward, adding that unseasonable weather in B.C. and Alberta during the fall has kept the sales of outer clothing down.

Zinc Concentrate Plant Planned at Alice Lake

Alice Lake Mines Ltd. has annouced it will start milling zinc in March at its mine site on northern Vancouver Island.

Company director Emil Shaw said some open pit mining is already under way at the site in preparation for milling.

Twenty men will be employed in mining and milling activities and the high grade zinc will be shipped in concentrate form to Japan.

Ore capacity of the mill is 200 tons per day. About 1,000 tons of zinc concentrate will be produced each month, Shaw said.

Marble River is five miles from Port Alice on the west side of Vancouver Island and about 30 miles across-Island from Port Hardy, which is on the northeast coast.

The mine site is on the river between Alice Lake and Victoria Lake.

About 100,000 tons of ore have been established as reserves, grading at 8.7 per cent zinc with some values of silver, gold and copper.

Zinc prices have bucked the trend of the world metal market and have remained fairly high. In addition, the company will not be affected by the curtailment of orders from Japan because the cutback applies only to copper.

Shaw said Alice Lake Mines Ltd. had been working for many months to get permission from the B.C. government to go ahead with the mine and the company was gratified production is under way.

The small mine working in high grade ore could be expected to be a profitable venture despite the current economic conditions, including high levels of taxation, he said.

The company has purchased a compact mill which is being shipped from Timmins, Ont.

Alice Lake was issued a provincial government production lease dated Dec. 20.

The 56-claim property has been leased to Zeballos Development Co. Ltd. of Vancouver, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Ponderay Explorations Ltd. of Edmonton.

Zeballos will supervise production and manage the mine.

Alice Lake received an initial payment of $15,000. Zeballos will be permitted to regain its production costs and then profits will be split 50-50 with Alice Lake until each company has received $300,000.

Then Zeballos will receive two-thirds and Alice Lake one-third of any remaining profits.

Zeballos officials said the ore shoud net the mine $15 per ton before taxes.

Super Truck Does It All

It's the biggest logging truck in the world but it looks more like a giant roller skate, according to Cliff Burrows, co-designer of the super truck for Butler Bros. Equipment Ltd. of 2046 Keating Cross Road.

"If you could see it loaded from the air it would look like a pile of logs on wheels," Burrows said.

It is long and low, designed to have the logs resting on top of the cab.

Conceived by company president Claude Butler, it was constructed in one year by six men at a cost of $200,000, including funds for testing.

The testing begins next week at the Keating Cross Road gravel pit to check turning radius and other steering features.

Burrows said the truck is definitely number one.

Largest logging truck on record is one built by an American firm, Kenworth, which carries a 100-ton load with trailer. The Butler truck carries a 200-ton load with trailer.

"More important," says Burrows, "our truck will carry 100 tons without trailer. That is important in the bush were manoeuvrability is limited. If you have ever tried to back up a trailer you will know what I mean."

Burrows says the truck has a big future both for logging and for large industrial projects like oil drilling in the desert.

Cold, Snow To Stay Weekend

Up to four inches of fresh snow on Thursday likely will remain on the ground over the weekend as temperatures drop well below freezing tonight and more snow flurries are expected.

Side streets, secondary roads and driveways presented a motoring hazard throughout Greater Victoria as the new snow turned to ice, although main streets and highways were generally safe if caution was used.

There is some uncertainty in the immediate weather outlook, but the main choice today appeared to be between a cold weekend and a sharply cold weekend, depending upon movement of air down the Gulf of Georgia and Haro Strait before a Pacific disturbance reaches the coast.

The air moving south brought a temperature of 36 below to Prince George early today and a mere 5 above in Prince Rupert. On the north coast winds were 35-45 mph.

The chance of snow flurries here tonight will be followed by increasing north winds to 15-20 mph and possibly more flurries Saturday.

Temperature tonight is expected to be 20 degrees, with a high of 35-40 Saturday.

But the Pacific front is about 1,000 miles off-shore and if it moves on to the continent it will be somewhat warmer and produce snow or rain showers by Sunday and rain by Monday, forecasters predict.

Their outlook for Thursday was almost dead on, as snow began falling on Victoria by late morning and continued until about 8 p.m. Winds were not quite what was forecast.

Up-island, conditions are still sub-Arctic with temperatures below freezing and up to a foot of snow.

CUPE Eyes Overtime Ban

★★★

Victoria Times
FRIDAY, JANUARY 10, 1975 15
SECOND SECTION

The city outside workers union will consider an official ban on overtime next week, a union spokesman said today.

Jim Walker, president of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said some outside workers have already begun an unofficial, voluntary overtime ban on an individual basis.

An official ban "will be considered by the executive early next week, and all areas of pressure tactics really, because that's what they're (the city) doing," he said.

Some workers have decided it isn't worth the $6.63 hourly overtime rate when construction laborers make more than that in straight-time wages, he said. But he added that crews did salt ice-covered roads overnight.

The city and the union met Wednesday with mediation officer Clark Gilmour but the union said no progress was made. Another meeting will be held Jan. 21 and until Labor Minister Bill King tells the union Gilmour's report has been received, the union cannot implement its strike decision.

The 280 outside workers, along with other CUPE members in Greater Victoria, have been offered and have rejected a 15.75 per cent wage hike for 1975.

Union spokesmen said the increase won't eliminate pay disparities between local government workers and employees of public and private agencies doing similar work.

Walker said percentage increases heavily favor high-paid workers.

He said Camosun College instructors are about to approve a 16.3 per cent wage increase on pay levels ranging from $11,532 to $20,848, but the low end for college instructors was about the high end for municipal workers.

"We can't talk percentages in these present negotiations . . . I don't know what we would need in a percentage figure to come to that" (the amount likely to be awarded college instructors).

Meanwhile, mediation meetings have been arranged for various dates next week involving employees at the Capital Regional District, Saanich, Esquimalt and Greater Victoria school board.

Draft Runs Out At Colwood Inn

The Colwood Inn ran out of draft beer today, a victim of the temporary closure of Carling O'Keefe brewery in Vancouver.

The Colwood pub will remain open, however.

A spokesman for the hotel said bottled beer will be available and the beer parlor would stay open on that basis as long as it could.

Also affected by the Carling O'Keefe shutdown are Westwind International Motor Inn at Langford and King John Inn at 2668 Sooke Road.

Both hotels expected to run out of draft beer on Saturday.

About 220 employees of Carling O'Keefe have stopped work to protest the layoff of 60 workers in the Christmas season.

As a result, the brewery stopped production on Dec. 27.

The three local beer parlors can buy draft beer only from Carling O'Keefe but they can purchase bottled beer from all companies.

Pollen Scolds Dowell

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen again threw the book at the Greater Victoria Library Board Thursday, with claims that the board's 1975 provisional budget contains unnecessary frills and lacks fiscal discipline.

In particular, he rebuked the board's chairman, Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell, for attempting to pass off a substantial budget increase as a modest one.

In a circular letter to municipalities which accompanied copies of the budget, Dowell noted it would require an increase in municipal contributions of less than 18 per cent over 1974.

That, said Pollen at a city finance committee meeting, was "a most misleading and preposterous assertion."

★

He said the fact that the draft budget is based on a doubling of provincial contributions — from $60,000 to $120,000 — but does not include provision for staff salary increases now under negotiation pushes the actual increase closer to 35 per cent.

Referring to Dowell's statement that the provisional budget was achieved "by dint of rigorous pruning and cost-cutting," Pollen said: "It really does bring up a little bit of nausea."

The mayor said the library budget has risen by more than 100 per cent over the last five years, and the city's share of about half a million dollars is more than Victoria spends on all aspects of recreation, including entertainment facilities and financial support to such groups as the Victoria Symphony and the Art Gallery.

He was not questioning the importance of the library's prime function, the dissemination of books and information, but he was challenging the need to extend its scope to include 8 millimetre and 16 millimetre films, picture loans, and "all kinds of records and music from rock to classical."

The committee tabled the budget pending a meeting next week with library board representatives.

Open Talks Last Only 11 Seconds

A "public" negotiating meeting between the city and the firefighters union lasted 11 seconds Thursday before two reporters were told to leave by city manager Jim Bramley.

He asked the reporters if they were present by invitation.

When told that union had publicly stated it wanted open negotiations, and after hearing local president Ross Cameron say he had no objection to the press attending, Bramley indicated it is not City Hall policy for negotiations to be open.

Mayor Peter Pollen, who had earlier welcomed public negotiations saying nothing but good could come of them, denied later there is a conflict between himself and Bramley.

"I put Mr. Bramley a little bit on the spot," Pollen told reporters.

"But as far as I am concerned, if Mr. Bramley deemed it advisable to have a closed meeting, then I would fully support him."

Pollen also said "I'm not against negotiations being open but if the parties do not wish it to be made public, then so be it."

Late last year, the Greater Victoria Library Board tried to have open negotiations but the Canadian Union of Public Employees refused to go along.

The 104-member firefighters union, whose contract expired Dec. 31, wants a one-year contract with a 10 per cent pay raise plus a cost-of-living clause stating that for every one per cent or portion of that in the consumer price index increase, a similar amount shall be added to the wage structure. First-class firefighters currently earn $1,086 a month.

SECOND FIRE DESTROYS HOME

The Sooke fire department is investigating a fire that broke out twice Thursday and destroyed a house at 2642 Sooke River Rd.

"We're suspicious, that's all we can say," Fire Chief L. G. Jones said today.

The two-storey wood frame house, insured for $30,000, was owned by Gordon Jirsch.

Jones said the fire first broke out about 2:30 p.m. Thursday and was extinguished by firemen in about half an hour.

Around 6:30 p.m. one of his men passed the house and the fire was still out, Jones said.

At 6:50 p.m., when the fire department was again called, the house was completely ablaze and couldn't be saved, he said.

No one was in the house either time, said Jones.

But Which Way Do You Aim a Sun-Dial?

THE EVERGREENS THAT we fetched from the woodlot have gone up in fragrant smoke. The decorations are back in the attic. It was a fine holiday, one that brought Ron North from Victoria and Sue and Steve by icy roads from Edmonton, and it left us a cargo of gifts that will prove their usefulness in the months ahead.

When Win and I start another year's fishing with one of our luckless expeditions after steelhead trout, we'll be better equipped to cope with winter streams. We gave each other chest waders by mutual decision arrived at one breezy day last fall.

Hip boots are great as far as they go. But for fishers who let eagerness replace discretion, they don't go far enough. We were casting our flies when a drove of coho salmon arrived upon the scene. Try as we might, we couldn't reach out to them. The inevitable happened. We waded a step deeper, then another step and took a chilly wavelet over our hip-boot tops.

Presently the salmon cruised off to frolic elsewhere. We squished out to the beach, emptied our flooded boots, and built a warmup fire.

"What we need are waders," I said. "Why don't we get 'em for each other?"

Chest waders are useful but not decorative. They sag, they bag No woman can look her best in them, and the sporting goods salesman did not help my pitch when my dear one groped her way into a pair.

"You know," he remarked with misplaced humor, "if you pull the top over your head and tie a string around it, you'll be completely waterproof."

The waders are still to be tested, and so is the brass sundial that poses an installation problem.

We have a place picked for this handsome marker of sunny hours, and a length of chubby drift-log on which to mount it.

But how does one orient the compass points embossed on its rim? Should its 'North' be aimed at true north or magnetic, and how many degrees of leeway do Vancouver Islanders allow for compass deviation? These are matters that must be resolved if our sundial is to keep even casually accurate time, and advice from an expert will be welcome.

We have found storage space for the folding table that will replace a pile of magazines under our projector when we bring out our slides. And one of these days, we'll take time to study a couple of stocking gifts to Win that foreshadow change.

These are English-Metric conversion calculators. One is a ruler fitted with a sliding band, the other a series of tables cased in plastic. Both should help reduce chaos to mere confusion when the impending shift in measurement systems takes place.

To this tally of gifts that pleased, I can add the one-flower vase presented with a small, ceremonious bow by a holiday guest from Japan. The vase itself is a thing of beauty and the package that sheltered it only less so.

We'd heard that in Japan gift-wrapping is a kill that has acquired elements of an art.

First, the outer paper, which was midnight black patterned with white lotus.

Then, wrapped around a delicately-fashioned wooden box, a band of white paper traversed by one bright-red stripe.

"It's traditional," our guest explained. "Perhaps it's for good luck.")

And in the box, packed to withstand the hazards of travel, the aquamarine vase which will one day receive the first rose from a gift-bush now leafless in this new January.

There are those who take a dark view of gift-giving. I've never agreed with them, preferring to number giving and receiving among the joys of life.

My feet, comfortably splayed in new moccasins, are grateful to the giver, and in due time we'll enjoy the present that turned up belatedly from California this morning.

A basket of candied fruit, to be admired but not touched until we've worked off the holiday calories!

Educator Dies After Stroke

Prominent educator Henry C. Gilliland, 74, died at Royal Jubilee Hospital Thursday after suffering a stroke Monday.

Gilliland, first dean of education at the University of Victoria, retired from that post nine years ago. UVic chancellor Robert Wallace said today Gilliland's career had been a major contribution to education, both through the province and in the city.

Born in Saskatchewan, he had joined the city school staff in 1918, and was vice-principal of Sir James Douglas School from 1923 to 1928, was later principal of Prince Rupert high school before returning to Victoria and heading Victoria Normal School.

He is survived by his wife, Katherine, 840 Richmond; a son, John, at Memorial University, Newfoundland and a daughter, Jane, Mrs. Douglas Patterson, in Germany.

Funeral arrangements, by Cunningham Funeral Chapel, are pending.

Q. Where and when was the English colony of British Columbia proclaimed? G. L.

A. The colony was first proclaimed in 1858 in Fort Langley, but the capital was soon after moved to New Westminster. The fort was named in 1827 after Thomas Langley, Hudson's Bay Co, director and was disbanded in 1839. A new establishment (the current Fort Langley) was built several miles further up the river where land was better for agricultural purposes.

ARMY GAME IRKS CLC

OTTAWA (CP)—The defence department said Thursday it did not intend to insult anybody when a riot-control exercise was held in the Maritimes last month involving imaginary workers.

A spokesman said militia units were conducting an exercise under the military role of being ready to provide aid to the civil power in cases of emergency.

"There was no intention to insult or upset anybody."

Joe Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, protested in a letter to Prime Minster Trudeau Wednesday that the exercise was repugnant and disgusting.

Two field squadrons from Camp Gagetown, N.B., were depicted as "striking or dissident workers from the fictitious Andrewville Aviation Company," Morris said.

He said there is no excuse for riot control exercises to select workers as their target.

Cities to Share In B.C. Gas Plan

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Premier Barrett will recommend to Ottawa a doubling of the export price of natural gas and a three-way revenue sharing scheme to give B.C. municipalities, the provincial and federal governments each an additional $60 million in yearly revenues.

B.C.'s proposal for ending the current dispute with the federal government over natural gas taxation was announced today at a news conference broadcast throughout the province.

It would see the price of gas to U.S. customers increase from $1 to $1.93 per thousand cubic feet with a total increase in revenues of $180 million.

A one-third share of those revenues would double the amount of money the provincial government grants municipalities each year.

Barrett also said those additional revenues, which are over and above the $100 million in gas revenue B.C. is expected to collect this year, would give Ottawa more cash than it would receive under the new federal budget proposal for gas taxation.

The premier will take his solution to Ottawa next week when he will meet federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald and acting prime minister C. M. Drury.

Barrett called his proposal "a simple one" which will not involve any increase in the domestic price of gas but set a fair export price for B.C.'s natural resource.

All B.C. municipalities would share in the $60 portion of new gas revenues and Barrett said the Union of B.C. Municipalities would be asked to help in working out an appropriate sharing formula.

The premier said it would be the first time municipalities received a direct share of new provincial revenues. This year municipalities received a total of $66.2 million in per capita grants from the province.

American importers have been warned of possible increases in gas prices, said Barrett, and an increase of $1.93 per thousand cubic feet would only bring B.C. gas prices in line with the price of gas produced in the U.S.

The B.C. scheme would involve an immediate increase in export prices of $1.35 and an increase by the end of 1975 to its real market value which now stands at $1.93.

But Barrett said he could not predict what Ottawa's reaction to the B.C. scheme will be.

He said he assumed Ottawa's budget proposal was not motivated "by politics" but a desire to gain more money for federal coffers, and B.C.'s plan "would produce three or four times more new revenues for the federal government" than Ottawa's own proposal.

Sources in Ottawa say, however, it remains highly doubtful the federal government will accept the B.C. proposal.

The provision to which B.C. takes such strenuous objection was first proposed in the defeated May 6, 1974 budget and then re-instated in the new budget brought down by Finance Minister John Turner on Nov. 18.

The federal finance department views the "fair market value" provision that would apply to B.C. gas as a "companion piece" to the non-deductibility provision that applies to Alberta oil.

HEROIN RAID NABS 4

VANCOUVER (CP) — A raid by the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit Thursday seized more than six pounds of heroin worth an estimated $4 million in street sales and arrested four suspects.

It was the second major raid within two months. In November, eight persons were arrested, breaking up what was believed to be Vancouver - Vancouver Island heroin ring.

Meanwhile the head of the RCMP in B.C. Edwin Willis said in Victoria the recent high-level drug arrests in the province have stemmed the flow of drugs in B.C. and offered as proof an increasing number of break-ins since the arrests.

City Panic in Dud Bomb Threat

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

A Montreal man in his late 20s appeared in Victoria provincial court today charged with extortion in the wake of the city's biggest bomb scare at dusk Thursday.

Gilles Paul Proulx, a recent arrival to Victoria, is charged with inducing a local bank manager "by threat to pay the sum of $100,000" and was remanded to Tuesday for plea.

The charge was laid by police during a series of tension-filled events sparked by a report that a bomb had been delivered to the Toronto Dominion Bank branch at Douglas and Fort by an "unwitting courier."

The city's rush-hour bedlam was cloaked in icy silence around the site for two hours. Downtown traffic was redirected, pedestrians cordoned off, buildings evacuated and both major hospitals were on standby emergency alert.

McBRIDE

Police report today that they are satisfied the package did not contain a live bomb.

For bank manager Edgar McBride the experience was real. It started about 2:30 p.m. when "a man between 40 and 45 years old walked into the bank and delivered a letter and a brown briefcase to the front counter."

The man—who police said was entirely innocent and duped into his role—indicated to a bank clerk both items were to be delivered to the bank manager's office at the rear of the branch office.

"It's not usual, we don't get many requests like that," said McBride today after the tension had cleared.

"When the clerk questioned the man, she was told the briefcase contained 'IBM cards for Mr. McBride'."

The items were delivered to McBride by an accounting officer.

"I opened the letter. It contained (hand-printed) instructions that told me where the key was, how to open the briefcase and that there was an explosive device inside."

McBride said the key was taped on the side of the briefcase, which was somewhat battered.

When he opened the case "I could see batteries, wires and something that looked like an electronic device. I didn't investigate further."

He said the device was contained in a General Electric cardboard box with a picture of an iron on it.

"The instructions—I followed them—told me to take the bomb out, fill the briefcase with a sum of money and deliver the money to a location six blocks away from the bank."

"There was a certain route I had to follow," said the

Arsenic Link To Disease

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department has released the long-secret report on the effects of arsenic on Yellowknife residents, and the report clearly suggests that the poisonous substance may be having a bad effect on people's health.

Despite Health Minister Marc Lalonde's assurances that the report did not find a relationship between arsenic and ill health, the report does link arsenic dusts from area gold mines to skin diseases among mine workers.

It also reports other unusual health findings that could be linked to arsenic, a substance that may cause diseases ranging from skin lesions to gastric cancer.

Meanwhile, the government was severely criticized by the Indian Brotherhood and the Metis Association of the Northwest Territories for taking a "cavalier attitude."

In a statement released today, Indian leaders demanded free water delivery to the native people in the old section of Yellowknife and an immediate health survey of all residents.

Mr. Lalonde said Thursday the report did not link arsenic with ill health in the Northwest Territories capital and that the report would not make "great bedside reading."

The study, which came to light on a CBC radio show this week, says "evidence of an association between arsenic exposure and a high prevalence of skin lesions among individuals occupationally exposed to contact with arsenical dusts was found."

However, the report, which detected higher-than-average levels of arsenic in the air and water around Yellowknife, finds other symptoms of ill health in Yellowknife residents which it can't explain.

It says abnormal brainwave changes "and other neurological findings" were detected more frequently than would have been expected and adds, "The significance of this occurrence cannot be explained at this time."

It also found a high incidence of acute respiratory disease in males as well as a high prevalence of chronic "non-specific" respiratory disease.

The study, prepared by health workers in the environmental health directorate, says the irritant action of inhaled arsenic dust may have had a minor contributing role to play in these conditions.

But this could be less important than other environmental factors, for instance, the harm to the respiratory system from smoking in a cold climate.

The report also says it is possible that environmental arsenic contributed to the prevalence of skin lesions among residents of the community other than workers exposed in the mines.

B.C. Tel Director Post for Pollen?

Premier Barrett will shortly announce the appointment of Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen to the 11-man board of directors of the B.C. Telephone Company, according to Vancouver Sun columnist Allan Fotheringham.

In his column Thursday, Fotheringham said the B.C. government's purchase of 200,000 shares of B.C. Tel common stock places the premier in a strong position to demand government representation on the board.

And that position will be filled by Pollen, "probably the most passionate, well-informed critic of B.C. Tel in this province."

Praising the choice, Fotheringham adds: "Pollen in a B.C. Tel board room will be a slashing werewolf in a coop full of fat geese."

The mayor himself could not be reached for comment today, and the article states Barrett gave a "no comment" reply when asked for confirmation of the story.

Fotheringham outlines the substance of Pollen's attacks on B.C. Tel's operation since he has been in office. These mainly concern its corporate structure in relation to profitability, which in turn is the determining factor in rate increases.

Pollen has repeatedly said that B.C. Tel's practice of buying equipment and services from three affiliated companies that are subsidiaries of B.C. Tel's parent company in the U.S. essentially makes it a captive customer.

The result is, he claims, that none of the profits are funnelled back into the company. Instead, they are "siphoned off" to its American parent.

B.C. GAS EXPORT CUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Extreme cold weather in British Columbia's natural gas fields and mechanical problems have cut gas exports to the United States Northwest in half.

Northwest Pipeline Corporation of Salt Lake City, Utah, the wholesale buyer from Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., estimated that the fuel delivered Thursday was down to 400 million cubic feet from the export contract quota of 809 million cubic feet daily.

The export figure began dropping steadily from about 650 million cubic feet at the beginning of last week.

Residential supplies are being maintained in Washington and Oregon, but the cutback is causing widespread disruption among industrial users.

E. C. Phillips, Westcoast president, said everything possible was being done to alleviate the situation and Canadian industrial customers were cutting back to help.

Big Ford Layoff

Refinery Picketing Cuts Ferry Runs

Picketing which began Thursday at lower mainland oil refineries has reduced B.C. Ferry sailings and elicited a warning from an oil firm spokesman that gas stations in the Vancouver area will run dry if picketing continues.

Pickets sent by the Montreal locals of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic workers Union appeared again today at Standard Oil's Burnaby refinery and Gulf Oil's refinery in nearby Port Moody, halting deliveries from the two plants.

Similar pickets were reported at Shell and Imperial bulk delivery facilities in Burnaby.

A spokesman for Standard said many service stations normally received bulk deliveries on Fridays and will run dry within a few days if the refinery disruptions continue.

The picketing of refineries also has halted deliveries of home furnace oil supplies but most cusomers have at least 10 days' supply on hand.

Spokesmen for Gulf, Shell and Texaco in Victoria said this morning there has been no picketing of their local storage tanks.

B.C. Ferries spokesman Bob Innes said the sailing reductions came about immediately because ferries are fueled directly from trucks, rather than storage tanks, and picketing had stopped truck deliveries.

Unless picketing stops, the 6 p.m. Swartz Bay, 6:30 p.m. Departure Bay, 8 p.m. Tsawwassen and 8:45 p.m. Horseshoe Bay sailings are cancelled today, Monday and Wednesday, he said.

Saturday, Tuesday and Thursday, the 5 p.m. Swartz Bay, 5:30 p.m. Departure Bay, 7 p.m. Tsawwassen and 7:45 p.m. Horseshoe Bay Sailings will be eliminated.

Sunday runs will be unaffected.

There are two ferries at each terminal but it is the four on the mainland which are affected by the refueling problem, he said.

He predicted few problems for travellers because "we've got lots of capacity. All it does it knock off one round trip out of 16."

High Tension In City Extortion Bid

bank manager and "I walked it."

McBride refused to give other details, "because there's far too much publicity given to these kind of things," but he said he managed to tell two bank employees what was going on as he went out. The employees phoned the Victoria police before McBride left the bank.

Detective Inspector Richard Ward said today McBride placed $9,000 in two-dollar bills in the briefcase and headed to a pre-determined meeting place.

The meeting place, he said, was the Vancouver Island Coach Lines depot, and police rushed to the scene and during the transaction apprehended a man.

Meanwhile assistant branch manager Alf Lincoln evacuated the staff of 23 and several customers from the premises and notified employees of the adjacent CP Air office that they should clear out of the building because of the suspected bomb still located in the manager's office.

When McBride returned, the offices were vacant, a squad of police officers had Douglas between Fort and Broughton blocked off and a mob of onlookers were peering at a four-man explosive ordinance disposal team from the Canadian Forces Base diving unit in Colwood surrounding the office.

While police using loud speakers barked at a mob of spectators to stay away from plate glass windows and for neighboring offices to keep their doors open in case of an explosion, one member of the team, protected by a steel-slab shield, inched into the office.

The intersection took on the appearance of a movie set with reporters and camera men, protected from the snow by umbrellas, hunched behind police cars.

Some of the onlookers jeered at the police constables, yelling that television's "Police Story" wouldn't have handled it this way. Others protested because police directions had detoured shopping trips: "I have to go all the way around the block, when the bakery's just up the street?"

Most of the crowd, however, remained hushed as the disposal team closed in on the fake bomb.

Protected by the shield, one of the disposal team members used a long-hooked pole to drop a net over the cardboard box and after several unsuccessful attempts, managed to retreat, dragging-pulling the package out of the Douglas street door.

Silence descended on the crowd outside during several incidents in which the package bumped lightly against the sidewalk.

The package was attached to a pulley system, operated from a distance about several hundred feet back, and finally dropped dropped into a large steel box in the trailer of an "explosive" disposal truck unit waiting outside.

The truck, surrounded by police car escort, headed for Clover Point.

Though an explosion echoed from the point about 5:30 p.m., police report it was the disposal team using an explosive device to detonate the package.

Police report today that they are "satisfied" the package did not contain a live bomb, although there is no conclusive evidence.

Ward said the explosion was confined to the detonation device and did not trigger a similar reaction from the package.

Remnants of the package are being held by police for examination.

McBride when told that the package that sparked the episode, was not explosive, had no comment, but his wife described it as a "scare tactic."

"Even if he was 99 and nine-tenths per cent sure the package didn't contain a bomb, there's still that one-tenth per cent."

Names of the four-man explosive ordinance disposal team will never be known. An armed forces spokesman said today it is defence department policy never to identify the specialists.

The policy, he said, was put into effect to guard against reprisals on the men and their families.

Details of their equipment cannot be revealed, either. This informat could help would-be criminals, the spokesman said. He added it was defence department policy not to submit information to the media on incidents where a "criminal element is involved."

Even the reaction of the team leader, who gained the admiration of onlookers as he entered the bank and organized the suspected bomb's retrieval, will never be known.

Ford Checks Out Plan

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Ford, after deciding to seek an anti-recession tax cut of about $15 billion, is considering a novel plan to spur consumer spending in the United States that could include mailing government tax-rebate cheques to millions of U.S. taxpayers, administration officials said today.

As Ford's economic advisers met at the White House, several sources confirmed the president's approval of the tax cut — a one-time-only reduction of about 10 per cent in taxes due by individuals for 1974 — as a major element in his program to pull the U.S. out of the deepening recession.

As outlined by one source, here is how the proposed plan would work:

The amount an individual taxper, or couple, owes for 1974 federal income taxes would be reduced by about 10 per cent.

For a couple whose 1974 tax bill totals $3,000, this would mean a cut of about $300.

If the plan is not enacted until after most taxpayers pay their 1974 bills, rebates in the form of government cheques would be necessary.

But if it were quickly adopted by Congress, taxpayers presumably would simply deduct the amount of the reduction from their taxes due to be paid by April 15.

Officials cautioned that final decisions have not been made on the rebate plan, but several sources said it was in the outline of the president's program now being presented to top-level officials.

The idea was reminiscent of Senator George McGovern's pledge during the 1972 presidential campaign to replace the welfare system with a minimum income grant paid to every citizen.

McGovern proposed annual cheques of $1,000. The plan reported being studied by Ford could fit in with tentative decisions to impose a $3-a-barrel levy on imported and domestic oil and channel that revenue back into the economy in the form of lower taxes or a "rebate" device.

Some sources said such a plan would mean U.S. Treasury cheques sent to taxpayers could total anywhere from $15 billion to $30 billion. The oil levy would raise about $18 billion.

U.S. PRIME RATE DIPS

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Two of the largest commercial banks in the United States dropped their prime lending rates to 10 per cent today.

Bank of America in San Francisco, the largest in the U.S., and First National City Bank of New York, second in size, each lowered their prime rates one quarter point to 10 per cent, effective Monday.

The five main dealers on the London gold market, meanwhile, fixed the price of the metal at $177.25 an ounce this afternoon, more than $3 below the opening level.

The price edged down $1 in Zurich during the morning to $179 an ounce.

In London, gold was traded at $180.50 an ounce at the opening, up $1.50 from Thursday's close. An hour later it was fixed at $178.75 and dropped another $1.50 at the afternoon fixing.

Syncrude Plan On Last Legs

EDMONTON (CP) — A University of Alberta political science professor says he has confidential government documents showing that Syncrude Canada Ltd. threatened to abandon its massive oil sands extraction plant project in northeastern Alberta if it did not receive certain tax concessions from the Alberta government.

Larry Pratt, in an interview from Edmonton on CBC radio's As It Happens program Thursday night, said minutes of meetings between cabinet ministers and Syncrude officials in 1973 show that officials of the consortium demanded a minimum return on their investment in the form of a major tax concession.

A spokesman for Syncrude said the consortium would make no comment until it could see the documents Pratt referred to.

Premier Peter Lougheed refused to give the concessions, Pratt said, and more meetings were held. He said minutes from one meeting indicate that Syncrude presented an ultimatum that they would get "the tax concession or else they would present the Lougheed government with their own take-it-or-leave-it proposal and if they didn't get the response they wanted they would make an immediate public announcement that the thing was being abandoned, that they were going to kill the whole project."

Pratt also said the minutes show that Syncrude threatened to try and deter other companies from developing the oil sands if the government did not make the necessary concessions.

"Syncrude wanted the Lougheed government to understand that if the Syncrude project didn't go ahead, no project would go ahead," Pratt said.

Pratt said the tax concession was included in the final agreement, amounting to "something under a billion dollars for the life of the project."

"Lougheed told the people of Alberta in his television speech announcing the Syncrude project that the negotiations had almost broken down but they had been resolved on the government's terms," Pratt said.

"It seems to me this is a direct lie."

There was no immediate comment available from government spokesmen.

At the same time, however, Attorney General Marv Leitch said plans for the $2 billion syncrude plant in the Alberta oil sands project may be shelved temporarily because of rising costs.

Leitch told his Progressive Conservative Party nominating meeting the problems facing the oil sands extraction project are "immense" and said the plans may have to be shelved "at least for a short period of time" in the very near future.

He said the problems include rising costs and a shortage of capital, following the withdrawal of two major partners which controlled 30 per cent of the project, and the reluctance of American financial institutions to finance the project.

Mid-Air Crashes Claim 23 in U.S.

United Press International

In-flight collisions involving private planes on the east and west coasts of the U.S. Thursday killed a total of 23 persons, including one in Whittier, calif., that showered werckage over homes and a school.

In Newport News, Va., an air force propeller plane carrying seven persons collided with a small private plane. Nine persons died in the crash — their bodies falling into the James River.

In the California crash, a small plane sheared the wings off a commuter airliner, throwing debris into city streets, the roof of at least one house and a backyard. Most of the wreckage from the airliner landed in a playing field at the Katherine Edwards Junior High School, narrowly misising 300 children watching an outdoor basketball game.

The plane's engine and a wing went through the roof and patio of the home of Claude Aguirre, 32, a block away from the school.

In Virginia, a small private plane with a pilot and one passenger collided with a T28 propeller plane carrying seven persons.

Rescue workers said Thursday night there was no sign of any survivors.

Barrett: Compromise

provisions that applied to Alberta and, a finance official said Thursday, that it would be safe to predict that there will be no backing down from the similar proposal related to B.C. gas.

The average price now paid to the producers is 22 cents a thousand cubic feet, but the crown corporation at present retails the gas for about $1 a thousand cubic feet, thus netting an enormous profit.

The new federal budget proposes to tax the private producers not on the basis of the 22 cents they now receive, but on the basis of the "fair market value" of the gas sold to the Petroleum Corporation. It has been calculated that this would be about 57 cents a thousand cubic feet.

Barrett said today the "apparent desire of Ottawa is to force the B.C. crown company to increase the producer price to the companies, thus reducing the provincial take and increasing Ottawa's.

But the premier said gas companies are already making handsome profits, and any increase in price should be at the retail level s oincreased revenues would accrue "to the people of this country."

And, as the haggling between Victoria and Ottawa continues, the private producers have announced the cancellation of exploration and development programs.

Faced with a similar dilemma vis-a-vis its oil companies, Alberta three weeks ago announced a reduction in provincial royalties to provide needed incentive for continued exploration.

It has been estimated that an increase of only about 10 cents a thousand cubic feet in the price paid to B.C. gas producers would offset the effect of the new federal taxes and establish the needed inducement for exploration.

But, to date, both the premier and the provincal minister responsible for energy, Attorney General Alex Macdonald, have rejected the idea of paying any more to the private companies.

The Barrett scheme, involving a direct transfer to the federal government in lieu of increased payments to the companies, creates another intriguing issue according to Ottawa officials.

In effect, B.C. would be proposing to establish a precedent by conceding that Ottawa has a right to taxes or revenues from a provincial crown corporation. At present, provincial corporations are exempt from all federal tax on grounds that one crown cannot tax another.

Temperatures throughout the forecast district reached their lowest value of the season overnight as frigid Arctic air continued to dominate the weather picture. Temperatures at Prince George dropped to near 40 below while those at the centre of the cold air in the Yukon were colder than 60 below. New York

Wall Street piled up a sharp gain in very active trading in a rally ignited by news that President Ford had decided to call for a $15 billion income tax cut.

A large part of the advance came in the opening hour, when 8.20 million shares changed hands for the fourth largest opening-hour volume on record at the NYSE.

After that the pace quieted down a bit, but the market held its gains and then gradually began adding to them in the afternoon.

In Washington, Ford administration officials confirmed that the president had decided to take a unanimous recommendation from advisers that he proposed a reduction of about 10 per cent in the taxes individuals must pay on their 1974 incomes. The step would be aimed at stimulating the recession-ridden economy.

An added spark was provided by prime rate cuts at a number of major banks across the country.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the NYSE volume leader, rose ⅝ to $47¾.

A wide range of consumer business issues posted gains on the news of the tax cut plan.

Montreal

All sectors moved higher in light trading at Montreal.

Pacific Petroleums rose $1 to $16½, Northern Electric $1 to $18½, Husky Oil ⅞ to $14¾, MacMillan Bloedel ¾ to $23¼, Moore Corp. ⅜ to $40⅞ and Mercantile Bank ⅝ to $14⅝.

Among speculative issues, Kiena Gold Mines rose 5 cents to $2.75 trading 7,200 shares.

London

Prices at London were generally higher in quiet trading.

The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed at 159.7, up 7.3 points.

Canadian issues recorded modest gains.

U.S. Seeks Raw Material Generosity

WASHINGTON (CP) — A call for Canada and other major trading partners to "balance its self-interest with the common interest" is made in a top-level survey of the importation into the United States of critical raw material.

"Although we cannot expect any country to tie its hands in matters vital to its national interest, we consider arbitrary use of export controls basically inconsistent with the goal of an open world economy in which market factors play an effective role," the report states.

"We cannot continue to remain an open economy if other countries are to control their exports without adequate recognition of the interests and needs of their trading partners."

The report suggests it is desirable to seek "improved international rules and procedures to ensure adequate access to foreign supplies and to minimize frictions among nations over export-control actions."

The special report on critical imported materials was produced by the Council on International Economic Policy.

It was prepared under the state department and included representation from the office of management and budget, the domestic council, Central Intelligence Agency, general services administration and departments of treasury, defence, interior, commerce and agriculture.

Its recommendations go to President Ford.

The study concludes that the U.S. will have a sufficient supply of imported industrial raw materials to last through this century and that the U.S. will not face a crisis in other resources similar to that which occurred in oil.

However, it states that "today's unsettling conditions are creating a potential for mistrust and conflict among nations" as each country recognizes that "other nations' actions can have an adverse impact on them."

"Canada, Australia, South Africa and other developed nations" supply more than two-thirds of the industrial raw material the U.S. imports; "Canada alone supplies half," the report states.

These countries "would be unlikely to participate in any embargo of exports to the U.S., Western Europe or Japan," it says.

"Since these three countries are the most important sources of raw materials for the U.S. ... any embargo threat for commodities they produce is greatly diminished."

The report, however, says there is "growing government regulation or actual control of production facilities in exporting countries."

"The ownership of mines and production facilities in developing countries has shifted to the host countries to such an extent that foreign majority ownership is an exception rather than the rule.

The report lists iron ore, nickel, zinc, mercury, tungsten and lead as minerals of which Canada is a major supplier, and contains a specific section on each:

Iron ore — To be effective, any cartel in this commodity would have to include Canada, Australia and Brazil and 'although these countries are currently more favorably disposed toward international producer organizations, their wider interests compel policies of moderation in questions of pricing of, and access to, their mineral resources."

Nickel — The U.S. imports 60 to 65 per cent of its needs. Canada supplies more than two-thirds of that. "It appears that prices have already reached cartel profit maximizing levels. A formal cartel . . . probably would not revise the present pricing strategy to any considerable extent." New producers in the next few years makes "the probability of price declines substantial."

Zinc — U.S. imports 65 per cent of consumption. Canada supplies 62 per cent of that. "A producers' group including virtually all West European, Canadian and Australian privately-owned producers, is apparently trying to establish prices and operating rates to maintain price stability at a level satisfactory to the members." The report concludes that while countries may tailor their exports to keep prices up, "most foreign producers realize the value of the U.S. market and thus are likely to avoid moves which could lead to greater U.S. production."

Mercury — Canada supplies nearly a third of the U.S. consumption. "The producers will try, as some have done in the past, to restrict supplies in order to bring prices above the $350-per-flask level. They have not been successful in the past and are unlikely to have much success in the future."

Tungsten — U.S. imports 44 per cent; Canada supplies 60 per cent of that amount. "Because of what appears to be a dwindling reserve situation and given the lack of available substitutes, tungsten is a possible candidate for short-term price manipulation, although Canada and Australia would have to be involved to make a cartel effective . . . It does not appear that the U.S. can be threatened by either embargo or price actions on the part of foreign tungsten producers for many years."

Lead — "The U.S., Canada and Australia are the three major producers outside the Communist world . . . Price gouging would have to involve Canada and Australia and this is unlikely given the current policies of these countries."

CHEK Licence Renewed

Victoria's CHEK television station has had its licence renewed untl Dec. 31.

The renewal was announced in Ottawa today by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission. CHEK-TV Ltd. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of British Columbia Broadcasting.

The commission said it will hold hearings into renewal of the current licences for B.C. television stations, beginning April 22 in Vancouver.

Prior to that time, the commission expects to receive plans from British Columbia Broadcasting for extension of service to the northern part of Vancouver Island, as well as to the east and west Kootenays.

CHEK-TV Ltd. is expected to submit applications to establish outlets to serve Sooke and the Jordan River areas at the April hearings.

Sidney Air Cadet Squadron Judged Best of Nation's 380

The No. 676 air cadet squadron of Sidney has been judged the best of 380 squadrons across Canada.

The local squadron will receive the Air Cadet League of Canada award for the most proficient squadron in 1974.

Capt. J. H. McLeod, a former officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force, commands the squadron and chairman of the squadron's sponsoring committee is Kinsman Gary Pearson.

Runner-up in the annual competition is the No. 170 City of St. James squadron in Manitoba.

The award is based on assessments made during the year by visiting armed forces officers and members of the Air Cadet League. Final judging was carried out by a national awards committee which met in Ottawa.

Defence department headquarters in Ottawa has announced that funds have been allocated to send 2,700 sea, air and army cadets to summer camp this year.

The funding is part of a $5,530,000 defence department program to provide summer employment for students.

The federal government has allocated $67,097,000 for summer programs for students in 1975.

About 3,400 students will be given eight weeks training with the armed forces' reserve units, receiving more than $100 a week and being provided with uniforms (parts of which they will be able to keep), as well as rations and housing when on field exercises.

A third DND student program, called Community Assistance, will involve about 300 students in selected localities. They will receive more than $100 a week to work on projects that improve the ecology.

The projects will include building and repairing park facilities, constructing nature trails, setting up or conducting activities to attract tourists.

Student in the reserve or Community Assistance programs must be between 17 and 34.

Those interested in reserve training should apply to local reserve units or Canada Manpower centres now.

Applicants for the Community Assistance employment should contact Canada Manpower.

Only cadets who joined their corps or squadron before Jan. 31 of this year will be eligible to go to camp.

Rhodesia Halts Prisoner Release

SALISBURY (UPI) — The Rhodesian government halted the release of black political prisoners today and accused guerrilla leaders of failing to end two years of jungle warfare.

Justice Minister Desmond Lardner-Burke said the guerrillas have not honored a month-old cease-fire agreement with Rhodesia's white supremacist government.

Under that agreement, the guerrillas agreed to call off their two-year war in exchange for the freedom of black detainees.

"Terrorism has not stopped," Lardner-Burke told the Rhodesian Herald. "Far from it. That is why I have taken the decision not to release anybody else."

He said 320 black detainees remained in jail. Sixty were freed.

The white minority government of Premier Ian Smith has agreed to meet representatives of Rhodesia's 5 million blacks at a constitutional conference.

Nationalist spokesmen declined to speculate if the latest government action would delay the meeting. No date has been set for the talks.

City to Quit Mayors' Body

Victoria's finance committee recommended Thursday that the city cancel its $1,600 annual subscription to the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

But, despite wincing at a 42 per cent dues increase for 1975, the committee supported continued membership of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Victoria's dues assessment for UBCM this year is $3,788 — up from $2,659 in 1974.

Mayor Peter Pollen, a former director of the federation, told aldermen he had grave doubts about the organization's usefulness as a instrument in solving municpal problems.

He said it spends a lot of time, money and effort organizing tri-level conferences which "amount to absolutely nothing," and has a strange fixation on research.

"Without question, we have more people in this country involved in research than any other country in the world," the mayor claimed.

"The University of Victoria is doing research, UBCM is doing research, everyone is doing research. But where does it get us?"

The mayor warned his colleagues, however, that they stand to lose in one way if Victoria pulls out of CFMM: "If you're not a member you can't go to their annual bash."

Hunger Threat

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatchewan Agriculture Minister Jack Messer today said Canadians must face the prospect that their future security may be in jeopardy because of starvation in the world.

While the threat exists that a starving nation with nuclear forces could become suicidal and threaten the world, there may be a more realistic threat in guerrilla activities beyond national boundaries, Messer said.

"Much precedent already has been set as nationalists have hijacked airlines for their causes. How much more fanatical might we imagine people to be in their demands for a fair share of the world's food production?"

He said that for practical reasons and "our own well-being," Canadians must grapple with the need for a co-ordinated world food program and the real test for Canadians would be in the pocketbook.
